PALO ALTO — Student strikes are not spontaneous.

And student unrest just doesn't take off on its own.

It is the result, at least in part, of a communications network patterned after the very military the student dissidents profess to hate.

The myth of the spontaneous nature of student dissent in the aftermath of the U.S. move into Cambodia and the tragedy at Kent State was disposed of neatly on the shady, but certainly not peaceful, campus of Stanford University in this Northern California community.

This was the headquarters of a West Coast radio network that was maintained to disseminate student strike and unrest information and to coordinate action.

In addition, a national radio net was conducted on a frequency of 14. 295 MHz. The West Coast broadcast was on a frequency of 7269 kHz under the modest title of "Student Information Net." Both frequencies are in spectrums designated for use by licensed amateur radio operators.

In some cases school-financed amateur radio stations, designed for use by school radio clubs and as electronic testing labs, were used. In other cases personal amateur radio stations were used.

Stanford's radio station, W6YX, located on the campus here, was the headquarters for the West Coast Student Information Net.

An alternate net headquarters for the West Coast was maintained at the University of California at Berkeley by radio station WB6BUD.

A VHF communications link between Stanford and the Berkeley school was maintained on a frequency of 145.9 MHz.

The nationwide net was run from Brandeis University on a frequency where it was possible to maintain nationwide contacts throughout the day and most of the night.

The net was organized by the Student Mobilization Committee.

Charles D. Brennan, chief of the Internal Security Section of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, has this to say about the Student Mobilization Committee:

"The Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) which is completely controlled by the Communist Social Workers Party and its youth group, the Young Socialist Alliance, is becoming a major force in the antiwar move-

NIXON'S ETHICS PROBER RESIGNS

New York Times Service

SAN CLEMENTE — Clark R. Mollenhoff, special counsel to the President, has resigned, the West Coast White House announced Saturday.

In a letter to President Nixon, Mollenhoff said he was resigning to become the Washington bureau chief of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, which he described as "too good an opportunity to let slip by."

The President, in a personal letter which was also released here, accepted Mollenhoff's resignation "with regret." Gerald L. Warren, deputy press secretary, told newsmen that there had been "absolutely no pressure" placed on Mollenhoff to leave.

However, Mollenhoff had been a controversial figure ever since he joined the Nixon staff on Aug. 18, 1969, with special instructions from the President to serve as the Administration's "ombudsman" and to investigate

Primary Races Heat Up

Tunney-Brown, Murphy-Simon Campaigns Bitter

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Only 5.2 to 5.5 million voters of California's record registration of 8,053,389 are expected to cast ballots Tuesday in the state's direct primary election.

Hotspots in statewide contests include the U.S. Senate race with bitter contests between Republicans George Murphy, 67, incumbent, and millionaire industrialist Norton Simon, 63, and Democratic Congressmen George E. Brown Jr., 50, and John V. Tunney, 35. Late polls showed Murphy a better than 2-1 winner over Simon and Tunney with a narrow lead over Brown.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, 49, another Democratic candidate for Senate, disputes the polls and claimed Saturday a private poll shows him leading.

Gov. Ronald Reagan, 59, is unopposed for renomination on the Republican ballot and, in November's general election, will face the Democratic winner. Of 10 Democratic candidates, former Assembly Speaker Jess Unruh, 47, holds a 2-1 poll lead over L.A. Mayor Sam Yorty, 60, with none of the others close.

REPUBLICANS also have a lively race for attorney general to succeed the retiring Democrat, Thomas Lynch. Vying for the GOP nomination, in order of their poll ranking, are Los Angeles County Dist. Atty. Evelle J. Younger, State Sen. George Deukmejian, of Long Beach, former Reagan cabinet member Spencer Williams and State Sen. John L. Harmer, of Glendale. The nominee will face Deputy Atty. Gen. Charles A. O'Brien, who has only token opposition from Attorney Walter Culpepper.

Besides other statewide offices, at stake Tuesday are party nominations for all 80 Assembly seats, 20 of the 40 State Senate seats (in even numbered districts), all 38 congres-

SIERRA AIRLIFT

Hiker's Life in Balance

A frantic call from a Long Beach mountain climber who had raced 27 miles on foot over rugged terrain sent members of a crack mountain rescue unit rushing Saturday to the aid of the climber's companion, critically injured after a 500-foot fall.

The Inyo County sheriff's office said a Sierra Madre search and rescue team was dispatched by private plane and cars on the emergency errand, expected to be "one of the most difficult in recent years."

A sheriff's spokesman said Dennis Rogers, 30, of 10382 Kennymead St., Orange, lay badly injured and semiconscious on a 6-by-6 foot ledge on 13,000-foot Lone Pine Peak, where another climbing companion and a rescue parachutist comforted him.

RESCUE specialist Darin Blackwell, of Bishop, parachuted to the mountainside about 10 p.m. Saturday, three hours after deputies received first notice of the accident.

The sheriff's spokesman said first word of Dennis' fall came from the remote Whitney Portal Outpost in the mountains, where exhausted Harry Lewellyn, of 144 Granada Ave., Long Beach, was finally able to find a telephone.

LEWELLYN hiked, climbed and ran 27 miles in less than seven hours before reaching the outpost, deputies said.

Viet War Briefing for Nixon

Abrams, Wheeler and Laird Flying to San Clemente

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — President Nixon summoned his top military commanders from Washington and Saigon for a meeting today to discuss U.S. military operations in Cambodia and the progress of winding down the war in Vietnam.

Assistant press secretary Gerald L. Warren said Saturday he expected no dramatic announcement from the meeting and described it as a routine military briefing on the Southeast Asian situation.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird and Gen. Earle G. Wheeler and Adm. Thomas Moorer, the incoming and outgoing chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were scheduled to fly in from Washington.

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander of U.S. troops in Vietnam, was to come in from Saigon, along with Adm. John S. McCain Jr., commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific.

THE SESSION, the first such high-level military briefing the President has received since his April 30 decision to send U.S. troops into Cambodia, was scheduled for 2 p.m.

The trip was Abrams' first to the United States since Dec. 20, 1969, when he met with the President in Washington. Nixon conferred with Abrams' boss in Saigon, Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, three weeks ago.

The President has promised a fuller report to the Little Dickens

Q. What does the expression "he'll get the dickens" mean? Does it have anything to do with English novelist Charles Dickens? R.T., Compton.

A. Dickens gave a lot of people the dickens, but the expression doesn't come from the author's name. To give someone the dickens is equivalent to giving someone the devil, and the two words were synonymous in Elizabethan England. Dickens, a proper name derived from the name Richard, was a familiar, bantering name for the Devil, also called Old Nick or Old Scratch. Men who crossed the irascible Charles Dickens probably thought him well named.

Well Preserved

Q. There was a newspaper story recently about a property owner in Riverside County whose taxes went up from $8,000 to $38,000. The story said he sold some of the property, and put the rest in an agricultural preserve, which limits taxes for 10 years. I would like to know how this agricultural preserve can limit your taxes. J.M., Long Beach.

A. The agricultural preserve provision was adopted in Riverside County to encourage the preservation of arable land and, in the words of a spokesman for the county assessor's office, "to keep the farmers in business." He explained that agriculture is the county's principal business, and that this thriving industry is being threatened by spreading building development which is slowly eating up farmable land. Property owners now can sign a 10-year contract with the county to preserve the use of their land for the production of food

Plane-Car Collision Kills Six

ATLANTA (UPI) — A private plane carrying 32 persons on an all-expenses-paid, land-buying excursion to Florida crash-landed atop a car on an interstate highway Saturday, killing at least six persons.

More than 30 aboard the plane were injured.

Five of the fatalities, a man and woman and three children, were in the white 1963 model car flattened by the crippled plane, a Martin 404 which was attempting an emergency landing in the rain on a grassy median strip dividing the highway. The sixth fatality was aboard the plane.

The plane was en route to Fort Myers, Fla., where Lehigh Acres Inc., a sales firm, is developing a large tract of land. The passengers were offered a free Memorial holiday trip to the Gulf Coast site to examine land they might buy.

"In my opinion," said Tony Pester, one of the passengers, "the pilot averted what could have been a major disaster. Only by his skill and knowledge did the plane land at all."

THE PRESIDENT of the land development firm, Gerald Gould, agreed, adding "I think we're

TRAFFIC TOLL RISES; EXPECT 450 DEATHS

United Press International

Traffic fatalities from the year's first warm weather holiday mounted steadily Saturday.

The national Safety Council said as many as 450 of the millions of Memorial Day weekend motorists would die in traffic between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight today.

A United Press International count at 9 p.m. PDT showed 165 persons died in traffic accidents.

A breakdown of accidental deaths during the holiday period showed: traffic, 105; drowning, 17; planes, 6; miscellaneous, 22; total, 210.

Thirteen persons were killed in California, 10 in Pennsylvania, nine in Ohio and eight each in Louisiana and Texas.

Five persons were killed Saturday when their top-down convertible slammed into a barn off a rural road 16 miles north of Allentown, Pa.

Illinois state police ordered two state parks closed because of a jam up of holiday traffic. Officials said Starved Rock State Park and nearby Matthieson State Park were closed indefinitely.

TELEGRAMS

A Shocked Couple Waits to Know if a Son Will Live

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

"The Secretary of the Army has asked me to inform you that your son, Lt. Gary E. Wiedle was wounded in action in Vietnam while on a combat operation. . . "

Similar shocks have come to thousands of parents throughout the country.

The telegram is never the last. Many times the next communication from the Army is a notification of death.

Sometimes it isn't.

The wait for another telegram — perhaps notifying you of death—is indescribable.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wiedle of 4417 Arbor Rd., understand how it feels to wait.

A telegram dated March 23 told them their son had been seriously injured, adding: "He received wounds to the abdomen, chest, pancreas, liver, stomach and diaphragm . . . and has been placed on the seriously ill list. In the judgment of the attending physician his condition is of such severity that there is cause for concern, but no imminent danger to life. Please be assured that the best medical facilities and doctors have been made available and every measure is being taken to aid him. . . "

Three days later another telegram was delivered:

". . . your son is making normal improvement; however he remains on the seriously ill list. His morale is excellent, he is talking and writing. Gary is not taking anything by

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Maddox Wars on Newspapers, Raids Stands

Combined News Services

Gov. Lester Maddox, aided by a state patrolman and two state employes, gathered 29 newspaper vending machines from the Georgia Capitol complex Saturday, put them in storage and declared they will not be replaced "until the Atlanta newspapers decide to support this country."

Maddox repeated charges he had made Friday, saying the Atlanta Journal and Constitution have encouraged violent protest and are "enemies of the people."

Maddox rode around the Capitol area in a pickup truck, helping load the machines into the truck while passengers in the truck, including newsmen and Atlanta Newspaper, Inc. Circulation Manager Huey Stinson, looked on.

The governor, who has feuded with the newspapers for years, said his wrath had been triggered by several recent articles, including a column by Journal political writer Charles Pou which, Maddox said, "said I was in favor of overthrowing public education in this state."

The newspapers, Maddox said, "do a disservice to the state. They hurt the state because of their hatred and bitterness toward Lester Maddox."

Freedom of the press was not an issue, Maddox said. "This is not an infringement of freedom of the press," he said. "When the newspapers lead protesters to burn and to shoot policemen, they shouldn't have that freedom."

He repeated his intention to picket the newspaper offices, probably next Thursday, and said subscriptions to the newspapers at the governor's mansion had been canceled.

Subscriptions at the Capfes also will be stopped Maddox said, and deliveries also wwill be stopped "at as many other state offices as possible" around the state.

FREE SOON

An attorney for Huey P. Newton predicted Saturday the imprisoned cofounder of the Black Panther party will be free in a few months to resume leadership of the militant organization.

The 1968 voluntary manslaughter conviction of the 28-year-old revolutionary was reversed Friday by the state Court of Appeal. A three-judge panel found "prejudicial error" in the trial judge's instructions to a Superior Court jury.

"He will be out in a very few months at the latest," Fay Stender, one of Newton's attorneys, said. "If he is retried, the Superior Court has to give him bail."

Newton was convicted in 1968 in the death of Oakland policeman John Frey during a gunfight in West Oakland on Oct. 28, 1967. He testified he could not recall his actions between the time he was shot in the abdomen during a struggle with police and his arrival at a hospital. Omission of the "unconsciousness" instruction to the jury was prejudicial error, the appeal court held.

PASTERNAK

Admirers placed flowers on the grave of writer Boris Pasternak Saturday, the 10th anniversary of his death. They took turns in reading his poetry aloud.

Pasternak was buried near his home at Peredelkina, a village and writers' colony outside Moscow, in a simple grave under a pine tree.

At the time of his death, Pasternak was in official disgrace because of his famous novel "Dr. Zhivago," which depicted Soviet life in a way the authorities did not like. He was awarded the Nobel Prize but turned it down because of Kremlin denunciation. The book has never been published in Russia, but most of Pasternak's poetry

FATAL CRASH

Dr. Edward D. Goldman, associate superintendent of schools in San Francisco, was killed in a high-speed head-on auto crash Friday night near South Lake Tahoe.

His wife, Nell, also died in the accident. The crash occurred on Highway 89 about one half mile north of South Lake Tahoe about 11 p.m.

The California Highway Patrol said a car driven by John D. Hintermeister, 28, of South Lake Tahoe swerved over the center line into a head-on collission with the car driven by Thomas Davis Wilson, 58, of San Francisco.

Wilson, his wife, Alice, and Hintermeister were injured in the crash.

Goldman was one of five men under consideration to succeed Robert E. Jenkins as San Francisco's superintendent of schools.

POW HELP

Three women from Spokane flew into London Saturday on the first stage of a round-the-world trip to seek better treatment for American prisoners of war in North Vietnam.

They plan to open their campaign by calling at the Soviet Embassy. There's a snag — they have no appointment.

"We wrote in advance to be given an interview with the ambassador and other officials but we have received no reply thus far," said Faye Schierman, whose flier husband is listed as a prisoner of Hanoi.

"But we intend to go to the embassy on Monday morning, nevertheless, to express our continuing concern over the American prisoners of war. We want them to have better treatment."

Mrs. Schierman is accompanied on the trip by Jeanette Shively and Marie Bossio. Mrs. Shively's flier son is listed as a prisoner and Mrs. Bossio's Air Force husband is listed as missing.

NO JOY

Newton Minow, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, said Saturday America 1970 is a less joyful and trusting place than it was in the early 1960s, due to our increasing involvement in the Indochina war.

In a Memorial Day speech in Glencoe, north of Chicago on the lake front, Minow said "it is no longer enough to simply remember the dead and return to life as usual."

"We must prevent more soldiers from joining those already wasted and killed by violence," he said. "This awful year of 1970 has brught us a new terrifying picture of our soliders: young American men shooting other American young men and women on college campuses."

It was Minow who spoke of television as a "vast wasteland."

'BIG ED'

Edwin C. "Big Ed" Johnson, who rose from a homesteaded farm to become a three-term Colorado Democratic governor and U.S. senator, died early Saturday. He was 86.

His death at St. Joseph's Hospital, Denver, followed hernia surgery. He entered the hospital earlier this month.

Johnson was born to Swedish immigrants in a sod farmhouse and his formal education ended with a high school diploma.

ARMY MAKES STRATEGIC RETREAT ON SIDEBURNS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army has let its hair down — literally. It now says that reasonable sideburns, mustaches and even wigs are in and excessively short hair is out.

Not since Maj. Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside — for whom sideburns take their name — sported his facial growth during the Civl War has such a tonsorial shocker hit the Army.

"Some old-time commanders in the field will think we're going out of our minds," said an Army briefing officer in explaining the new regulations.

The new rules messaged to all Army installations around the world last week aren't expected to spawn any shoulder-length coiffures. There's a "Catch 22" limiting their length and requiring that GI's "always appear neat and soldierly."

Henceforth, states the new regulations, personnel sporting sideburns are to keep them neatly trimmed, with straight lines and no flare at the base. They are to be evenly tapered, must conform to the hair on the side of the head and not extend doward past an imaginary line drawn through the center of the ear canal.

Although there was no written rule on length in the past, it was generally understood that sideburns could not drop any lower than past a line drawn from the corner of the eye. The new regulation would add about a half-inch.

Neatly trimmed mustaches also are permitted, provided they do not have "a bristly or ragged appearance, extend beyond the ends of the upper lip and not cover any part of the upper lip."

Goatees and beards remain banned.

Hair on top of the head can now be allowed to reach three inches in length.

The new rules also outlaw the skinhead or bald look common among Army recruits a few years ago. Now, hair is not to be cut less than one inch without the individual soldier's permission.

2 Die in N.Y. Oxygen Blast

NEW YORK (UPI) — An oxygen explosion set off when the driver of an oxygen delivery truck turned on his ignition switch killed two persons Saturday and injured at least 30 others, many of them personnel and patients from a hospital which had just received a shipment of oxygen.

Police said the blast killed the truck driver and his helper and rocked the Victory Memorial Hospital in Brooklyn, shattering windows, knocking down equipment and throwing patients out of their beds.

Police said Edward Graves, 42, of Harrison, N.J. the driver of the trailer-truck, and Steve Pascale, 58, of Brooklyn, had just made a delivery of oxygen to the hospital. Graves had reentered the truck and Pascale was standing outside when Graves turned the ignition and the explosion occurred in his load Both were killed instantly.

Police had not determined what caused the explosion.

A woman who lives across the street said she heard one explosion and then a second which sounded "like a bomb fell." The blast, heard five miles away, set fire to a shed in the rear of the hospital adjoining the nurses' residence.

Police Hunt Ex-President, Kidnapers

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Police and the army searched the nation Saturday for former President Pedro Eugenio Aramburu. But the authorities said they still don't know why Aramburu was kidnapped and by whom.

This uncertainty, combined with antigovernment demonstrations throughout the country in recent weeks, has threatened the stability of President Juan Carlos Ongania, an army general placed in power four years ago by the military.

The 67-year-old Aramburu, a retired general who served as president from 1955 to 1958, is mentioned frequently as a possible successor to Ongania. Thus his mysterious kidnaping Friday morning is considered by many Argentines in some way linked to a plot to oust Ongania.

A communique left in a bar Friday night said followers of former dictator Juan D. Peron — whom Aramburu helped to overthrow — had kidnapped the ex-president. But Col. Luis M. Premoli, Ongania's press secretary, said "no government has had "no contact whatsoever" with Aramburu's kidnapers.

"All we have is rumors as to the identity of the kidnapers, and they are useful only as possible leads."

President Ongania took personal charge of the manhunt for Aramburu. Police set up roadblocks on every highway leaving the city, and searched hundreds of vehicles.

Helicopters were used and Premoli said more than 20,000 policemen and military personnel were involved in the hunt. Hundreds of buildings were searched and a number of persons were arrested for questioning, Premoli added.

Aramburu last was seen getting into a car near his downtown apartment with two men in army officer uniforms. Two others in civilian clothes were in the car, later found abandoned.

30,000 Defy Court, Attend Rock Festival

HEYWORTH, Ill. (UPI) — An estimated 30,000 persons flocked to a muddy farm field Saturday for the court-banned Kickapoo Creek rock music festival.

There were no problems or arrests on the "scene," police said, but authorities in nearby Bloomington, Ill., arrested the owner of the farm and a promoter of the festival when he came into town to bank some of the proceeds.

Police said L. David Lewis was carrying a pistol under his belt when he left a bank which had opened on Memorial Day to receive Lewis' deposit.

Police said Lewis was charged with unlawful use of weapons and carrying a loaded and uncased weapon in a car. He was released after posting $50 bond on both charges.

The rock festival audience paid $10 each for advance tickets or $15 at the gate to get into the Lewis farm nine miles south of Bloomington

MEMORIAL DAY: A VISIT TO A LONG BEACH GRAVEYARD
Amid The Tombs, Flowers Speak Of Growth, Life

MEMORIAL DAY 1970

The living have departed, leaving behind their love in the form of brightly colored flowers.

The dying rays of the evening sun have begun to sap moisture from the soft textured buds.

A workman plucks small American Flags from the ground to be stored for another day.

Then the sun, like a slow burning ember, disappears to the west, shrouding the mute gravestones in darkness.

Auto Kills Officer Directing Traffic

A reserve Garden Grove police officer was fatally injured Saturday when struck by a car as he stood in an intersection, directing traffic in the wake of the city's Strawberry Festival parade.

Andrew Reese, 50, of 13115 Safford St., was pronounced dead at Palm Harbor Hospital a half hour after he was struck from behind about 12:50 p.m.

Police said Reese and two other officers were standing in the intersection of Brookhurst Street and Trask Avenue as the tail end of the parade passed nearby.

The officers were allowing east-west traffic on Trask to move and holding north-south traffic when a sports car, northbound on Brookhurst, entered the intersection, police said.

ACCORDING to investigators, the car, driven by Robert Clemenson 28, of 2201 N. Cotter St., Santa Ana, broadsided a westbound auto, rebounded and struck Reese.

Clemenson was also admitted to Palm Harbor Hospital, police said, with back injuries and contusions. He was not cited pending investigation of the incident, the police spokesman added.

Reese, a past president of the Garden Grove Police Reserve Officers Association, had worked traffic control at the annual Strawberry Festival parades since the first staging of the event in 1959.

75-foot Fall Kills Elderly Hiker

MONROVIA (CNS) — An elderly hiker was killed Saturday when he tumbled down a 75-foot ledge about two miles northwest of Monrovia in the Angeles National Forest.

Carl H. Geary, 74, of Pasadena, apparently died of head injuries in the mishap about 12:30 p.m. near Cascade Campground, sheriff's deputies said.

A team of mountaineers from the sheriff's special enforcement detail recovered the body.

Geary had been with two companions when the accident occurred on their return walk to Chantry Flats Ranger Station from Sturtevant Falls Campground.

The three had lunch a short time before unsuccessfuly trying to pass the ledge for the second time, investigators reported.

ANCIENT CHURCH UNCOVERED

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A house - owner, puttering about in his garden, discovered an unknown Byzantine church from the Sixth Century A.D. in a village near Amman, the Department of Antiquities announced Saturday.

He called in Antiquities Department personnel who eventually unearthed the church, after uncovering blocks of stone.

The department said the church has a colored mosaic floor measuring 60 square yards and Greek inscriptions indicating it was built in the time of a prelate identified as Archbishop Thomas.

TUNNEY, BROWN SWITCH TACTICS

Opinion Polls Alter Strategy in Race for U.S. Senate Seat

Editor's Note: A reporter of the Independent, Press-Telegram's Washington Bureau recently discussed the strategy in the Democratic senatorial primary campaign with the leading contenders and their advisors. Here is his report.

By LOU CANNON

LOS ANGELES — A public opinion poll has played the decisive role in the Democratic senatorial race, whatever the outcome may be Tuesday.

That, at least, is the consensus of Reps. John V. Tunney of Riverside and George Brown of Monterey Park as the two contenders near the end of the stretch drive in their bitter primary battle. Other than their distaste for Republican Sen. George Murphy and their opposition to the Indochina war, it is about the only issue on which Brown and Tunney would bother to agree.

The public opinion sampling that both men point to is last week's California Poll which showed Brown slightly ahead of Tunney with many voters undecided.

Tunney, who had thought of himself far ahead, immediately shifted gears and began depicting Brown as a far-out liberal who makes irresponsible statements about violence on college campuses, then tones down his approach for general audiences. (Whether as a result of Tunney's shift or not, the same poll a week later showed that Tunney was again in the lead — by 4 percentage points.)

BROWN AND Los Angeles Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, the third candidate in the race, counterattacked with statements that Tunney had "panicked" because of the poll. In rebuttal, Brown maintained that Tunney was quoting him out of context.

Tunney readily admits he changed his strategy, but he says no panic was involved.

"When my father (heavyweight champion Gene Tunney) was decked in the seventh round by Jack Dempsey, he changed his strategy too," Tunney said. "But he did it in a cool and calculated manner and he won."

Tunney's major calculation, as he sees it, was his decision to keep a commitment for a debate with Brown at Stanford on May 19, the day before the poll was published and when its contents were already known to the candidates.

At the Stanford speech Brown, who was clearly the choice of the audience, won cheers when he quoted a statement from "his namesake," Negro militant H. Rap Brown, that "violence is as American as apple pie."

On the return plane to Los Angeles, Tunney decided to use the statement as a basis for his campaign against Brown. He also made a final decision to push for an injunction, which he subsequently gained in court, against a Brown mailing piece that he believed was a campaign document which abused the congressional free mailing privilege.

TUNNEY'S subsequent attacks on Brown, a man he depicted as "using different strokes for different folks," were regarded as below-the-belt punching in the Brown camp.

"The charge on the franking (the postage) issue was fair enough — we could rationalize that," says Dick Kline, a onetime press aide to Gov. Edmund G. Brown and Assemblyman Jess Unruh who has been a behind the scenes figure in the George Brown campaign. "But the attack on the violence theme was totally out-of-context and they know it. George Brown is not (n-o-t) a violent man."

Tunney has displayed some backhanded recognition that his first comments might have been taken personally. In his speeches during the final week of the campaign he disclaimed any advocacy of violence on Brown's part and stressed instead the "irresponsibility" of te Rap Brown quotation.

The Tunney attack triggered a series of appeals, some of them engineered by the Brown people, from various Democratic leaders who were concerned about the effects of intra-party name calling. U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, the state's highest ranking Democratic officeholder, called Tunney personally and asked him to "cool his rhetoric."

FORMER Gov. Brown made a similar appeal to Tunney's campaign staff.

The telephone calls convinced Tunney that his strategy was working. They also irritated him because he says, "no one had said anything for six months while George Brown's people misrepresented my voting record."

Many Brown headquarters throughout the state carry a small pamphlet printed on yellow paper under the imprimature of the similar document early in the campaign, attempts to paint Tunney's record as virtually identical to Murphy's.

"The difference between what that very effective piece of black journalism says and what I'm saying," Tunney declared at one point on his campaign bus last week, "is that the pamphlet is inaccurate and I'm quoting George Brown accurately."

The main reason that Democratic leaders have been telling Tunney to "cool it," however, is probably not favoritism for Brown as much as concern for the November election.

Don Bradley, who managed campaigns for Gov. Brown and other prominent Democrats, believes that Tunney probably will win Tuesday — and would have won even without his attack. The effect of the direct attack, believes Bradley, could be to divide the party in November and prevent the united effort Democrats need to defeat Sen. Murphy after defeating Cranston in another bitter primary.

"It's not easy to put it together again after a primary," Bradley says in recalling the 1964 race. "The wounds don't heal easily."

Whoever captures the primary Tuesday, the winner will have a lot of would-healing to do.

Propositions 1, 7, 8, to Test Economic Mood of Voters

sional seats and decision on eight ballot propositions.

Prop. 8 is the poser and the object of the most controversy. It would force the state to pay 50 per cent of public school costs (from the current 35 per cent) and 90 per cent of welfare costs not now paid from federal funds. Proponents, including the California Teachers Assn. and the County Supervisors Assn., contend it is the only way to force the legislature to make good its unkept promises on property tax relief.

GOV. REAGAN and other opponents note the measure would cost $1.13 billion in its first year and that the measure contains no provisions for the source of such money. And so, they argue, the legislature would have to institute various other tax programs to take up the slack.

About 2 million of Los Angeles County's 2.9 million voters will get to the polls if Secretary of State H.S. Sullivan's 65 to 70 per cent turnout estimate is correct. County voters, in addition to state offices and propositions, will vote on the offices of sheriff and assessor and on Offices Nos. 8 and 11 in the Superior Court.

This county also has a lion's share of the action in legislative offices, having 31 Assembly seats, five Senate seats and 17 congressional seats. The state legislative seats are critical this year since the majority party will have charge of next year's reapportionment. The 1970 census is expected to entitle California to probably five more congressional districts.

Polls will be open 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. statewide. Many counties, including Los Angeles, have automatic voting. This county will use the punchcard ballot which it started in 1968 primary. Ballot selections are punched with a metal stylus on IBM cards which are transported to computers for processing.

Write-ins may be made on the envelope received with the ballot at the voting place.

LONG BEACH has an entry in the lieutenant governor's race in Superior Court. Judge Robert A. Wenke, bidding for the Democratic nomination along with other principal contenders State Sen. Alfred E. Alquist and Robert L. Coate, former party state chairman. Incumbent Ed. Reinecke is unopposed on the GOP ballot.

The Democratic bid for secretary of state seems to be a two-man race between Edmund G. Brown Jr., son of the ex-governor, and Sen. Hugh Burns, former president pro tem. Seven Republicans are contending for the seat left vacant by 28-year veteran Frank Jordan's death, including his widow, Alberta, Assemblyman George W. Milias, of Gilroy, and two black candidates, James L. Flournoy and Wendell T. Handy.

Overshadowed by other contests are relatively low-visibility campaigning in races for controller and treasurer.

Long Beach area voters have particular interest in two congressional races, the 32nd and 34th. GOP incumbent Craig Hosmer is unopposed for his party's nomination in the 32nd which includes most of Long Beach, Seal Beach, Rossmoor and half of Huntington Beach. Democrats Conrad Housley, chemist, and Walter L. Mallonee, business owner, seek the Democratic nomination. John S. Donohue, salesman, is the Peace and Freedom party candidate.

INCUMBENT Richard T. Hanna is unopposed for the Democratic nomination in the 34th, which includes most of Lakewood, a northeast corner of Long Beach and western Orange County. GOP contenders are William J. (Bill) Teague, former vice president of Pepperdine College, and V. Lane Knight, Cypress lawyer. Lee R. Rayburn, Huntington Beach electronic technician, is the entry of the American Independent Party.

Long Beach-Signal Hill's 39th Assembly District will read the same in November as in this election. All three candidates are unopposed — Incumbent Republican James A. Hayes, writer Lana Clarke Phelan, Democrat, and Sharon Lynne Simpson, Peace and Freedom party.

Assemblyman Mike Cullen is unopposed for the Democratic nomination in the 44th District (West Long Beach-Lakewood-Carson-Dominguez) but two Republicans seek the November spot, Woodrow (Woody) Smith, Lakewood businessman who faced Cullen in 1968, and Harold E. Perkins, general contractor, Long Beach. American Independent Party candidate is Charlie W. Howard, Long Beach.

The nonpartisan office of state superintendent of public instruction has been reduced to a three-man race among nine aspirants, if the polls are right. Two-term incumbent Max Rafferty had about 40 per cent of the survey vote with Dep. Supt. Wilson Riles and Los Angeles Board of Education member Julian Nava sharing the two and three spots distantly. Rafferty could win in the primary with a majority; otherwise the top two candidates would runoff in November.

CLOSEST of the major races going in would seem to be the Democratic set-to between U.S. Senate candidates Brown and Tunney. The last two polls have shown the lead change with Tunney the most recent winner, but by only about four points.

Brown considers the contest a referendum on the Southeast Asian conflict, pointing to his bellwether votes against U.S. involvement and Tunney's later posture against it. Tunney, while struggling for the poll straw-vote upperhand in his own party has registered higher than Brown in a runoff with Republican Murphy. He uses that argument along with a persistent accusation that Brown is too liberal for the majority of the state's Democrats.

An interesting by-product of the GOP fight for the seat will be the voter measurement of Norton Simon's expensive, two-month media campaign to unseat Murphy. Should Simon lose, observers also are interested in whether he will thereafter support Murphy — a pledge he refused to make to Gov. Reagan — or switch to Tunney, if Tunney wins.

SIMON ADMITS having made a small contribution to Tunney before his own candidacy. And despite Simon's early casual mention of Murphy's $20,000 a year consultant's salary from Technicolor Corp. as "something the Democrats will use against Murphy," Simon lately has hit hard on the matter.

Chief issues of campaigns for governor and senator have, with varying emphasis, been depicted as the economy, handling of campus problems, school financing and state financing in general.

There was scant chance the weight of economic unrest would register in Gov. Reagan's uncontested primary position, despite the fact of his acknowledgement Friday, five days before the election, that his 1970-71 budget faces a potential deficit of $200 million. Unruh hoisted the intelligence Thursday.

But there may be a better reading on the economic unrest in voter response to a couple of ballot propositions. Number 1, for example, provides for a $246 million bond issue for University of California health science facilities — a proposition with virtually unanimous support of candidates of both parties in the interests of correcting serious doctor and dentist shortages.

And Prop. 7, if passed, would permit a 7 per cent rather than the present 5 per cent interest rate on bonds the state sells. This too has almost unanimous support of major candidates in both parties.

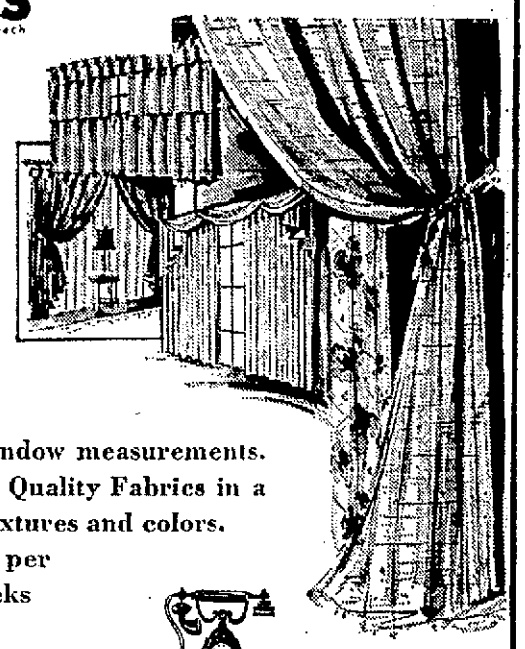

But both are cost items, and therein lies the test of the voters' mood.

CLARK MOLLENHOFF
'Under No Pressure'

Nixon Assistant Resigns

"questionable ethical conduct" within the government.

He had been considered the President's "private eye," and personal muckraker. His enemies called him a "hatchet man," the more benevolent "house dick." But Mollenhoff preferred to be thought of as an "ombudsman."

Recently, Mollenhoff was accused by the Columbia Broadcasting System of leaking reports to friendly reporters purporting to show that CBS had contrived "phony" stories on the war in Vietnam.

Other critics suspected him of spending the bulk of his energies investigating alleged corruption in earlier Democratic administrations for partisan purposes, and relatively little of his time on inquiries into wrongdoing in the Nixon Administration.

Mollenhoff, a hard-working investigative reporter for the Des Moines paper before he signed on with the Administration, has stoutly denied all of these allegations, insisting instead that his main responsibility has been to insure good government.

IN HIS LETTER of resignation, he described his functions as follows:

"As your special counsel, it has been my responsibility to keep informed on problems dealing with mismanagement of corruption in government, to report to you and other administration officials on the facts where it appeared that illegability, impropriety or just plain careless practices might be interfering with the honest efficient operations of government." Your personal responses to my reports on these problems in government operations have always been in the highest tradition."

Mollenhoff has been credited by his colleagues with saving the Administration from potential embarrassment on several occassions, and by outsiders for an unusual ability to cut through bureaucratic red tape.

Mollenhoff was known as one of the most aggressive newsmen in Washington. His stories played an important role in the investigations of James R. Hoffa, former head of the Teamsters Union, and Robert G. Baker, former secretary to Senate Democrats.

IN HIS LETTER accepting Mollenhoff's resignation, Nixon said in part, "The work you have done has alerted us to many potential problem areas and has been important in demonstrating that good government can be good politics for any administration."

Mollenhoff, it was understood, will not inherit Richard L. Wilson's title as Washington bureau chief for the Cowles Publications. Since 1968 Cowles organization has maintained separate bureau chiefs for its different staffs: Warren Rogers for Look magazine, and Charles W. Bailey II for the Minneapolis Tribune.

Mollenhoff will succeed Wilson as chief of the Des Moines Register bureau, but the overall title of Cowles bureau chief is being retired with Wilson.

Hard-Pressed Cambodia Will Need Asian Aid

By TAD SZULC
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Senior officials of the Nixon Administration are reportedly moving to the conclusion that Cambodia will need increasing military assistance from South Vietnam and Thailand, including troops from South Vietnam at least.

It is becoming clear in the minds of these officials that the Communists have evolved a twin strategy of concentrating North Vietnamese main units in Northeast Cambodia east of the Mekong River and supplying them over water routes from Laos, while building up insurgent forces elsewhere in Cambodia.

Military and civilian officials in Washington are known to be concerned that the survival of the regime of Premier Lon Nol in Pnom Penh is immediately at stake and that at best the outlines of a far-ranging civil war are swiftly emerging in Cambodia.

"The situation in Cambodia at this point already resembles the situation in South Vietnam around 1966, with the North Vietnamese firmly established in one corner of the country and insurgency and guerrilla warfare beginning to rise all over the territory," a highly placed State Department official commented this week.

No responsible American official here has any illusions over the ability of the Lon Nol government and its weak and politically undependable army to cope with all these threats. At the same time direct United States help to Cambodia is ruled out.

This is the reason, senior officials said, that the U.S. is actively encouraging Cambodia, South Vietnam and Thailand and that the Administration was forced to back away from President Nixon's statement on May 8 that South Vietnamese forces would leave Cambodia about the time the Americans are scheduled to withdraw, July 1. The official political explanation has been that it fits into the Nixon Doctrine concept of Asians aiding other Asians.

BUT NUMEROUS officials are now saying privately that the President and his top advisers may have underestimated the enemy's responses. The first was a rapid improvisation in strategic and tactical planning.

The second was the ability to quickly set in motion a political operation in Cambodia under the nominal leadership of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who was ousted as Cambodian head of state in a coup led by General Lon Nol.

Since the allied operation in Cambodia began a month ago, the enemy has avoided major battlefield confrontation with American and South Vietnamese troops.

Only guerrilla bands, seldom exceeding 100 men each, were left behind to harass the Cambodian and South Vietnamese forces in Southern and Western Cambodia.

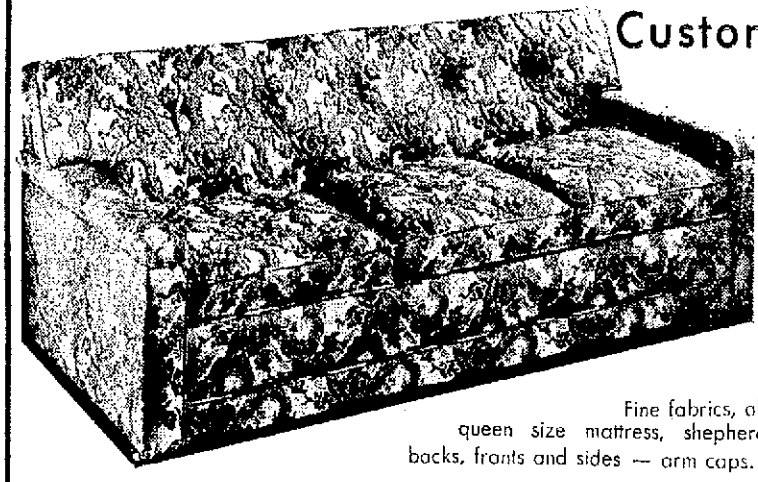

The most important enemy operation, however, appeared to have been the conquest early in May of most of Southern Laos and the town of Atopeu, American officials said.

Controlling the Laotian panhandle, the Communists have been able to re-open their supply lines from North Vietnam.

Weapons, ammunition and food — replenishing that lost in the Cambodian sanctuaries — have begun to move overland through Southeast Laos to the Attopeu area, where they are believed to be loaded on boats and river barges on the Se Kong.

CAR SMASHED BY PLANE

Wreckers pull apart a car to reach its five passengers, all of whom were killed when a twin-engine plane crashed atop it Saturday near Atlanta, Ga.

Plane Hits Car; 6 Killed, 30 Hurt

going to find that . . . the excellence of the things the pilot did was the only reason why we've had as few deaths as we have had. It was almost a miracle that it came off as well as it did."

Federal Aviation Administration official Jack Barker said the plane lost one of its engines five minutes after takeoff and was attempting an instrument landing at the main Atlanta airport south of the city when the crash occurred.

The plane took off from Dekalb-Peachtree, a satellite airport northeast of Atlanta, and came down on the southeast side of town at the intersection of Interstate 285 and Moreland Avenue.

A heavy overcast blanketed the area at the time.

The silver and blue aircraft, piloted by Capt. James Cannin, carried 32 passengers and a flight crew of four. In addition to Cannin, the flight crew included Copilot Robert Feldmiller and Stewardesses Jeanne Collins and Jill Atwater. All the crew wembers are from the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., area.

Miss Atwater, who escaped injury, said she had her seat belt on when the crash came, but that Miss Collins was up getting something for one of the passengers.

"She was thrown through the galley up near the cockpit door," Miss Atwater recalled. Miss Collins was later hospitalized in fair condition.

MISS ATWATER said she realized the plane was going to crash when one of the passengers yelled the plane had passed under some power lines.

"I screamed for everyone to duck their heads . . . Then I heard something scraping the bottom of the plane . . . I heard it rip . . . Then we spun to the left and hit what I thought was an embankment. At that point, I believe the tail section ripped off," Miss Atwater said.

The plane crashed about 20 miles from the point where it took off. A spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington said that agency would investigat the crash.

One of the passengers aboard, 19-year-old Eddie Pittman of nearby Austell, Ga., said the pilot put the plane into a bank and appeared to be circling when the crash came.

"He (the pilot) didn't say nothing. He didn't warn us we were going to crash or nothing," Pittman declared. "There was no panic on the plane at all. We were just smoking a cigarette when it happened.

TONY PESTER, 45, an Englishman who now works as an aircraft engineer at the local Lockheed plant, gave a similar account.

Pester, who was making the flight with his wife and their 12-year-old son, said he immediately realized something was wrong.

"No one said anything about any trouble, but I noticed intermittent firing and blue smoke coming from both engines, especially the right one," Pester said.

"I thought the pilot was turning around, but when I saw trees outside the window, I yelled to everyone to get down, to cover their knees. I saw several people doing it, so I guess it helped.

"There was no panic. The pilot did everything he could. Obviously he was searching for a place to land," Pester said.

"I was dazed for a few seconds. The first rewarding sound I heard was my son shouting, 'Dad'."

The plane pancaked down on the car, careened to the left on the wet grass, shot up a 40-foot embankment, hit a guard rail and snapped in half.

THE BODY of the plane came to rest in the middle of the Moreland Avenue overpass atop the interstate. Seats and debris were scattered for hundreds of yards along the interstate.

A heavy downpour of rain hit moments after the crash and traffic in the area backed up for miles, hampering police efforts to reach the dead and injured.

The dead in the car were identified as James Barron, his wife and their young sons, Steve and Burt, and a friend of the Barron children, Danny Roescher.

Voting in 8 States: Tests for Wallace, Peace Movement

United Press International

Seven states will hold primary elections Tuesday to nominate candidates for four governorships, five U.S. Senate seats and 71 House seats. But more attention probably will go to an eighth state, Alabama, where the political survival of George C. Wallace is at stake.

Alabama Democrats will vote in a gubernatorial runoff — tantamount to election — between Wallace, the American Independent Party presidential candidate in 1968, and incumbent Gov. Albert P. Brewer. Wallace finished behind Brewer in the May 5 primary but Brewer failed to poll a majority.

Other major contests involve the Democratic nominations for governor and senator in California and the Republican nomination for senator in New Mexico. Scattered contests will test the strength of the peace movement, revitalized by the use of U.S. troops in Cambodia.

BESIDES California and New Mexico, primaries will be held in Iowa, Mississippi, Montana, New Jersey and South Dakota. New Jersey and New Mexico are high on the Republican priority list for winning Senate seats how held by Democrats.

Most of the primary campaigns have been fairly tame, dominated by personalities and state or local issues.

Alabama's race between Wallace and Brewer is described as too close to call. Although Brewer led Wallace in the first primary, Wallace says he will pick up enough votes from the other candidates in the earlier primary to win. If he fails, Alabama Democrats will seriously damage the chances of keeping the Wallace movement alive for another presidential campaign in 1972.

The New Mexico contest for the GOP senatorial nomination has matched Gov. David Cargo against the more conservative Anderson Carter, who made an impressive showing in his campaign to unseat Sen. Clinton P. Anderson in 1966.

Here is a rundown by states on Tuesday's voting:

Alabama — Runoff between Wallace and Brewer for Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Also a runoff for lieutenant governor. Two Negroes have a chance to win nominations for seats in now all-white legislature.

New Jersey — Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., expected to win Democratic renominaton over state Sen. Frank J. Guarina; former state GOP Chairman Nelson G. Gross has only token opposition for Republican nomination.

Disposal Firm Takes Beating as Trio Plays Bump-Car Game

By RUSS MacDONALD
Staff Writer

A Compton disposal firm took a bad beating Saturday in the biggest game of bump cars in the city's history.

There was no shame in defeat, because all the participating trucks belonged to the same "team", but then the management of the Abco Disposal Co. never intended to have their dump truck parking lot turned into a destruction derby scene anyway.

Firestone Sheriff's deputies said three juveniles picked the lock on the gateway entrance to the parking lot, at 14905 S. San Pedro St., shortly after noon and began playing among the trucks.

When the youths discovered the trucks could be started, the "started to play bump-cars," deputies said, and the big game was on.

Deputies responded to a call from the disposal yard about 2 p.m., found the game nearly over due to a lack of serviceable vehicles, and captured two of the three youthful drivers.

Totals for the big game: Abco Disposal Co. estimated damages of $20,000 to $40,000, with two trucks demolished and 13 others battered.

N.Y. Police Find Weapons, Drugs in California Couple's Apartment

NEW YORK (UPI) — A young couple linked to the radical Weatherman faction of Students for a Democratic Society and wanted in California for "attempted murder, arson and other crimes" were held in bail totaling $150,000 Saturday following their arrest in a tenement apartment allegedly stocked with guns and drugs.

Lee Wood, 25, and his wife Patricia, 24, who is five months pregnant, were arraigned in criminal court on charges of felonious possession of dangerous weapons and criminal possession of dangerous drugs.

Two dozen police, armed with shotguns and wearing bulletproof vests, raided the couple's apartment in a rundown five-story building Friday night after evacuating other tenants with the ruse that there was a gas leak in the building. There was no shooting but Wood was handcuffed when he resisted arrest, police said.

The raid resulted from the arrest in Oakland Thursday of two militant leftists who allegedly were burglarizing a chemical plant for material to make nitroglycerine, the district attorney's office said.

PAPERS FOUND in the arrest of Robert Stover, 25, and Michael F. Lamm, 24, linked the Oakland men to the Woods, they said.

Police said that as they searched the Woods' apartment off Central Park West a telegram arrived saying, "Leave your apartment immediately. Call me in Oakland. Jack." Police did not identify Jack.

Hosmer Cautions: 'Keep Facts of War, Pullout in Perspective'

Rep. Craig Hosmer, Congressman from the 32nd Congressional District, said Saturday that he had been receiving so many communications both opposing and supporting the recent military moves against Cambodian sanctuaries that he felt compelled to make a general statement about his views.

He stressed that "in expressing these views I do not feel at all omnipotent — I have a decent respect for those whose outlook differs from mine. I am prepared to change my mind if I am in error and trust that other people would do likewise. Pride is not important here — but ending this war and keeping out of others is.

"I think it is also important in the dialogue on this subject to maintain a decent respect for our country and its President and a balanced perspective on the deep responsibilities of North Vietnam for perpetuating the war."

HOSMER said that when President Nixon took office last year he inherited a full scale war in Southeast Asia in which around 542,000 U.S. military personnel were engaged.

"Whether this was a 'moral' or 'legal' war was irrelevant," Hosmer stated. "It existed and he had to deal with it intelligently."

The congressman said that he has already brought one out of every four Americans home, a total of 112,000.

"To date" he said, "the President has done precisely what he said he would do and has done it within the timetables announced. To reasonable people that should be ample assurance that we will continue to do so."

The congressman said that President Nixon has said that by next spring another 150,000 will be out, force levels will fall below 280,000, making almost a 50 per cent cut from the high mark, making a situation whereby for all practical purposes that all our combat troops will have been withdrawn and that remaining will be primarily supply and logistic units.

"THAT MEANS," he said "we shall have disengaged and turned the fighting over to a well-trained, million-man South Vietnamese army. Our noncombatants also can come home as this Army develops its capability to handle the supply and logistics tasks. There is no magic button here in Washington, unfortunately, which can be pushed and accomplish all these things instantly.

"There is no question that all of us want out of the war as fast as possible and surely, most of all, the President of the United States. If anyone thinks otherwise he must be out of his mind . . . whatever dispute there is it is not whether to get out of the war. It is about how to do so. And it is about the minimum amount of time required to do it without inviting costly consequences disproportionate in value to any time saved."

"Some people say cut and run this instant to stop the killing. That is fine. But what about the 11 million South Vietnamese, at least half of whom the North Vietnamese regime would liquidate if they get their hands on them? To abandon them just a few months before the South's capability is developed to prevent it invites a bloodbath. It would not stop the killing. It would facilitate it. It would make the U.S. a passive accessory to an act of genocidal immorality.

"ALSO, THE FATE TO which it would relegate over 1500 American POWs is a highly uncertain one. Morever, the U.S. has maintained, ever since World War II, many mutual security treaties with countries in this area of the world. Running out on Vietnam could encourage the Communists to move in on any and all of them.

We could soon be forced to choose between a wholesale repudiation of solemn treaty obligations or facing half a dozen new major crises.

"The President has chosen the alternative to this which is to withdraw in stages while building the South's independent ability to defend itself. This strategy was placed in harm's way when, immediately following his April 20th withdrawals announcement, Hanoi ordered its 40,000 troops in the sanctuaries to take over most of Cambodia. In particular, Hanoi wanted to re-open the Port of Sihanoukville through which 80 per cent of its munitions used against 2/3rds of South Vietnam had reached the sanctuaries while Prince Sihanouk was in power. Had it succeeded, an intolerable situation would have stretched for 600 miles along South Vietnam's western border.

"The action against North Vietnam in the Cambodian sanctuaries is proving extremely crippling to its future ability to interfere with our orderly withdrawal and with the South's developing strength. Already, 8 million rounds of small arms ammunition have been seized and over 20,000 mortar rounds and 2,000 land mines. This and other captured Communist war material won't be used to carry out Hanoi's orders to its troops in the sanctuaries to kill no less than 100 Americans per week to keep the political pressure on Washington. It won't be available to keep us pinned down in a far away place we desperately want out of.

DESPITE assertions to the contrary, this move against the North in the sanctuaries is legal both under Article 51 of the UN Covenant and under international law. Cambodia's inability to enforce its neutrality gives injured parties the right to take commensurate action. The U.S. and South Vietnam did so and notified the UN. Their right of action does not depend on a declaration of war. War is a fact which may legally exist independently of a declaration. When war exists, declared or undeclared, the rules of war apply. Any illegality in this instance is on the part of North Vietnam which invaded this territory and took it from Cambodia for its own use.

"Some people believe that passing the so-called "amenement to end the war" will make the war disappear. By withholding money, the amendment would restrict how, where and when action is taken to get out of this mess. Frankly, I think the idea is dangerous and counterproductive. Hamstringing the President will not make it any easier or quicker to cool off the fighting and breathe life into the Paris talks. And, a lot of men in uniform could get killed waiting for Congress to repeal restrictions on things they may have to do to protect themselves. Can you imagine how long World War II might have dragged on if Congress had badgered General Eisenhower that way?" He concluded.

CIA REPORT REVEALS

Cambodia Chief Supplied Cong

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A report of the Central Inteligence Agency asserts that Premier Lon Nol of Cambodia, who led the ouster of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as chief of state in March, sold rice to the Viet Cong on several occasions a few years ago.

Reliable sources say that an intelligence document prepared to inform high American officials on Cambodia reports that Gen Lon Nol, who is now anti-Communist, sold the rice at a time when Cambodia was formally neutralist and, at the same time, was allowing the North Vietnamese to use her territory as a staging area for attacks on American and South Vietnamese forces in Vietnam.

THE CIA REPORT, apparently prepared in 1967, said that Viet Cong representatives stopped buying from the general when they came to distrust him. It did not say what had prompted the distrust.

The sources could not say what government position Lon Nol held when he was engaged in the reported transactions with the Viet Cong. He was made commander in chief of the armed forces in 1960, deputy premier and then premier in 1966.

There have also been frequent reports from intelligence sources and Cambodian officials that members of Prince Sihanouk's family, including his wife, Monique, were heavily involved in smuggling operations. This is thought to have been one of the factors that caused dissatisfaction against the prince and led to the coup d'etat in which he was ousted.

A SOLDIER'S LETTER

'If You Must Weep, Let It Be for Me . . .'

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — "If it is predestined that you must weep again, then Dad, let it be for me —once in glory, for the victory that shall surely be mine."

With these words, Sgt. George Sawada of Seattle closed a long letter to his father. It was 27 years ago, two months before he was killed by a sniper on the Italian front in World War II.

Sawada was a member of the Japanese-American (Nisei) "Go for Broke" 442nd Regimental Combat team, the most decorated regiment in U.S. Army history.

"You are probably wondering why I have written you this letter so soon when we had just said good-bye only a few hours ago, but I felt that I owed it to myself and you to tell you some of the things I should have said and didn't when the time came for us to part," the sergeant wrote.

"There is an old saying . . . a man must weep thrice ere his span of life is done . . . I don't know whether this is true . . . but I already have seen you weep twice, once in sorrow and once in joy . . . and if it is predestined that you must weep again, then Dad, let it be for me — once in glory, for the victory that shall surely be mine."

His father, Sinsaku Sawada, now deceased, was at that time confined to a relocation center. But he had told his son, "It is for the best. For the good of many a few must suffer. This is your sacrifice, accept it as such, and you will no longer be bitter."

In his tribute to his father, made available for his Memorial Day weekend publication in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Sawada noted:

"You are old now — aged since mother passed away many years ago and left you three little children to raise, but once you were not so old. You were young when she was alive and I can remember what a happy family we were then . . .

"Then that awful night when she died, you came home and told us as gently as only you know how that she had gone away, that we mustn't cry because mother wouldn't want us to. Hiro and I were Japanese boys so we didn't cry, at that time at least. But our little sister, she was such a little thing, cried into the night and, tired as you were from sleepless nights of vigil, you walked her to sleep.

"You aged overnight. You would smile at us, but it was not from the heart. How sad you looked when you thought we were safely tucked in bed, and your pretenses dropped like a heavy load. Once I saw you weep . . .

"The love you had for her now you gave to us. You were a father. Now you also became a mother and a little something more . . ."

Sawada's letter recalled how the family survived the depression of the 1930s and how his father insisted that his son go to college although savings had been wiped out.

Seven years after graduation from high school near the top of his class, Sawada was graduated from the University of Washington.

"When I gave you the diploma you held it close to your heart and there were tears of joy in your eyes. I saw you weep again for the second time."

That same year, brother Hiro was inducted into the Army.

"We held a farewell dinner in his honor, and do you remember the prayer you gave then: 'God keep us and grant us peace'? . .

"One December morning, out of the friendly sky, treachery struck with appalling devastation. You turned pale when you heard the news. For days after, you were silent in your misery. Japan was the country of our birth, but America the country of your choice. From that day you ceased speaking of Japan . . .

"In the spring of the following year, we were forced to evacuate to the relocation centers. It was a bitter blow to me, I, a citizen, with a brother already serving in the Army, must evacuate, and I could not understand why the German and the Italian aliens were not included . . .

"Then you comforted me and slowly withdrew the sting of bitterness as you did many years ago when mother passed away . . .

"When the time came for enlistment, I was ready, my faith and loyalty restored, stronger, firmer, unwavering, I volunteered. And tonight as the train carries me farther and farther from you, it also seemed to carry me back over the years of our happy life, recalling to me those days when we were five, then four, then three, and now you are only two."

Shocked Parents Wait to Know if Soldier Will Live

mouth . . . his period of further hospitalization is undetermined and evacuation is not contemplated at this time. . . "

Two days later, another telegram: " . . . your son is not making normal improvement and he is still seriously ill. He has an additional diagnosis of a pancreatic abscess with a breakdown of the gastric suture line and atelectasis of the left lower lobe of the lung. A tracheostomy has been performed. He is awake, aware of his surroundings, writing and his morale is good. He is being fed intravenously . . . . evacuation is not currently contemplated . . ."

On April 3, five days after the last telegram, another arrived: " . . . your son remains the same. He is still seriously ill. His morale is good, he is awake and not taking anything by mouth . . . you will be promptly advised as additional information is received. . . "

THE NEXT DAY, still another message arrived saying Lt. Wiedle had been evacuated from Vietnam to Camp Zama, Japan, and three days later they were informed that their son's ". . . present condition is satisfactory, prognosis is fair . . . although he is still seriously ill. Evacuation to the United States is contemplated, but the date is undetermined at this time . . ."

The final telegram arrived April 9: "I am pleased to inform you that your son . . . has been removed from the seriously ill list. His condition and prognosis are good and his morale is excellent. He is able to communicate with you. Evacuation to the U.S. is contemplated in approximately two weeks; however, destination is undetermined at this time. Since his condition is no longer considered serious no further reports will be furnished. I share your hope that he will have a rapid recovery . . . Kenneth Wickham, Maj. Gen. USA."

Two months from the day he was lying wounded on a hillside in Vietnam he arrived home to begin a 30-day convalescent leave.

"We're thankful to have him back alive," his parents say quietly, "although we're well aware that some 42,000 other families weren't so fortunate."

FIFTY POUNDS lighter than he was when he arrived in Vietnam on Christmas Day of 1969, the Lakewood High School and Long Beach State graduate admits his homecoming was due, in a great part, to luck.

"When it first happened, I was surprised," he says with a smile. "Tactically, it shouldn't have happened. I was leading a platoon down a hill . . . I was used to fighting Viet Cong, who would pick up and run. This time we were fighting the NVA (North Vietnamese Army) — they're smarter and outflanked us, but I was the only one hit.

"A bullet entered my back and came out the front — just an inch from my heart and spine. The bullet went right through my rib cage and missed my ribs — it could have been deflected by a rib into something vital, but it wasn't. I was lucky.

"The bullet didn't hurt — it was just a sting, but I looked down and saw the blood . . . then a medic came up and put a bandaid in front and back.

"I HAPPENED to look at my watch — it was 2:15 — and wondered if I was going to make it or not. I knew if a helicopter came soon I'd make it. I really didn't know what to think."

An hour later, the lieutenant says, a helicopter did arrive.

"By that time I had started to hurt," he admits.

The helicopter hovered over him, he recalls, but was driven off by enemy fire. He faced his evacuation realistically.

"I knew if they reeled me up part of the way and were fired on, they'd have to cut me loose — it's the only way. They've got a half million dollar aircraft, a pilot and two or three others in the 'copter. If it got to a point where they'd have to move, the best thing to do is cut — they'd crash if they didn't. When you think about it rationally, it's the only thing to do — even the wounded guy has a chance to survive, even if he does have to fall a ways."

After waiting for another hour — "it was about 4:30" — the second evacuation helicopter arrived.

"I was awake, but feeling slowly worse," he admits. "As they reeled me up I had my fingers crossed."

It worked, and the helicopter made it back to a hospital in Long Binh where doctors operated for four hours to save his life.

"I told the nurse when I woke up from the operation not to send the telegram to my folks, because I knew they'd worry, but she couldn't stop it.

"Those telegrams give you the bare facts — they tell it like it is. The Army does that for all the wounded guys — they feel obligated to let the parents know — and I guess they're right."

The young officer, who won his degree in political science from Long Beach State, claims he "volunteered for everything" when he entered the Army — as a volunteer — in February 1968. His records show he completed advanced infantry training, officer candidate school, airborne training, Green Beret training and a 12-week Vietnamese language school.

"I did it," he explains frankly, "because when I got to Vietnam I wanted to do the best for my country, and myself."

FIRST EVER

UC Student to Get Degree in Magic

By RICHARD M. HARNETT

BERKELEY (UPI) — Among June graduates at the University of California is Isaac Bonewits, who will receive a Bachelor of Arts in magic.

The diplomat for "studies in the field of magic" is the first of its kind ever granted by Cal, and possibly the first anywhere.

Bonewits, 20, believes in magic, which he defines as "phenomena which occur which do not yet fit in with any of the known laws of the universe."

He believes that someday what is now considered magic will be understood as perfectly natural phenomena. "If you were to go back to the year 1600 and use a flashlight, everybody would say you were a magician," he said in an interview.

FROM READING science fiction, Bonewits got interested in parapsychology — ESP, spells and fortune-telling. This led him to study the occult mysteries and magic. He proposed to his university advisers the idea of majoring in magic in a program of individual study.

"They were a little bit surprised," he said, "but when they noticed I had a very strong and difficult list of courses and that I had a B-plus average, they agreed."

Bonewits' courses were in psychology, anthropology, sociology, various religions, folklore and mythology. He plans to go on and possibly become a Ph.D. magician.

"Magic is like medicine," he said. "It is both an art and a science. I'm not studying it as something dead and historical. I'm studying it as something that has been very badly confused and mixed up over the years but still has application today."

Bonewits said he has had some experiences himself "for which I could not find any other explanation."

"MAGIC IS always the last explanation. I am willing to take fraud, error, hallucination or anything else for an explanation. You go through all these things and sooner or later you find a few occurrences that just don't fit in."

Many people, especially young people around Berkeley, "are dabbling in the occult," he said. "Unfortunately most of them don't know what they are doing. It is like electricity; if you don't know what you are doing you can get burned. It is very dangerous. People go mad, some commit suicide, they do all sorts of weird things when they approach magic from a game or recreational attitude."

Bonewits believes the reason for the new interest is that people are afraid of modern technology. "Young people see our culture as mechanistic. They feel that by going back to learn magic they will learn to be more humane."

"WHAT I am interested in is taking that area that is now referred to as the occult and magic, and translating it into modern terms that can be used in a parapsychological laboratory."

He thinks the old books of magic, with instructions on how to build up the emotions for a trance or spell, are adaptable to a laboratory. He hopes eventually to set up an institute of magic.

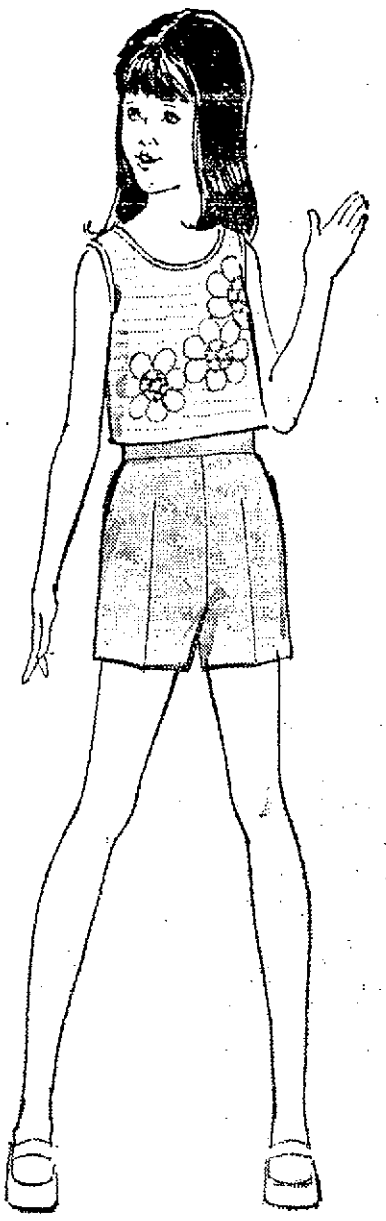

There he will summon all the witches, clairvoyants, fortune-tellers and magicians he can. His goal is "to find out what their techniques are and run them through the toughest laboratory I can put together."

and fiber. The land then cannot be appraised on its market value as a potential residential development site but rather on the basis of its capability and productivity. This method of appraisal lowers the assessed value of the property, thereby lowering the property owner's taxes. Orange County also has an agricultural preserves provision, with some Irvine Ranch property falling under this category.

Replacement

Q. We have a substantial refund owed us by the Internal Revenue Service for the year 1968. They sent one check, but it was stolen. The man accused of the theft is now out of jail on bond. We don't know if the IRS intends to issue us another check. Could you find out? Mrs. R.S.P., Torrance.

A. A replacement check will be issued to you about the end of June, according to a spokesman for the IRS finance center in Ogden, Utah. She said payment has been withheld until a stop payment was placed on the uncashed stolen steck.

Camp List

Q. Can ACTION LINE find out if there are any summer baseball camps that my 15-year-old son could attend to improve his game? H.B., Long Beach.

A. ACTION LINE checked several sources, and could find only one summer baseball camp in Southern California. Los Angeles Dodger star Jim Lefebvre offers a summer baseball camp in the San Diego Mountains. However, Lefebvre's camp is for boys 8 through 14, although a spokesman for the camp said they would accept a boy who recently had turned 15. Five two-week sessions are held at the camp from June 29 to Sept. 7. The cost is $195. For more information, call 531-1346. Several baseball enthusiasts told ACTION LINE that since the amateur baseball program is so extensive in California, many baseball camps have gone out of business. "Joining a summer baseball team will give a boy almost as much training as a camp," said one high school baseball coach. ACTION LINE readers can obtain a directory of all types of summer camps in Southern California by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelop to the Welfare Planning Council, Los Angeles Region, 5300 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90029, attention: Camp Bureau.

Really Michael Mouse

Q. I have been trying to find a Mickey Mouse watch for an adult, but most stores tell me to go to Disneyland. Can ACTION LINE help me find a store in Long Beach that has the watches? R.E., Long Beach.

A. You didn't look very hard. Dooley's Hardware, 5075 Long Beach Blvd., Kay Jewelers, 319 Pine Ave., California Credit Jewelers, 328 Pine Ave., and David Wayne Jewelry and Gifts, 4536 Orange Ave., as well as other local jewelers, carry the $12.95 Mickey Mouse Watches for adults.

REACTION

ACTION LINE Tuesday reported that atoms have never actually been seen by scientists. Your readers may be interested to know that a University of Chicago research team headed by Dr. Albert V. Crewe recently succeeded in photographing atoms through a specially-developed electron microscope. They are "clearly delineated as white spots within a dark molecule" in the pictures, reported the team. D.H., Long Beach.

nation sometime in June on the accomplishments of the controversial U.S. thrusts into Cambodia and wanted a full and up-to-date briefing on the military situation in Southeast Asia.

The information from the combat field commanders was expected to figure heavily in how deeply involved the United States will remain in the conflict in Cambodia. President Nixon has promised that all U.S. troops will be out of Cambodia by the end of June but has left cloudy whether American support will be furnished to South Vietnamese and Cambodian troops after that time.

The President spent most of Memorial Day at the Western White House and interrupted conferences with his aides to observe a period of prayer for permanent peace.

Flags at his bluff-top office and residence complex overlooking the Pacific Ocean here were lowed to halfstaff throughout the day in accordance with the President's proclamation calling for a special mark of respect for Americans killed "in the tragic struggle in Vietnam."

"IT IS NOT enough to express our gratitude to the heroic dead by thought and prayer and with special reverence on Memorial Day," said Nixon's proclamation, which was issued last week. "A more fitting memorial would be the creation of a peaceful world, free of the destructive conflicts that have plagued man's history."

Mrs. Nixon joined her husband for the quiet period, according to assistant press secretary Gerald L. Warren.

35 Arrested in Dope Raids

Thirty-five persons, most of them young, were jailed on suspicion of a wide variety of drug charges early Saturday after roundups by narcotics officers at three Long Beach homes.

Seventeen arrests were made by officers investigating complaints of a loud party at 1450 Obispo Ave., Apt. 2, about 1 a.m. Suspects included a 15-year-old girl and another juvenile.

Ten persons were taken in custody by narcotics officers at 260 Lowena Drive.

EARLIER, Los Angeles and Long Beach police nabbed eight suspected drug violators at 3441 Iroquois Ave. after a dual investigation.

The three arrests were not connected, officers said.

Only small amounts of narcotics were found at the Obispo Avenue apartment, investigators said.

They said they confiscated several marijuana cigarette butts, about 70 pills that appeared to contain dangerous drugs and a few unsmoked marijuana cigarettes.

Some of the drugs were flushed down the toilet by the suspects, they said.

When officers entered the apartment, they found most of the suspects hiding under beds, behind furniture and in closets in a small bedroom.

They said the apartment was rented by Diane Nolan 19; Terry Del Jiaco, 20, and Edrenea Ann Orlando, 18. All three were booked on suspicion of possession of dangerous drugs and maintaining a place where narcotics are used.

TWO MEN were booked on suspicion of possession of marijuana and the other suspects on suspicion of being in a place where marijuana was used.

At the Lowena Drive address, 10 suspects were booked on similar charges.

Narcotics officers said they confiscated a variety of marijuana and dangerous drugs there worth about $4,000 in street sales.

Police who made arrests at the Iroquois Avenue home said four persons were booked on suspicion of possession of marijuana for sale and four others on suspicion of possession of marijuana.

Russ Navy Fleet Ends Cuba Visit

MIAMI (AP) — A Soviet Union navy fleet left Cuba Saturday after a two-week courtesy visit, Havana Radio reported.

The broadcast said: "The stay of the Soviet sailors in Cuba, besides letting them make minor repairs and replenish their water supply, served them by visiting various places in our country and strengthening even more the ties of friendship between Cuba and the Soviet Union."

Radio Net Links Student Strikes

ment and is rapidly expanding its membership in colleges and high schools throughout the country.

"In all organizing endeavors the SMC studiously avoids any reference to or connection with the Young Socialist Alliance (YSA) or the Socialist Workers Party (SWP). In such endeavors the SMC professes to be a national organization for students opposed to the war in Vietnam.

"The SMC serves as a wide and at least quasirespectable base of operations for the YSA and SWP. SMC is also the major source of recruits into the YSA whose membership is mulitplying rapidly."

ON MAY 8, THE DAY after the colleges were closed at the governor's request, sponsors of station WB6FCR at California State College, Fullerton, announced on the air that they had occupied the music building and were on strike for the duration of the war.

They announced that instead of classes they would conduct discussions on such subjects as "capitalism, abortion and the revolutionary functions of the orgasm." Further they announced that committees of faculty students and interested nonstudents had been set up to run the strike.

The following week the college was running nearly at normal while the radio station was operating off the campus complaining bitterly that some "right-wing students" had damaged their antennas so that it was impossible to operate from the school.

Stanford reported that at the suggestion of Colgate University in the east the student strikers were investigating the possibility of forming themselves into nonprofit corporations "because there are certain legal advantages in doing so."

Still another suggestion was made that caps and gowns not being used at graduation ceremonies and that the money saved be put to the "cause."

A TYPICAL DAY had the University of California at Irvine reporting that they were working to convince faculty to accept a "pass grade" for all students — and that they were supporting the strike.

The University of Oregon reported that a rally was not successful.

Menlo College reported that they were attempting to tie United Press International news wires into their teletype system so they could keep abreast of the developments.

Stanford net headquarters reported that W2NGO, radio station at Pratt Institute in New York State, said the school would be closed for the rest of the semester.

The University of California at Santa Barbara station requested that the West Coast radio net be left on all night.

San Jose State College reported that they had set up informational picket lines.

SOME ONE CHIMED IN to report that irate amateurs had "jammed" the national network to such an extent it was impossible to carry on communications on a nationwide basis. They reported that the matter had been reported to the Federal Communications Commission.

Although the national network was in such serious trouble with jamming it was unable to maintain communications, the West Coast network managed to maintain communications despite boos, jamming and unidentified voices shouting "get off campus all Commie students."

At the peak of their activity, as near as it was possible to check, about 23 different stations could be identified.

However, as strike fever waned slightly and final examinations approached the West Coast net almost disappeared.

The Federal Communications Commission would only say that it was aware of the problem and was studying it.

Meantime irate amateur radio operators, keenly aware of their outstanding record in the field of public service could only remember the sixth and last item in the "Amateur's Code":

"The amateur is patriotic . . . His knowledge and his station are always ready for the service of his contry and his community."

Caltech Breaks Tradition, Plans to Admit 30 Coeds

PASADENA (CNS) — Caltech will leave the ranks of traditionally male colleges next fall when it allows 30 coeds to enter as undergraduates.

Women have attended the Pasadena school, as graduate students, since 1955, but none have ever attended the school to obtain an undergraduate degree.

"The number of September coeds probably will exceed 30 because eight girls have applied to transfer to Caltech from other colleges," said Dr. Peter Miller, director of admissions, Saturday.

Since Caltech president Harold Brown announced last October that applications from coeds would be accepted, the number of women to apply and be admitted as undergrads has been larger than expected, Miller said. The first projected figure was 25, including freshmen and transfers.

of the 1,405 students who applied for admission as freshmen next year, 77 were women. Forty of them met Caltech's high entrance requiremens in mathematics and science.

"Acceptance of 30 of the 40 women is higher than expected," Miller said. "Every one of the 20 girls from California who was offered admission accepted."

Dr. David Smith, master of student houses, said the women will occupy a wing joining two student houses, Blacker and Dabney. The wing will be completely renovated this summer. The coeds will have the option of joining either Dabney or Blacker House.

Strike Ends

BARRE, Vt. (UPI) — A month-long Vermont granite strike was settled Saturday when members of Granite Cutters International Association accepted a contract providing a 30 cent an hour increase in the first year and a 35 cent and hour increase the second year.

Naked Swimmers Clash With La Jolla Lifeguards

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — City lifeguards at picturesque La Jolla Cove clashed in the water with nude deomonstrators in efforts to arrest them Saturday.

Eight persons "got belligerent" and lifeguards swam into the cove to arrest them and pull them ashore to waiting police, a lifeguard spokesman said. He said fights occurred in the water, and officers reported some of the demonstrators were naked.

The incident followed a march by an estimated 250 persons through business and residential sections of the expensive resort and residential quarter. Officers said several windows were smashed.

They said the demonstrators appeared to be mostly hippies and were not identified as belonging to any specific group.

ROTC Office Bombed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A crude firebomb shattered two large windows and caused minor damage early Saturday to ROTC offices at the University of San Francisco.

Officials said the blast was the fifth arson incident at the campus this month.

Police said damage was confined to windows, walls ad curtains. They described the bomb as a crude device fashioned of gunpowder poured into the cylinder of a toilet tissue roll, then wrapped in tape. It was placed on a window sill outside the ROTC office in Loyola Hall.

LET ASSAILANT IN

Stewardess Slain by Knife Wielder

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle detectives investigating the brutal stabbing murder of an airline stewardess said Saturday she apparently got out of bed, pulled on some clothes and opened her door to an assailant she knew.

Eileen Condit, 23, United Airlines stewardess, was wearing jeans and a sweater over a shorty nightgown when her body was found Friday night lying beside a 10-inch long, serrated butcher knife, police said Saturday.

Police homicide Sgt. Ivan Beeson said she had been stabbed six times. He said any one of the wounds would have been fatal.

Detectives tentatively ruled out robbery as a motive.

Police said the victim's body was discovered Friday evening by neighbors who heard a scream Thursday night and saw no signs of life around the house Friday. Another neighbor told officers he saw lights go out and a man leaving Miss Condit's small cottage overlooking Lake Washington about 11:30 p.m. Thursday night.

EILEEN CONDIT
Knew Her Killer?

The dead woman was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay C. Condit, of Fresno.

Coed Murder Trial Set Tuesday

ANN ARBOR, Mich (AP) — A 22-year-old college senior goes on trial Tuesday for first-degree murder in connection with the death of one of seven young woman killed in the Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti area in a two-year period.

He is accused of slaying Karen Sue Beineman, 18, an Eastern Michigan University coed. Miss Beineman was the seventh young women killed in the area during the two-year period. No charges have been filed in the other six slayings.

The defendant, John Norman Collins has been confined for 10 months in the Washtenaw County Jail while his attorneys filed legal motions.

Meanwhile, California authorities awaited their turn to try Collins on a similar charge in the strangulation death last summer of 17-year-old Roxie Ann Phillips of Milwaukie, Ore., near Carmel.

Collins was arrested last August a few days after Miss Beineman's battered and sexually molested body was found in a wood area on the outskirts of Ann Arbor.

A prosecution witness testified at Collins' preliminary examination that she saw him riding on a motorcycle with Miss Beineman the day she disappeared.

Defense attorneys attempted to have the testimony barred from the trial, contending the witness, Mrs. Diana Joan Goshe, identified Collins in a police lineup only after she had been shown a picture of him.

Neutron Beams Seen Possible Cancer Cure

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — A new weapon in the war against cancer is being developed in the laboratories of the University of Wisconsin.

The weapon could be a powerful one. But researchers emphasize it would only be added to a growing arsenal of cancer treatments. They warned the process will not be a miracle worker.

Dr. Max Boone, head of the Wisconsin radiotherapy department, and Dr. Charles Kelsey, associate professor of radiology, are working on a machine to treat cancer patients with high-energy neutron beams.

Neutrons are the heavy, uncharged particles found in the nuclei of atoms.

Medical authorities have felt for many years that neutron beams might be useful in cancer treatment. But the machines which generated the beams were enormous in size and astronomical in cost.

Neutrons can kill many cancers resistant to X-rays, electrons and gamma radiation, the types of radiation treatment now in use.

The Wisconsin machine used nuclear fusion to produce the neutrons, the same basic reaction as that used in the hydrogen bomb.

Italy Jetline Hijacker Held in Cairo

CAIRO (UPI) — An Italian Airlines jetliner hijacked over Italy with 34 persons aboard landed safely at Cairo Airport Saturday night and Egyptian security forces immediately arrested the hijacker, the Middle East News Agency said.

Security men rushed the Alitalia DC-9, parked in a remote area, and arrested the hijacker, MENA said.

THE REMAINING 30 passengers and three crewmen were escorted to the airport terminal to rest before flying back to Rome.

The hijacker was described in Naples as a young blond man carrying a "metal object." He commandeered the plane in the air while it was en route from Genoa to Rome.

A Cairo radio broadcast Saturday night said the hijacker was an Italian citizen.

Cairo officials described the weapon with which the hijacker threatened the crew as "a toy cap pistol such as children use." The hijacker, said to be in his 40s, was identified as Gianlocca Stoyso.

The hijacker ordered the pilot to fly over Rome and to take him to Cairo. However, the pilot convinced him the plane had to land at Naples for more fuel.

One of the hostesses was put off the plane at Naples to warn police away and she remained behind when it took off again. Three crewmen remained aboard.

The pilot first contacted Naples that he was flying to Tripoli, Libya. Later, he radioed that he was heading to Marsa Matruh. Finally, he radioed that he was flying directly to Cairo.

MISS NIM Malinar said she was sent off the plane at Naples airport to warn police not to try to board the craft during refueling.

It was the first hijacking in Italy since Jan. 9 when a Frenchman hijacked a Trans World Airlines jetliner over Genoa and forced its crew to fly him to Beirut, Lebanon.

Blaze Hits Idaho City

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — Fire raged out of control through a section of downtown Lewiston Saturday, destroying a restaurant and damaging a number of nearby establishments.

All city and suburban fire units were called to battle the blaze, whipped by gusty winds.

The fire raged across the street from the site where a multimillion-dollar fire burned the Lewiston Elks Temple about a year ago.

U.S. Aid to Red Romania Triple That of Russians

VIENNA (UPI) — The United States has sent nearly three times as much flood aid to Communist Romania as the Soviet Union, official figures released Saturday showed.

Shipments from the two nations were believed to be only first installments of aid for the stricken nation, where an estimated 200 persons have died and millions of acres of farmland have been flooded.

But the initial figures reflected Russia's conspicuous foot-dragging on aid for its independent-minded ally.

AGERPRES, the Romanian news agency, reported Friday that a Boeing 707 landed at Bucharest Thursday carrying $140,000 worth of beds, boots, blankets and medicine. The agency said Saturday 12 tons of food and medicine arrived Friday from Moscow on an Antonov-12 plane, part of a $55,000 gift from the Soviet Red Cross.

The Romanian floods, which have affected every district in the nation, have been going on for more than two weeks.

FUNNIES

SO TRUE

SALT LAKE CTIY (UPI) — The weather beats everybody — even the weatherman.

Someone at the Essa Weather Bureau dourly inserted the following paragraphs Saturday in it's daily intermountain weather summary:

"The radar map this morning shows numerous showers over northern Utah, but most of the activity is over the mountains.

"These showers are due in part to the fact that a group of meterololgists are holding a picnic in Salt Lake City this afternoon."

CHESS FLOP

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — A computer which had been "trained" for chess matches for three years by a master lost four of its five matches to members of the Flint Chess Club.

The only match won by the computer, nicknamed "J. Bit", was against a teen-ager who was just learning the game.

"It was really kind of sad," said contestant Frank Terry, of Detroit, "It's programed to think two moves a second and sorts 1,800 possibilities for each move. But once, the poor thing spent 15 minutes on one move. It lost that one, too."

Brain Damage

BUDAPEST (UPI) — Imre Borsody, divorced after years of matrimonial warfare, decided to consult a new Hungarian marrige computer. He paid $13, fed the computer his personal data, including his preference regarding an "ideal" mate — and got back the name of his ex-wife.

FE-MAILED

RIALTO (AP) — "As members of the Women's Army Corps you can choose training in many career fields," read the recruiting letter to male seniors at Dwight D. Eisenhower.

A civilian worker, a woman, had stuffed the letters, intended for female seniors, into the wrong envelopes, Sgt. 1.C. Carl White, recruiter at nearby San Bernardino, explained Thursday.

None of the boys tried to sign up.

BUTTERED

NOKOMIS, Ill. (UPI) — "Dangerous road. Slippery when buttered," might have been posted on a slice of Illinois Route 16 Tuesday.

The road was closed and there was a bit of a traffic jam while workmen washed 5,000 pounds of melting butter from the highway.

Truck driver Al Schmide said the bulk load of butter "dropped all over" when his trailer truck split in half after he hit a bump.

PREPARED

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Mayor Gerald Graves placed plainclothes policemen around the State Capitol Building to stop area crime.

Last Wednesday night, they grabbed a 19-year-old youth breaking into a parked car and stealing a tape recorder.

It was the mayor's car.

POLITICIMIST

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mrs. Raymond Broderick, wife of the GOP gubernatorial candidate, says some funny things happen on campaigns: "like being introduced recently at a meeting as 'the new governor's next wife.' "

Her husband is the current lieutenant governor of Pennsylvania.

POPE HIKES VATICAN PAY

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI raised Vatican salaries by 10 per cent Saturday and financed the increases by ordering the sale of more than $1 million worth of Vatican-owned real estate and stocks.

He also pegged the pay increases to the Italian cost of living and created a Labor Ministry to deal with employees' grievances.

The pay raise, the third in 11 years and the second granted by Pope Paul in 18 months, covers everyone working at the Vatican from gardeners to cardinals — but not the Pope himself. He has no fixed salary.

TWIN RAIDS KILL 15

Egypt Troops Hit Israelis at Suez

United Press International

Egyptian army troops crossed the Suez Canal twice Saturday, attacking Israeli armored columns in the vicinity of Port Fuad in twin raids that killed at least 15 Israeli soldiers and destroyed three tanks and four other armored vehicles, an Egyptian military spokesman said.

One Israeli soldier was captured in each of the raids, he said, and the Egyptian forces returned safely each time without casualties.

THE SPOKESMAN said the first raid was launched at Midday against an Israeli column near Ras Elesh, 10 miles south of Port Fuad in the canal's northern sector. That raid touched off a seven-hour battle, he said, in which two Israeli tanks and two armored personnel carriers were destroyed, an unspecified number of their occupants killed, and one Israeli captured.

Shortly afterward, the Egyptians attacked another Israeli column near El-Tina, 16 miles south of Port Fuad. In that battle, the Egyptian spokesman said, one Israeli tank and two other armored vehicles were destroyed and 15 of the column's 16 soldiers were killed. The other was captured, he said.

The raiders were supported, he said, by Egyptian artillery and antiaircraft guns on the west bank of the canal that shelled the columns before the raiders struck and repulsed Israeli warplanes that flew to their assistance.

Earlier Saturday, an Egyptian guerrilla group reported its commandos attacked and destroyed Israeli military installations and a communications network along a front more than a mile wide in the Suez Canal's northern sector.

IT WAS the 10th Egyptian commando thrust reported into occupied Sinai since Egypt began its "spring offensive" last April 18.

The spokesman for the "Arab Sinai Organization," a government-backed Egyptian guerilla group, said its forces also destroyed Israeli supply routes at Al-Balah in the northern Suez sector.

FREIGHTER CAPSIZES; ALL BUT ONE SAVED

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — The captain and five of six crew members were rescued Saturday from a capsized 115-foot island freighter 60 miles southeast of St. Thomas, V.I., the U.S. Coast Guard said.

The sixth crew member was still trapped aboard the vessel, the Charlestowne, said the spokesman. Preparations were under way to rescue him.

Capt. James Brin of Rio Piedras, P.R., was the only survivor identified. The Coast Guard cutter Point Ward from St. Thomas picked up all the rescued seamen.

A U.S. Coast Guard plane spotted the vessel about four hours after the 6 a.m. alert by the ship's radio operator, who said: "We're sinking."

The six men were seen clinging to the side of the vessel.

AF Power Plant Produces High Output Without Smog

By GILBERT BAILEY
Contributing Editor

SUNNYVALE — A "total energa" electrical power plant is producing enough electricity for a city of 60,000 here, but equally important, the plant produces no smog.

The 12 turbine generators service the United States Air Force huge Satellite Test Center here where tiny fluctuations in electrical current can cause grave errors in computer programs which, among other jobs, track U.S. moon flights.

"All we release is heat and a little steam," said Major H. S. Brown, Air Force engineer in charge of construction of the plant. The contractor which designed and built the plant is Solar, a division of International Harvester.

"BOTH PUBLIC and private utilities, including Pacific Gas & Electric and Southern California Edison, have expressed an interest in the process," Brown added.

Electrical power companies are facing nationwide criticism because the power plants produce pollution. Plants in both Los Angeles and Orange Counties have been blocked because of possible air pollution.

At times the public is being asked to choose between additional electrical power to run air conditioners and other modern gadgetry or clean skies.

The Solar power-producing systems uses polluted wastes within the system.

Waste heat is piped into recovery boilers where it is converted into steam to run absorption chillers, provide controlled humidification, heat the power building and generate hot water for a second building.

THE TURBINE generators are powered by natural gas with a standby diesel supply ready in case of emergency.

"We are not releasing any carbons or hydrocarbons," said Brown.

The generators are compact, perhaps six feet high and 20 feet long, and can be carried by plane. The Air Force plans to use the system for mobile power plants.

In addition, the generators are relatively quiet. They cannot be heard 300 feet away and thus could be used in residential neighborhoods.

Brown is convinced of the worth of the new electrical power system.

"It works," he said. "We've had our emission tested, and we're clean."

Breakdowns could cause pollution, but most electrical power plants now cause pollution without breakdowns.

SCHOOL FINANCING

Bond Issue, Override on Paramount Ballot

By RALPH McCLURG
Staff Writer

Electors of Paramount Unified School District supporting the proposed school tax override and bond election on Tuesday's primary election ballots have hopes the letters "P" and "R" appeal to the voters. They cite the need for additional local tax monies.

The proposed $1.5-million bond issue will be labeled Paramount Proposition "P" on the ballots, while Paramount Proposition "R" deals with the proposed 82-cent tax override that will run for a two-year period.

A TWO-THIRDS majority is required for passage of the bond issue, while a simple majority is all that is required for the tax override. This will be the second school financing proposal to be presented to the electors this year. On March 3, voters rejected by substantial margins a $1.75 tax override and an $8-million bond issue.

In 1966 voters turned down by a 5-1 majority proposals for a $1 tax override and a $5-million bond issue. However, this is the first such proposal that has not met with wide opposition.

Before Tuesday's election was called, a 10-man citizens advisory committee was formed to study the propositions and voted 9 to 1 in favor of the bond issue and split 5 to 5 on the tax override.

The committee, appointed by the board of trustees, represented various elements of the community and was headed by Richard M. Wilson, immediate past president of the Paramount Chamber of Commerce.

SPEARHEADING a campaign for a "yes" vote on both propositions at the upcoming election is a student committee of junior high school students headed by David Roth. Although operating without finances, and on their own time, the students are making posters and conducting a door-to-door campaign for favorable votes.

The student delegation presented a petition signed by 800 pupils to the Board of Education for permission to appeal for community support in the election. Dr. Raymond Bieln board president, commended the students for their interest, but pointed out that the trustees could not encourage such a campaign and could spend no school money for such purposes.

Paramount Unified School District is in a unique position, both geographically and economically. The City of Paramount forms the hub, or about 55 per cent of the district, with about 12 per cent each in Lakewood, Long Beach and Hollydale (South Gate), 5 per cent in Bellflower and 2 per cent in Downey.

The district has considerable industry for a tax base, but is surrounded by sizeable residential areas with the student ratio per home lrger than the normal district.

IN PREVIOUS school election campaigns in the district opponents of the tax increases maintained that they were not opposed to better schools and a good education for all children, but argued that "taxes should be realistic."

The district's current tax rate of $4.78 per $100 assessed valuation is in the lowest 15 per cent of all unified school districts in Los Angeles County.

The last time the district's electors approved a tax rate increase was in 1953, the time of unification. Dr. Bieln board president, said "the current proposals are only stopgap measures. We have the responsibility to provide an education for our children and by calling this election we have met it."

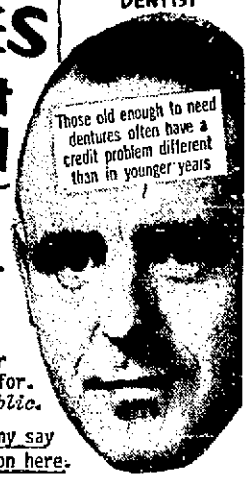

In working on the proposed 1970-71 fiscal budget, trustees have approved a 12-point school improvement program if the financing proposals pass and a drastic curtailment program if the issues are rejected.

If the electors turn thumbs down Tuesday, plans call for the closing of Grove, Roosevelt and Lakewood Elementary Schools. Seventh and eighth grade students at Paramount Junior High School will be combined with pupils of the same grades at Alondra Junior High School.

Reading in State Schools Rapped

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

"We must upgrade the quality of education for our children to prepare them for a life in which profound changes will come about . . .

" . . . Our children's record of achievement — particularly in such areas as reading and spelling — are far below standards which are acceptable."

So believes Dr. Julian Nava, who has built on these two points his campaign for the state superintendency of public instruction. He is one of a handful of serious contenders in Tuesday's primary election for a post held since 1962 by Dr. Max Rafferty.

Seeks Office

NAVA, a San Fernando Valley State College history professor, native of Los Angeles' Boyle Heights district, holder of a Ph.D. from Harvard University and a Los Angeles city school board member since 1967, proposes four points to upgrade that quality of education.

"I would try to implement on a statewide level," he says, "a number of projects which I have either initiated or supported as an elected member of the Los Angeles board of education":

— "To remove I.Q. tests for youngsters in the first three elementary grades."

Because, he adds, "Too often, I have found that young children are shunted into low achievement sections as a result of an early and imperfect I.Q. test. They will carry a stigma from that test with them throughout their school experience, or, even more imporant, fail to try to do any better."

— "To eliminate mandatory report cards for all elementary grades and establish optional substitute parent-teacher conferences to report on a pupil's progress."

— "To encourage the 'open class' or 'nongraded' concept in which several grades are combined. This type of plan gives small clusters of students the opportunity to advance as rapidly as their ability allows in a given subject."

— "To promote better school-community relations through advisory committees constituting a cross section of the school 'constituency'."

A World War II Navy aircrewman who credits the G.I. Bill of Rights for making possible his education, Nava has taught history since 1957 at SFVSC. He was founding chairman of Mayor Sam Yorty's committee to preserve the history of Los Angeles.

Listed in "Who's Who in American Education," Nava has been a Fulbright lecturer-researcher in Spain; and serves on the boards of the state colleges' Inter-American Institute, Community Advisory Council of UCLA, Constitutional Rights Foundation, Greater Los Angeles Urban Coalition, Charles Drew Postgraduate Medical School and the L.A. Chamber of Commerce's city beautiful committee.

As an educator, he takes positions on current heart-burning issues. Among these:

RACE RELATIONS. "A statewide policy on breaking down segregation and promoting integrated public education is absolutely essential as a guide for local school board."

The state Board of Education's guidelines remain a currently heated subject around the state. Those rules, which labeled a school racially imbalanced if more than 15 per cent of its enrollees were of minority extraction, were canceled in March by the board to clear the way for a new set of guidelines in June. This action, however, was rescinded by superior court order — leaving the question up in the air.)

Nava contends that "quality education requires that we strike down racial and ethnic barriers . . . and offer our children an opportunity to learn with — and from — youngsters of different backgrounds, races and beliefs."

As a means to this end, he suggests that "federal, state and local governments pool their resources and knowledge . . . since only this kind of cooperation will achieve integration and better education for all."

During the interm before this pooled effort is developed, he proposes "creating special classes at all schools to study cultural differences in an academic atmosphere. Special guests, parents and community leaders would be encouraged to participate in after-school-hour seminars to advance racial and ethnic understanding."

FINANCING EDUCATION. "We must look outside traditionsl sources for the funds to support our elementary and secondary school systems," he says.

"I believe that we should increase the severance tax on oil companies removing oil from our state . . . I believe we should demand new accounting procedures from the insurance companies, who have often been able to minimize their tax liabilities by deducting over-inflated anticipated losses."

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

As we discussed last week, a Cultured Pearl Necklace (or strand) is one of the most ideal gifts to bestow upon a woman. Cultured Pearls can be worn anytime, for any occasion, with any dress or outfit and will always be appropriate. There are three standard lengths: choker (16" in length), matinee (1½ times the choker length), and Opera (twice the choker length). They come in single strand, two strands, called double, and three strands, called triple. Thus, the terms would be: the choker, meaning single strand 16" in length, or double choker, which is two matched strands, etc.

In evaluating a particular cultured pearl necklace, you should utilize the same principles you have learned when judging a diamond —the size of the pearls, the quality of the pearls, the color of the pearls, and most important, the uniformity of the pearls as to color, size, and quality in the necklace. Remember, the average chocker contains 40 to 50 individual cultured pearls. That is why the uniformity of matched color, size, and quality is so important.

A choker strand of cultured pearls may range in price from $10.00 to $10,000.00 depending upon the above factors. Matinee would be $15.00 to $15,000.00 and Opera would be $20.00 to $20,000.00, because matinee is 24" long (1½ choker strands) and the opera is 32" (two choker strands).

We are most fortunate to have the widest selection of cultured pearl strands available. Our buyer travels to Japan at least once a year to buy pearls directly from the growers. We buy these pearls in "hanks." When they arrive at our main office, they are graded as to size, color and quality. Then graded pearls are individually strung with a knot between each pearl. This is important. Should a strand break, (which is a rarity) you are protected. You would only look for one or two pearls, the remainder being knotted, they will not fall loose. Remember to look closely at the strand you are desirous of buying to make sure each pearl has been separately knotted.

For helpful hints as to the color, size and type of strand you should purchase, read next week's article.

Tenant Unions Strike to Win Recognition

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

On a recent spring day, a tired old bus lumbered up the winding, rustic slopes of Palos Verdes Estates and let out about 30 persons with picket signs in front of a handsome stucco home at 1609 Via Arriba.

The house, a trilevel structure with a Spanish-style roof and a courtyard in front, sits atop a high bluff overlooking beautiful Santa Monica Bay and is conservatively estimated to cost $150,000.

Its resident-owner is a businessman named Jay Lennon, an official or director in two firms that manage and own extensive rental properties in Long Beach and other nearby communities. The companies are Cannon Development Corp. and Southern Property Management Corp.

For two hours, the 30 men and women walked up and down the sidewalk in front of the Lennon home and distributed leaflets to neighbors who had come out of their own houses to see what the fuss was all about.

There was a certain classic incongruity about the incident: a passel of poor people leaving their own shabby homes to travel 30 miles and picket the manor of their rich landlord — or one of them at least.

Scene From Time Past Reenacted...

It might have been a scene out of a Russian novel, or something Clifford Odets might have dramatized in the 1930s. Only now the milieu was sunny Southern California, and the year was 1970.

"We are here today," the strikers had said in their open letter to the residents of Palos Verdes Estates, "to protest the slum conditions maintained by your neighbor Jay Lennon.

"Some of our apartments are infested with rats and cockroaches, some have broken plumbing, some have leaky ceilings, some have broken windows, most need painting badly, and all our apartments need decent furniture."

On other occasions, the strikers have also complained bitterly of the management's allegedly harsh and punitive policies in evicting tenants, seizing their private property and otherwise intimidating them.

In a case described by one man, the management took his estranged wife's belongings and locked her out of her apartment even though she was pregnant and had missed only one of her biweekly rent payments.

It's actions like these, the strikers say, that have enraged so many of them and brought them to the point of rebellion.

The neighbors of Jay Lennon had only the word of the pickets to go by, but the demonstration in Palos Verdes Estates May 7 nonetheless caused a flurry of tongue-wagging in the lovely peninsula town.

More than that, it opened some eyes to a phenomenon that has been sweeping the country in recent years and has finally and stubbornly come to rest on Long Beach's own doorsteps: the rent strike.

Rent strikes first cropped up in some of the large metropolitan areas of the east and then spread westward. In a tight housing market, perhaps it was inevitable that they would spread to Long Beach, where the shortage of low-rental housing is acute to the point of being critical. For without alternative places to move, tenants are often left to the mercy of indifferent or cynical landlords, say tenant union representatives. Under these circumstances, they feel, the tenants are forced to seek redress through collective action.

Spokesmen for Cannon and Southern Property have been reluctant to talk to newsmen, but in the brief and guarded moments when they have, they have flatly denied the strikers' complaints and placed the fault entirely on the tenants' shoulders.

Rent Strikes First Appeared in the East

As for evictions and property seizures, the companies have felt it necessary to take such actions when the tenants have been unduly delinquent in their rent payments, says a company spokesman. "You do have to run it on a businesslike basis," the spokesman declares.

Some residents, moreover, have taken the company's side and also blamed the tenants.

"I've lived here on and off for three years," said one woman who asked that her name be withheld, "and I've had no trouble with the landlord. "One time," she said, "they painted the place the day I moved in. They gave me brand new furniture and they came to fix a stopped-up sink."

Moreover, she added, she has had no "mouse or bug problems," although she conceded there are water bugs in her ground-floor flat. "But that's usual," she explained.

As for the strikers, "they're irresponsible and derelict in paying their rent," she asserted.

Several days before the picketing of Lennon's home, I took an unannounced tour of an apartment complex managed by Southern Property at Fifth Street and Maine Avenue — part of a small section of the city that lies in neglected isolation just east of where the Long Beach Freeway begins.

I found the two buildings dirty and inferior; the halls were dark and their walls stained. The grounds outside were eyesores of neglect and filth. And on the side of one building, there was a frightening crack in a second-floor railed balcony.

Inside, most of the apartments I visited were mean and small; their curtains were made of paper-thin plastic; their carpets looked worn, and the company furniture was sparse and tacky.

Spokesmen for the apartment house industry here generally claim that tenants unions are avoidable nuisances. "Maintain your units in the proper manner, (or) you may wake up some morning to find a tenants' union ready to give you a helping hand," wrote James Harmon editor of the Apartment News Publications.

Bernhard J. Specht, president of the Long Beach Apartment House Association, told an industry meeting recently that "slumlordism" is a cancerous growth caused by a combination of neglect and poor management. He said tenant strikes give the whole apartment house industry a bad name.

Two months after Specht's talk the small band of pickets showed up at the Lennon home in Palos Verdes Estates — and the fact became apparent that tenants unions had become a permanent institution in Long Beach.

For some weeks prior to that, tenants at the Carmelitos Housing Project had been conducting their own strike against the County Housing Authority; and in January of this year, a brief strike took place at an apartment complex at 6921 and 6931 Long Beach Blvd. — property owned by Larry Smith of Westminster.

Although the two sides in the Long Beach Boulevard strike appeared to reach an amicable agreement, with the manager promising improvements and repairs in individual letters to the tenants, the dispute now gives signs of flaring up again.

In each of the three strike situations, the tenants have been drawn together by a common sense of frustration over the failure of their respective managements to provide what they consider decent living conditions and make reasonable repairs. And they've employed what has not become the classic weapon of embittered and organized tenants everywhere: rent withholding.

'There Are Water Bugs, of Course...'

(The rent money is usually placed in a trust fund so that the tenant doesn't get the idea that he's in the strike to get a

ALAS, JUST A GAME

Kilted Lads Beat Redcoats

The Fraser highlanders battled the British Saturday, routed the redcoats and seized their cannon, then staged their traditional games at Round Potrero in the rugged Santa Ana Mountains.

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

SUNDAY, MAY 31, 1970 SECTION B — PAGE B-1

The "victory" celebration was the largest-ever turnout of the Clan Fraser Association, to which those with the surname Frazer, Frazier, Frizzell and assorted other spellings can belong.

The sun-bathed meadow, its oak-studded rim sheltering dozens of picnickers and campers from California and Arizona, was the focal point for the weekend's reunion and fun.

Traditional games such as the caber toss, hammer throw, throwing the axe, throwing the stone, fencing and cudgels, were seasoned with musketry, sword dances, piping, the Highland Fling and a drumming contest.

Men in kilts — of a dozen clans of the Scottish highlanders — were cheered into competition by their women and children and friends.

The "battle" with the British was new this year.

It was joined after the redcoats laid down a barrage with two cannon; "planted" explosives were detonated to halt the advance of the doughty highlanders, but the clansmen could not be stopped. Overwhelmed, the Britishers fled in a rout after losing half their men to the advancing sharpshooters.

First to "die" on the highlanders' force was Lynn Frazier, a Torrance school principal. The redcoats were routed when their commander, Kirby D. Wise of Ehrenburg, Ariz., was felled in battle.

CAMPUS disorders backlash, which produced a negative vote on 19-year-old voting in Oregon, has some manifestations around here. One is a letter to Gov. Reagan, expressing indignation at student anarchy, which has been making the rounds for signatures at McDonnell-Douglas and other airframe manufacturing plants in the area.

William E. Holz, 1018 E. 10th St., a sponsor of the effort, figures that no less than 2500 of the letters have already moved. He says he has personally talked to over 100 without finding one person in disagreement.

The letters produce a list of demands: Expulsion of students from state schools who participate in demonstrations prohibited by college rules; dismissal of faculty members aiding or abetting such demonstrations; removal of non-students from campuses if they engage in rule-banned activities; firing of administrators who do not enforce the above conditions.

In the end, the letter-writer pledges to vote against all school bonds until such demands are met.

THE demands, it seems to me, are reasonable. The final condition is imprudent, and would be better if qualified a bit.

Voting willy-nilly against any school financing measure, no matter how vital it is, ranks along with the mindless destruction of school property by dissidents who don't like a war in Asia. In both cases, innocent people are hurt.

Still, it all shows exactly what is occasionally discussed here—one extreme action produces a contrary extreme. The wild minority on the campuses has been playing its dangerous game for a long time, and now comes the inevitable kickback.

JESS still has some work to do.

I called information and asked for the number of the Unruh for Governor Headquarters on Pch.

"How do you spell it?" asked the girl.

Incidentally, she could give me no number, and neither could an info gal I called the next day (though she could spell Unruh.) Some of Jess's friends think there's something suspicious about this. A political campaign hdqtrs. isn't likely to be unlisted. Here's somebody who wants to be called.

BASEMENT of the Bank or America at Fourth and Pine is windowless, of course, and a young woman named Karen McQuade is doing something about it.

Karen works in the chief teller's office down there. When other staffers deplored the lack of a window, she went to work producing a painting depicting a pleasant rural scene. It will be hung on the wall with appropriate window frame and drapery.

The young teller studied art a couple of years in N.Y. and obviously knows how to use her talent.

TIME was when any kind of a detonation was immediately tabbed. People would look at each other, nod, and someone would say "sonic boom."

Now, nobody is so sure. It could be the kids up at the college, proving their educational advancement.

A bow to Will Rogers Jr. High students, who staged on Thursday a day of patriotic observance. Said a note from the Student Council: "We think this is timely because so many Americans . . . have no respect for symbols and traditions that have made America great. We think it is time for students at Rogers to stand up and be counted. . . ."

CSLB Students Explain Youthful Protests, Find Many People Listen

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

"It's amazing how many people in the suburbs are really hungry to talk to students . . ."

"We've had very few doors slammed in our faces . . ."

"Even when you run into a whole block of grouchy people, just one good conversation makes your day a success."

Students from the Community Information Committee (CIC) at California State College at Long Beach were evaluating their two weeks of door-to-door encounters with townspeople.

They are part of a corps of 200 students who have been ringing Long Beach doorbells each day since President Nixon's military intervention in Cambodia and the National Guard slayings of four Ohio students.

Some withdrew from their classes to carry on the effort.

"We were looking for alternatives between demonstrating and doing nothing at all," said CIC worker Dave Huff.

"Most of us favor quick or immediate withdrawal from Indochina and rational solutions to campus problems. Most people on campus agree. But we have to reach voters in the city in order to change things."

The students say they generally found townspeople more receptive than they expected. And they believe many townspeople have altered their views of students.

"I doubt we've completely changed anyone's mind about Cambodia or campus problems," says Bill Payne, a 22-year-old political science major. "But a lot of people we talked to are going to be more receptive to students and different points of view."

CIC students have had both good and bad experiences while making their daily rounds.

Payne said he talked to one North Long Beach man in his 50s who had been laid off his job and found time to read up on current events for the first time in his life. The more he read, the more he found his life-long opinions challenged.

He went on to more serious reading, including DeTocqueville's classic "Democracy in America."

But he found difficulty integrating what he read with what he'd believed all his life. He had no one to help him — until Payne rang his doorbell.

"We talked a long time about politics," Payne said. "I invited him to visit us on campus. He came up and had a long talk with our adviser, Prof. Michael Ormond, about politics and DeTocqueville."

More typical was an encounter between CIC worker Charlene Kowal and a Long Beach housewife.

"We disagreed about Cambodia, President Nixon and almost everything else," Miss Kowal said. "But we had a good talk. When I left, she told me that the next time she sees a violent campus demonstration on TV, she'll realize it involves a minority of students."

Another woman was less cordial.

DRAMA OF LOST FREEDOM

Voices Take Journey Into Black History

By PRESTON REESE
Staff Writer

Too bad so many people missed it.

The Friday night performance of Voices Incorporated's "Journey Into Blackness" left nothing to be desired but an audience.

The enthusiastic response from a well-dressed racially mixed crowd of 200 almost compensated for the 1000 vacant seats at the Long Beach Concert Hall performance presented by Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities.

Perhaps blinding footlights hid the rows of empty seats from the performers and kept their onstage morale high. Most likely though, it was the professionalism displayed by the road troupe of 11 amateur actors that resulted in the outstanding performance which traced, in song and dance, the history of American blacks.

The six man, five woman ensemble originated in Newark, New Jersey, as a teaching "tool" whose purpose was to perform and produce artistic works relating to black life in Africa and America. Their current production "Journey Into Blackness" was written by Jo Jackson.

The curtain rose with a slow drumbeat amid shouts of "Uhuru!" to reveal a cast colorfully costumed in African robes.

"Nana Aeru," a wedding song, "Shango," a tribute to the god of war and "Bayaza," the god of good fortune, were all brilliantly choreographed and with a perfect orchestration of voices, painted a strong, peaceful picture of African village life.

The first scene ended with the arrival of the slave ships, women's screams, and a warrior with an imaginary spear in hand, perched at the edge of the stage.

After a blackout, the cast, who were chained together by their own extended arms, entered the next scene: arrival in America.

"Where is My Freedom," the first words spoken in English, started as a soft chant, swelled into a gospel-like melody, then faded into another blackout.

A "slave auction" followed, leading to scenes depicting the humor and frustration of plantation life. A notable performance as "auctioneer" was given by display executive, Ben Carter, one of the production's most versatile actors.

Field hand rumors of a "Train to Freedom" introduced "Swing Low Sweet Chariot/Steal Away," all superbly performed by the group in dramatizing the birth of the underground railroad. Finally, "Free at Last," announced the arrival of northern troops.

The second half of the performance dealt with the present: migration to Northern slums was illustrated in commanding narration by Jesse De Vore, one of the group's founders, "We were like children following the pied piper into the walls of the ghetto." Ben Carter's poignant "I'm Leaving Memphis," introduced the birth of the blues.

Life "up North" centered around Sunday with church-goers living in "the excitement of the moment." A campy church parody replete with funky gospel music and a convincing portrayal of "the preacher" by Jesse DeVoren may have alienated some whites who hadn't heard the real thing on Sunday morning radio, but nonetheless educated them, the sole purpose of Voices Educational Services Inc.

"But what the preacher didn't take on Sunday I got Saturday night," Ben Carter, now a nightclub pianist, told the audience in relating "Nightlife's" role in relieving ghetto depression.

Conveying all the sweet sadness of Bessie Smith, Billie Holiday, and the lot of black women in general, La Rynne La Mar's "I Woke Up This Morning" extended further the blues element.

A dramatized civil rights picket line which erupted in a squabble of different means to an end: militancy, Democratic reform, Christian pacifism, resolved itself before the three-hour show closed with De Vore's speech to the audience, "Let us make sure you understand, we were divided once but never again . . . many different paths but all leading to freedom . . . divided from our families . . .

Cast: but never again

. . . divided from our brothers

Cast: but never again

. . . divided from our countries

Cast: but never again."

Voices Incorporated will make a return appearance in Long Beach July 17 during a month long tour of Southern California.

Mississippi decency

VIEWING AMERICA FROM Algeria, black militant Eldridge Cleaver says there was greater national concern about the Kent State shootings than there was about the Jackson State shootings. He blames white racism.

He is wrong, as wrong as a white man would be who charged that black leaders who spoke out on the Jackson State shootings were guilty of black racism. Decent men and women, black and white, are concerned about both cases.

WE WERE ENCOURAGED that President Nixon ordered an exhaustive investigation of the Kent State slayings and that Attorney General John Mitchell demonstrated his concern at the Jackson State slayings by visiting that Mississippi school.

We find further evidence that this country has reservoirs of decency in a speech by Wallace Dabbs, the press secretary to Mississippi Governor John Bell Williams.

Dabbs said he can understand why many Mississippi Negroes "just don't trust us." He pointed to a history of white violence in his state that included a case in which three civil rights workers "were murdered in cold blood — and some members of the participating mob were members of law enforcement organizations."

IN THE JACKSON STATE shootings, highway patrolmen without riot training may have overreacted to student taunts, Dabbs suggested. He said Mississippians must consider whether the individual patrolman is to blame — "or perhaps his superiors who placed him in the situation which resulted in his predicament."

There is plenty of blame to go around among students and highway patrolmen, so it is especially honest of a top aide to the governor to suggest that state officials may have to bear some of the blame too. That ought to be a sign to Eldridge Cleaver — and the rest of us — that the soul-destroying corrosion of racism has not spread as far in this society as some have believed.

The Quiet Campaign

GOVERNOR REAGAN claims that proponents of Proposition 8 were unfair in using a recording of an old statement by him to promote the proposition, which would accomplish something the governor was once for but is now against.

The California Teachers Association suggests that opponents of Proposition 8 somehow pulled a fast one when state college trustees went on record against the proposition this week.

GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE Kenneth Hahn says candidate John V. Tunney violated federal laws because one of his campaign organizations was set up as a corporation and corporations cannot legally contribute to election campaigns for federal officials.

Tunney says another man in the race, Rep. George Brown Jr., misused hihs congressional franking privilege to send postage-free material to voters all over California.

Only the complaint against Rep. Brown seems even moderately serious to us, which suggests that this has been an unusually well-behaved primary campaign. We hope the general election campaign is as peaceful.

He'll keep his hat on

A CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS says he's going to wear a hard hat until the June 2 primary "to show his open support" for construction workers.

He presumably is supporting construction workers who beat students in New York City in an attack that has been criticized by everyone from Mayor Lindsay to Vice President Agnew and Governor Reagan.

Sometimes the only thing a hard hat wearer demonstrates is that he has a soft head.

IN MEMORIAM

Can California help nation avoid future Vietnam wars?

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Many legislative proposals have an import far beyond the language contained in the bills themselves. An example is Assemblyman John Vasconcellos's bill challenging the constitutionality of this nation's involvement in the Vietnam war.

According to the legislative counsel's analysis of the proposal, it would "prohibit inhabitants (of California) from serving in any foreign area where armed hostilities are being conducted which are not an emergency, unless (the) United States Congress has declared war in such area."

ON THE SURFACE, the bill appears to deal solely with the question of whether or not a president has the authority to send American troops into offensive military action on foreign soil. But the measure contains many other ramifications.

It is, for example, an attempt to rechannel the energies of young protestors of the war into efforts into the "system." As one proponent of the bill put it, "Even if the bill fails, it is important that people learn that our system provides the machinery for a fair examination of such a question.

"If the system can't stand this kind of self-examination, then perhaps the kids are right when they say it has failed."

The bill was given its initial hearing last Wednesday by the Assembly's government administration committee. Arguments for and against the measure concentrated, for the most part, not on the merits of the bill but on its legality.

Which was peculiar because the prelegislative vocations of the seven members of the committee — dairyman, union officer, pear grower and cattle rancher, teacher, businessman and teacher, school administrator, and, finally, lawyer — would not seem to make it qualified to consider such a question.

THERE WAS SOME discussion about whether the bill could be given a proper hearing before such a committee instead of the Judiciary Committee, in which seven of the eight members are lawyers. It had been assigned to the Government Administration Committee in the first place, Assembly Speaker Robert T. Monagan said, because that is the committee to which bills dealing with military affairs are routinely sent.

By the time the legal emphasis of the bill became apparent, it was too late to change, he said.

But as the testimony unfolded, it became apparent that the bill had been sent to the right committee. Despite what the proponents said, the bill is highly political in nature, and to attempt to judge it on purely legal terms is improper.

In the unlikely event the bill passes both houses and is signed by the governor, the question it will force the state attorney general to lay before the United States Supreme Court is legal in nature.

BUT THE DECISION on whether the state of California should ask that question in the first place is a political decision.

The posing of the legal question is comparatively simple. Article 1, Section 8 of the U.S. Constitution states, "The Congress shall have power . . . to declare war . . ."

The President has no such power. But over a period of time, the Congress has permitted the chief executive to assume the authority that goes with the power to declare war.

Proponents of the bill want the Supreme Court to force the return of that authority and power to the Congress.

Especially in this time of nuclear weaponry, it was argued, the Congress — a constitutional synonym for the people — should have the final word on whether to launch an offensive.

Actually, it was argued further, the bill will probably have very little effect on the war in Vietnam, even if it is passed and even if the Supreme Court rules that the presidential powers were exceeded when American troops were sent there to wage offensive war.

THE COURT'S DECISION would most probably be patterned after the famous 1954 Brown vs. Board of Education ruling, in which desegregation of schools was ordered "with all deliberate speed."

And President Nixon says he is already proceeding, in effect with all deliberate speed, to end our involvement in Southeast Asia.

But such a ruling might prevent future Vietnam-type involvements by future presidents. That would not seem to be a bad idea.

Free speech: there ought to be a law

WASHINGTON — This is the season when the President and members of his Cabinet usually show up at the university graduation exercises to explain the facts of life to the departing scholars, but this year things are a little different. The graduates are explaining the facts of life to them.

The President and most members of the Cabinet, accordingly, are not committing themselves in advance, and avoiding the main academic war zones this year. Vice President Agnew is speaking at the West Point commencement, Secretary of Defense Laird at the Air Force Academy, and Secretary of HEW Robert Finch, in an adventure of unexampled bravery, will be talking at Arizona State, San Diego State and Ohio State. But Attorney General Mitchell, and Secretaries Rogers, Kennedy and Romney are sitting this one out, and the rest of them are avoiding the rebellious Liberal Eastern front.

WHO CAN BLAME them? Commencements used to be merely a bore; now, with the attorney general on the platform, they could be a riot. The vice president and the secretary of defense should be safe enough at the military academies, where they can get air cover, but even the President could have a hard time at most of the large universities in the nation.

Considering the level of past official commencement oratory, most of it constructed out of old department handouts by weary press agents, this year's drought could be a welcome relief, but it really is disgraceful that the President and the members of his official family can no longer go on to most large campuses in the lands with assurance of civility or even security.

This is one of the oddities of our present legal system. In recent years, the Congress has enacted specified federal remedies for interference with the right to employment, to housing, to vote — but no adequate remedies for interfering with the citizen's most fundamental rights under the First Amendment.

When the Eisenhower Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence in America recently made an extensive compendium of federal civil rights laws, it found that there was only one ancient statute that even attempted, however inadequately, to deal with government denials of the First Amendment rights of free speech and press, the right of peaceable assembly and the right to petition for the redress of grievances. And there was no statute whatever to deal with the private bully-boys who break up or shout down Cabinet members or private citizens making perfectly legal public speeches.

FORTUNATELY, THERE is now a bipartisan effort to correct this oversight. Rep. William M. McCullough, the wise ranking Republican member of the House Judiciary Committee, and Rep. Hale Boggs, the Democratic whip from Louisiana, have agreed on a bill that would authorize federal court injunctions and damage suits against both official and private interference with the exercise of First Amendment rights.

This bill, entitled the First Amendment Freedoms Act, would authorize federal court suits for damages and injunctive relief against any official or private person seriously preventing another person from exercising his constitutional right even to talk nonsense.

Thus, under the Boggs-McCullough bill, a sheriff's posse would be liable if it broke up a legal meeting of the Black Panthers, and equally the Black Panthers would be subject to damages if they broke up a speech by a member of the President's Cabinet, or by Gov. Maddox of Georgia.

The idea is that everybody has the right to speak out without being blocked by the police or timid university officials, or campus thugs who talk like Communists and act like fascists, or anybody else. And maybe by next year's graduating class, if Milton Eisenhower, Bill McCullough and Hale Boggs get a fair hearing, we may have the President and his official family and anybody else the students want, back on the big campuses again.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

The surgical suite

EDITOR:

This letter is in response to one by Robert Gumbiner, M. D. In this letter, all hospitals were accused of gouging the public. One instance cited by the author was that of the operating room. It was stated that anesthetists charges were for one-half hour while the hospital charged for one hour operating time for the same case. The public should know that considerable time is required to prepare the room before the surgery starts and that each room is meticulously scrubbed after each case and before the next case starts. Each night the entire surgical suite is cleaned from top to bottom again. These costs must be paid for.

The author also alleged gouging by not discharging the patient on time. Can you imagine a recuperating patient sitting in the lobby for several hours because relatives couldn't pick him up until 2 o'clock instead of 11 o'clock when the hospital day ends? The doctor must have frequent requests in his large practice from patients who want to stay until a husband or wife gets off work to pick the patient up. I am sure the late lab work with overtime charges alluded to is frequently ordered by the doctor in making his evening rounds and finding charges in his patient during the day, orders lab work for the evening. This is for the patient's benefit and not to make more money for the hospital.

Our hostile youth

EDITOR:

When the news comes on and mentions "hostile crowds, hostile youths," I know what hostile means.

A month ago at 10:30 a.m. I passed a young couple obscenely necking on a downtown Long Beach street. I said, "Shame! Why don't you do that in private?" in a calm voice.

The young man turned, gave me a look of pure hate, and started to come toward me. Just then a motorcycle policeman passed by. The couple saw him too, and walked away. The young girl laughed.

What can we expect from this generation? Sex bums describes most of them. They are sex oriented, by the movies, books, music, the fastback cars. The whole bit. The sexy sixties.

Learning about sex today is quite different than in the '30's, '40's and even '50's. Family doctor books, Haveleck Ellis and others, now musty on bookshelves, are too tame.

Maybe that's why the youth of today is so hostile: Too much free sex — and dope. From now on I shall look the other way when I see their disgraceful acts in public because I couldn't care less about today's youths.

Teacher's complaint

EDITOR:

On March 21 I was offered a contract of employment as an English teacher with the Los Angeles city schools. I signed the contract and returned it, very pleased that I had secured a teaching position at a time when teaching jobs are difficult to obtain.

Before signing the contract, I received advice from people connected with the school district since the contract was offered just before the teachers went on strike. I was told that the signing of the contract would definitely guarantee me a job.

The contract itself states that "failure to fulfill a written agreement constitutes a breach of contract which can cause the loss of future employment with the Los Angeles City Schools and may even result in credential revocation." I fully understood my obligations when I signed the contract.

On May 14, just one day after the teachers' strike was settled, I received a registered letter canceling my contract and all others for new teachers because of a "reduction in budget."

How legal is this procedure? Why was my half of the contract "legally and ethically binding" while that of the school district was not?

Unless someone presents satisfactory answers, my opinion of the Los Angeles city school system will not be a very good one. I am indeed disillusioned.

The bazooka shells that killed the Israeli children were "made in the U.S.A.". We have a long finger reaching out to pull the triggers of the world, not caring what the cause nor who the victim.

Pointing the finger accusation at our enemies' trespasses no longer serves to conceal our own guilt. "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Charlie, NOBODY serves hors d'oeuvres like YOU do!

A new moon for old Paleolithic Tech

ONE NIGHT in the Dark of the Lost Moon a hairy couple named Og and Moo were sitting around their cave in the Escarpment Apartments, a condominium with a view.

Og was sharpening his hunting ax with a chip of flint and Moo was absently stirring reindeer soup and listening to the Ten O'Clock News broadcast from the next apartment.

"Isn't it awful!" Moo exclaimed.

"Hunh?" Og answered, running a wet thumb along the edge of the ax.

"THOSE CRUMBY RADICALS at Paleolithic Tech have just burned down another Tree of Knowledge," Moo went on. "Oh, I do hope Llewellyn VI wasn't involved. It would be so embarrassing if he got expelled just a week from graduation."

"Hush, Woman!" Og growled. "Somebody is coming up the path. I hear the roll of a stone."

A scrambling noise approached. Suddenly a slouching figure loomed in the firelight. Og stared and slowly lowered his ax. He recognized that somewhere under the whiskers was Llewellyn VI.

Moo rushed to embrace her son. Og spat in the firepit. "Whatinell are you doing home during final exams?" he asked when he could bring himself to speak.

LLEWELLYN DETOURED around Og and squatted against the far wall of the cave. "Speak up!" Og commanded.

"Try to understand, Dad," the boy said. "Ever since the battle with the Red Men in the Valley of No Return campus life just hasn't seemed relevant. What good does it do to study Advanced Fire Worship and Witchcraft IV if you can't count on them when you need them?

"Tell the truth, Dad. Can I escape the draft if I sacrifice a bison to the God of Peace? You know he's only working part time."

"Bite your tongue!" Og yelled. "I never thought the shadow of a coward would fall in this cave. Where would you be if we had let the Red Men climb out of the Valley of No Return to take over the escarpment? Do you think you would be free to sit around fanning the breeze with your free speech at Paleolithic Tech? The young radicals would be the first ones they'd pitch over the side."

"BUT DAD," Llewellyn argued, "this year it was the Red Men. Ten years ago it was the Big Feet. Next it will be the Blue Faces. Where will it all end? You don't seem to realize that the Tribe of Escarpment dwellers is getting a bad name everywhere. The other tribes are calling us imperialists."

"They didn't call us imperialists," Og roared, "when we beat back the Black Jowls at Bellow Woods and saved the starving Blue Faces with a feast of mammoth. The world couldn't pay us enough honor in those days."

"Times have changed, Dad," the boy said. "The Black Jowls have abandoned the warpath and are busy selling buffalo hides and bone necklaces. Today everybody on the campus is giving the Sign of Peace. In fact, just two suns ago the Moon Worship III class demonstrated at the Roll Out the Tomtom Cave. Some of us almost laughed when the Master of the Drill ran away so fast he forgot his spear."

"You dumb musk ox!" Og yelled. "How will you become a Leader of Men if you don't learn the drill at the Roll Out the Tomtom Cave? And what were the Wise Men doing while you were invading government property?"

STERLING BEMIS

"One of the Wise Men threw the first stone, Dad." Og snorted in anger and yanked his beard in frustration.

LLEWELLYN VI talked on rapidly. "Dad, you shoulda seen it. We rolled out the tomtom all right. But instead of 'Escarpment Sons Never Shall Be Slaves' we came up with a new chant: 'Hellnowewon'tgo!' It was groovy, Dad. In fact, we have formed a new group. We call it the Cave Rockers. Ur, Oop and Unga on tomtom. Me on rawhide strings. Tog twanging his nose . . ."

Og gave a threatening growl, brandished his ax and ran around the firepit to make a sweeping pass at Llewellyn. The sharp edge clipped two strands from the boy's hair. However, the tangled mass blunted the blow.

By the time Moo quit shrieking Og had calmed down enough to stumble to his bed. He turned around three times and made a nest in the buffalo robes. But before he went to sleep he spoke in a low, resigned voice. "I'm going hunting with the boys at First Light. We've tracked a mammoth to the Land of the Wind. With enough spears we can chase it over the cliff."

HE STARED at Moo. "If Llewellyn VI is still here at First Light he is going over the cliff with the mammoth. The New Moon will rise on the eve of graduation day. It will shine on the young men at Paleolithic Tech. Our son will march with them and he will get his skin from the Wisest of Men and he will bring it to this cave and he will put it over his bed."

The rest was lost in snores.

Hunched over the fire Moo ladled steaming liquid into a red seashell. "Come," she said softly to her son. "The reindeer soup will warm you on your way back to the campus."

The bored, adolescent professors

WHY ARE SO MANY professors ready to drop their academic pursuits at the drop of a Molotov cocktail? The concern over American policy in Cambodia, understandable as it is, is only the latest of a variety of reasons that professors have given for abandoning education for political propaganda, going on strike and urging their students to go on strike.

Pastry chefs, machinists and psychiatrists go on with their work despite crises, national or international. But there seems to be a class of professors just itching for a chance to quit work for something more exciting. They can get away with it because they don't punch a time-clock. Shielded by the charitable permissiveness of department heads and deans, they manage to get paid whether they teach or not.

Or they can "reconstitute" their classes on economics or literature into discussions of Cambodia (about which they are as well informed as the average thoughtful shoe clerk or bank manager) and claim they are "teaching." Any criticism of such activities is repudiated as an "attack on academic freedom."

MOST PROFESSORS ARE deeply committed to their subjects — so wrapped up in them indeed that they have been stereotyped as "absent-minded" by the rest of the world because of their absorption in their work.

Professors who are eager to go on strike, however, seem to be almost of a different breed. Bored with their work-a-day tasks, they can be diverted by any movement or fad that is claimed to be "in," "relevant" or "groovy."

Many young social scientists and liberal arts teachers are bored with their subjects because they go into their fields not through commitment, but by drifting into them. They were bright students in college. They got graduate assistantships and fellowships with ease. Soon they got their advanced degrees and found themselves professors merely by following the line of least resistance.

THESE ARE THE PEOPLE who entered school at kindergarten and 30 or 40 years later are still in school. They have never been out in the adult world.

To these aging adolescents a strike is not what it is to a laboring man the grim struggle to get a living wage or even the attempt of well-paid workers to get a bigger slice of the pie. A professors' strike is romantic beyond belief. Unlike strikes of plumbers or operating engineers, a professors' strike is entirely altruistic — to protest racism or the draft or Vietnam or to affirm solidarity with the oppressed of all the world. And such a strike is in principle incapable of being settled, because what is demanded, such as ending racism in America, is far beyond the power of any college administration to grant.

So the San Francisco State College professors' strike of the winter of 1968-69 was a costume play in which grown-up children were playing grown-up grown-ups. "When the strike began," wrote a lady sociologist on strike, "we were mostly prissily clad professionals in office clothes. Now it looked like the casting office of a Brecht play. Heavily bearded men in rough clothing; ladies in boots, pants, heavy sweaters . . . The union lawyer surveyed us with grim satisfaction, 'I can see you guys are really a tough bunch.' And we all roared back cheerfully 'Yes, we're TOUGH!'"

THERE IS A GENERAL rule for faculty clothing for this kind of playacting: the more genteel the subject-matter, the more roughneck the clothing. Philosophers look like longshoremen. Poets look (and try to smell) like mule-skinners.

But you can tell when a professor loves his subject and means business. The following memo was sent by a teacher of biology at San Francisco State to all his students in the midst of strike talk:

"1. Whether or not students wish to continue to attend classes has always been a matter of their freedom of choice.

"2. At the end of each semester I turn in grades and sign the roll sheet. This is my certification that the students so listed have completed the required course work.

"3. I cannot in good conscience grant a student credit for a course if he fails to complete it.

"4. Therefore it is my intention to meet my classes when they are scheduled, where they are scheduled, and for the purpose of the subject matter of these courses."

The student who brought me Professor J. Russel Gabel's memo was radiant. "Here's a professor who really cares about his subject," she said.

I was glad to be able to tell her that most of our professors are like that. But unfortunately not all.

Ballot Recommendations

THERE MAY BE some confusion for voters in the instructions for machine voting. The voting instructions say: "Remove the ballot card from the gray envelope." This means the gray envelope you will receive at the voting place — not the gray envelope you received at home containing your SAMPLE ballot.

Since I am recognized as a Republican I will not presume to recommend candidates on the Democratic ballot. I recommend a vote for each of the incumbents on Page 1 of your ballot. With no incumbent for secretary of state, I will vote for Millias. For attorney general on Page 2, there are four qualified candidates on the Republican ballot. I will vote for our local candidate, George Deukmejian, because he is well qualified and has served us well as assemblyman and senator. For the Board of Equalization on Page 2, I recommend Frank J. McCarty. I will vote for incumbents on Pages 3, 4 and 5.

Non partisan offices will be found on both Democratic and Republican ballots on Pages 6, 7 and 8.

On Page 6 — Judicial Office No. 8, I will vote against the incumbent, Judge Gitelson, because of his Los Angeles School desegregation decision. It did not specify busing but its wording left no other way to meet the drastic provisions. I feel Judge Gitelson leans too far in favor of the left-wing Civil Liberties Union in his decisions. I will vote for William P. Kennedy for Office No. 8 also. For Office No. 11 on page 6, I will vote for David Aisenson.

Pages 7 and 8 include three nonpartisan offices. There is an incumbent seeking reelection for each office. If any one candidate fails to receive a majority of all votes cast for the office the two receiving the highest vote will compete in a runoff election next November. I will vote for the incumbents on Tuesday's ballot.

On pages 9 and 10 you will vote for or against the eight state propositions. I have discussed these measures in previous columns. I will vote for the first 7 issues and against Prop. 8. Prop. 1 calls for a $246 million bond issue to finance medical school facilities on the University of California campuses. They are greatly needed because we are not training enough doctors to replace those who pass away or retire. For this reason I feel Prop. 1 deserves a FOR vote.

Prop. 2, 3, 4 and 5 are to bring our state constitution up to date, delete many antiquated sections and make it more understandable. In my opinion these changes are important and are presented by the commission made up of leaders from all parts of the state who have studied these changes over a six-year period. In my opinion all five deserve a YES vote. I will vote yes on Prop. 6, which has been discussed before in this column.

PROP. 7 WILL PERMIT the state to raise interest rates on state bonds from the present 5 to 7 per cent. This is essential to sell bonds — already voted — which cannot be sold at 5 per cent in competition with the very high rates given on other type bonds. If we do not do this we will delay our essential water project and probably pay for it in greatly increased taxes on a pay-as-we-go basis. I will vote yes on Prop. 7.

Prop. 8 is the most controversial issue on the ballot. It is sponsored by the teacher and county supervisor associations. It would call for the state to pay 50 per cent of school costs and 90 per cent of welfare not paid for from federal funds. It is supposed to reduce property taxes. But it does not so specify. It simply shifts some of these costs to the state — which would have to increase sales, income and other taxes by $1.2 billion, which would probably be more costly than the present system. And we have no assurance property taxes would be reduced— because schools and county government have so many projects to take up any saving that may come from the shift. These arguments have been given in detail in two previous columns. It is on this basis I recommend a NO vote on Prop. 8.

Camp Plan 'Scratching Round for Boys'

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

Picture yourself as a boy of 13. It's a hot summer evening, and you're sitting on your front porch on California Avenue in Long Beach's Central District, feeling restless.

The sun hasn't quite set behind the wooden apartment across the street, up from the sidewalks, has kept you indoors most of the day.

So you're sitting there in the pink twilight, getting ready to wander down the street to look for some friends, and in the meantime, you're thinking over an offer that you picked up last Sunday in church, with the youth group.

A man, a stranger to the church, had come to the meeting. He made his pitch, and he came on pretty good. The man had offered every guy there between 11 and 16 the chance to get together and spend a week in the mountains, and for free.

The San Bernardino Mountains, 5,000 feet up. No flat ground because it's all pine woods and valleys and rolling meadows. Sleep in a tent, get up in the early morning chill when the sunlight's gray-blue through the trees, start a fire, cook your own food. Do what you want to. All free.

Then you remember what you thought as soon as the stranger introduced himself. And you decide you don't want any part of it.

Sound absurd? Probably, yet if your're the representative of the Long Beach Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America, you'll believe it, because you'll have heard the response before.

"We conduct a non-scout camping program each summer," said Bill Hayes, director of support services for the council, which encompasses Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill, Bellflower and Dominguez.

"We try to encourage young boys from 11 to 16 years of age to come to our camp. We want to put them in the Boy Scout environment," he said.

The recruiting drive — for that's how it benefits the Boy Scouts — has been "fairly successful," according to Hayes, considering the fact it focuses on "the inner city of Long Beach."

About 60 youths have responded to scouting's offer for this summer so far, Hayes said, "and we're really scratching to get those. It's hard to educate them that scouting is not really panty-waist."

"We also make this opportunity available to any of the youngsters in the Carmelitos area," added Hayes. "We tried that three years ago, and now we've got a Boy Scout troop going there.

"Once they see the camp, it's: 'Gee, I can go back? Wonderful!'"

The camp is Camp Tahquitz, 640 acres of beautiful mountain country in the Barton Flats area, completely surrounded by U.S. National Forest.

Nearly 2,000 Boy and Explorer Scouts are expected to spend a week at the camp, which opens June 21, sometime during the summer.

At Camp Tahquitz, those boys will find that nearly every outdoor activity imaginable is available to them, said Hayes. There are now 16 campsites ready for use. All have access to an olympic-size swimming pool, and Jenks Lake, where rowboats and canoes are maintained for the scouts.

The camp's trading post deals in craft materials of all sorts, and scattered throughout the campgrounds are activity areas where scouts can try their hands at archery or skeet shooting, or work on woodsmanship skills in places like the axe yard or the rope yard.

According to Hayes, all of these areas have qualified instructors to conduct classes with the scouts, so "most of the kids who go up during the summer gain a new skill as well as having a good time."

"But," said the scouter, "we don't put any emphasis on advancement. We just let them know that these things are available." The ideal situation, he added, is to have the scoutmaster come to the camp with an idea about how his troop would like to spend their week. "Then we can tell them: You tell us what you want to do, and we'll set it up for you."

The camp has four different five-mile hikes laid out around its grounds, and most groups that come to Tahquitz make one overnight camping trip to areas off the beaten track such as Slushy Meadows or Dollar Lake.

"And we've got a Mountain Man program for kids 14 and up, where they go back-country for the whole week with pack animals and everything," said Hayes.

In the back country areas, the official said, the boys will enjoy themselves, but they may also work with the U.S. Forestry Service developing campsites and trails.

"It's not all fun. That kind of thing means work too. They never come out unless the pack animals are completely laden with tin foil and other trash."

"All of this is available to anyone, scout or not, who comes up. All they have to do is ask," Hayes said.

It costs $24.50 for a boy to spend a week at the camp, he explained, and the money furnishes all supplies for the week except tents and cooking gear, which the youths must bring themselves.

"But in the event that a boy or his parents are not in a position to pay for the experience, we'll see that he gets to go at little or no cost, depending on the situation.

Yet instilling the desire to spend a carefree week at Camp Tahquitz is proving to be a problem, and not just in "the inner city" of Long Beach.

The entire Long Beach Area Council is now serving about 32 per cent of what scouters call "the available-boy crop" within their boundaries, Hayes pointed out.

Although there are 16 active scouting units in the city's Central District, school district figures studied by scouters show that in "the inner city," only 16 per cent of the available-boy crop are opting for the Boy Scouts of America.

THE COUNCIL has created a special "Inner City Committee" to study the problem, said Hayes. "And we have hired a professional scouter to work in that area exclusively."

Hayes believes one reason behind the lack of response to the non-scout camping program, and scouting in general, in the Central Area may be "a large number of fatherless homes."

"So," he said, "these kids need the program, but there are no male adults to bring it to them: now we're trying to get volunteers to go in from other areas of the community."

Elsewhere, Hayes said, the council is on a declining rate as far as the available-boy crop goes. More school district statistics have shown scouters that the number of scouting-age boys in the council's area simply is not what it was 10 years ago, he explained.

"SO, FOR US, it's more of a holding-your-own situation."

But Hayes believes that once a boy goes to Camp Tahquitz and experiences the feeling of freedom that the mountain camp can give — and the streets of the city cannot — the trail is all downhill and easy.

"If they don't come back and say: 'Gee, Ma, it was great! I want to go back', then we have failed. But that doesn't happen very often."

Postal Delegates Elect Auxiliary Officers Today

About 200 delegates to the state convention of the National Postal Union convention in Long Beach will vote today for California auxiliary officers, before closing the meeting's final session.

Saturday, delegates met at the Golden Sails Inn to hear speeches by Rep. Glenn M. Anderson, D-Torrance, Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Huntington Beach, and David Silverglied, NPU president, who outlined the unaffiliated union's goals for the 1970s.

The convention, which opened Thursday, will adjourn this afternoon following installation of officers.

Organized Tenants Withhold Rent

free ride at the landlord's expense. Moreover, there's the practical matter of having to draw on the fund for back rent when that becomes necessary, or when the strike is concluded.)

To rent withholding, the tenants have added demonstrations, picket lines and public lobbying. At the same time, each of the unions has employed the services of the Legal Aid Foundation of Long Beach, a poverty war agency. Significantly, not a single one of the roughly 200 strikers directly involved in the three Long Beach disputes is known to have been evicted as a result of strike activity.

Another form of sophisticated assistance — in the way of planning, logistics, legwork and research — has been provided by a few young people whose salaries also come from the federal government: Volunteers In Service to America, or VISTA, another antipoverty agency.

That Legal Aid and VISTA are helping the tenants is invariably a sore point with the landlords, who see their tax money working at cross-purposes to their own interests.

It has been particularly galling and "disgusting" to Waller Hicks, chairman of the County Housing Authority's board of commissioners. To Hicks, it's a question of the right hand of government fighting the left.

The housing authority, moreover, sees the landlord's time-honored prerogatives being seriously challenged by the tenants, and it naturally presents the challenge. In the case of the private landlords, the strikes have had the additional effect of reducing and possibly (in the case of small landlords) wiping out their profits. Little wonder then that they've taken a hard line against the strikers.

At Carmelitos, where the strike is now in its fourth month, the situation is one of stalemate, with no end in sight. What began as a protest over cockroach infestation and a host of other grievances, including inadequate recreational facilities, poor stoves and bad street lighting, has since become a battle for union recognition.

The union is demanding, for example, that its representatives sit down with management officials and jointly hammer out a new lease — in effect, a collective bargaining agreement similar to those negotiated by labor unions and employers.

Increasingly, in fact, it is becoming an axiom of strike policy in Long Beach that union recognition take precedence over all other demands; for without it, union leaders say, there's simply no way to enforce an agreement.

"We'll bargain as an organization now or not at all," declares Mrs. Judy Stanley, head of the Tenants Rights Organization striking Cannon and Southern Property.

"We need to be recognized as a group, and we need our grievances accepted as a group," adds Mrs. Bea Bohnenkamp, whose Carmelitos union actively represents 120 of the 712 units in the project and has the sympathy of many more, she says.

In short, the union is saying, the tenants must share the power and responsibility of running Carmelitos with the managers—a demand that understandably stiffens the backs of the five housing commissioners.

"In some areas, the (union's) demands are legitimate," declares commissioner Hicks. "But the prerogatives (they're insisting on) extend too far," he says.

Yet the strikers say there is ample justification for seeking a large voice in the operations of Carmelitos. And they point to a set of guidelines in the Housing and Urban Development Department that has its origins in a precedent-setting memorandum handed down by former assistant secretary of housing Donald Hummel in March of 1968.

The memorandum called on housing authorities to undertake "a searching examination" of their policies, give more attention to the residents' "dignity and privacy," and allow greater tenant participation in project management.

On the surface the strikers in both the Carmelitos and Cannon disputes have little to show for their efforts. And every day the strikes continue, they lose more and more faith in the power of established institutions to help them.

"But if they have less faith in the establishment," declares Legal Aid attorney Max Voigt, "they have more faith in themselves." In that sense, he and others say, the strikers are winning every day.

Students Explain

go Seven," she told Miss Kowal.

Tim Drury, a business administration major, said his most disappointing exchanges were with townspeople who said they didn't have an opinion.

"They just don't want to be bothered. They say they're not interested."

Payne found many Long Beachers holding "an almost childlike faith that anything their government does is OK, despite all its errors throughout history. Some people even told us we had no right to peacefully petition our government for change."

CIC divided the city into 20 different areas. Students began methodically canvassing each block in assigned districts. They still have a lot of ground to cover.

"On our best day, we had 500 students in the field," Payne said. "But now there's going to be a slump. Finals are coming up, then summer vacation."

Huff, one of the CIC organizers, says his greatest concern is sustaining CIC through the summer months.

HE HOPES to reach larger groups of townspeople with a speakers' bureau and involve nonstudents — housewives, for instance — in the effort.

He hopes that interested workers will contact CIC through Long Beach Post Office Box 3007.

But even if the effort can't be sustained, improved relations between students and townspeople should remain.

"A lot of people were enthusiastic that students would take the time to come and see them," said Drury.

Miss Kowal said she found many elderly citizens — particulary downtown — "who are very lonely and just loved talking with someone young."

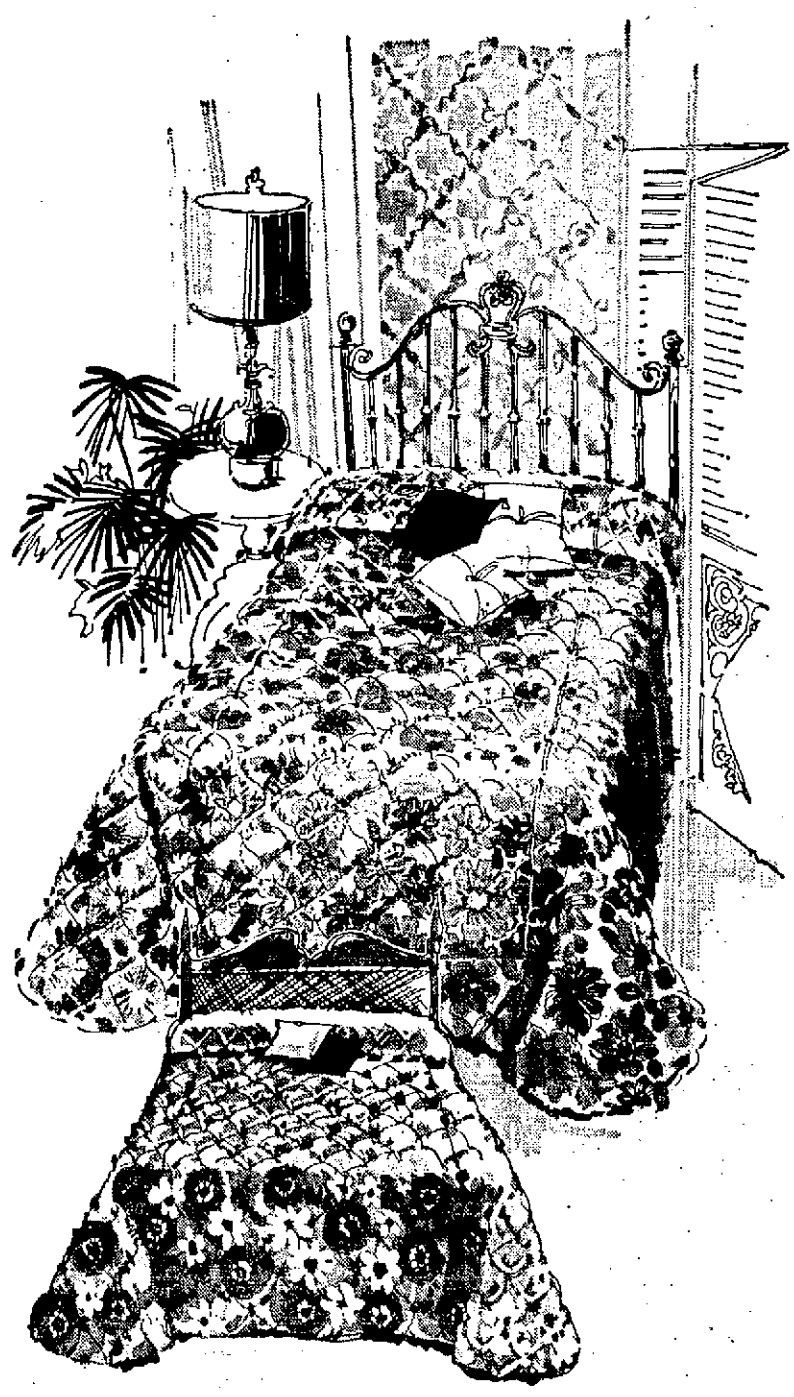

"A lot of people just didnt' understand that it was a tiny fraction of college students who favor burning buildings," Payne added.

Inglewood Man Jailed in Death of His Brother

A 24-year-old Inglewood man was jailed on suspicion of slaying his older brother at their home early Saturday.

Officers booked Robert Maher, of 10608 Condon Ave., after his brother, John, 25, was found shot several times in the face and chest with a 16-guage shotgun.

Lennox sheriff's deputies said the shooting came after a long dispute.

No Distress Frequency Radio Checks

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

Beginning Monday, skippers of pleasure boats who clutter the Coast Guard's emergency-distress calling frequency by using it to ask for a radio check will face the possibility of being fined and having their radio license revoked.

A Federal Communications Commission order adopted April 24 prohibits calls on 2182 KHZ to Coast Guard radio station for test purposes.

"Calls for radio check defeat the purpose of reserving the frequency for calls form vessels in distress," Rear Adm. Charles Tighe, commander of the 11th Coast Guard District, points out.

Effective Monday any call directed to the Coast guard on 2182 KHZ asking for a radio check will not be answered by the Coast Guard.

"Local Coast Guard units receiving calls identified as a request for a radio check will report the information to the Federal Communications Commission as a violation of radio regulations," the admiral said.

A spokesman for the Federal Communications Commission headquarters in Los Angeles said:

"Under Section 510 of the Communications Act, the transmitting of unauthorized communications on any frequency permits the Commission to call for the station originating such transmissions to forfeit its radio license."

"The act provides that, in addition to any other penalties, the operator making any unauthorized transmission may be subjected to a fine not to exceed $100," he added.

The new restrictions do permit general calls by ship radio-telephone stations for test purposes and permit required testing of compulsory installed radio-telephone stations on other than distress frequencies. Also permitted are requests for radio checks during inspections by FCC representatives or when qualified technicians are installing equipment or correcting deficiencies.

Orange Co. Expects Low Vote Turnout

Orange County has the largest-ever ballot, and probably the lowest voter turnout potential in its history, for the June 2 primary election.

County Clerk William E. St. John predicted "less than 60 per cent" turnout; he said he'd "make it exact; I predict 59.8 per cent."

There are 555,570 registered voters in the county, about 27,000 fewer than expected by St. John to be registered, and 25,000 fewer than were eligible to vote in the primary two years ago.

The county will have 1,022 precincts, including 35 "double" boards where two sets of officials will be assigned because of heavy registration.

The clerk's voter registration office, which runs the election, had 365 ballots to contend with, including a special ballot in the 35th Congressional District for the unexpired term of Congressman James B. Utt, who died March 1.

There are 426 precincts in the 35th Congressional District, which also has a "regular" election as well as the special ballot. The district extends into San Diego County; it has about a third as many precincts.

Returns of this balloting will be hand-counted, but all others will be tabulated by electronic equipment in the county clerk's office at 1115 E. Chestnut St., Santa Ana.

The county has two Coleman vote-tabulating machines which punch out cards for computer printout. St. John said the system will be slow because the county is "underequipped" for a ballot this size. The county is considering what kind of electronic equipment to buy, to speed up the count.

TABULATION of about 3,000 absent-voter ballots will begin at 8 p.m., when the polls close. Counting the ballots from the precincts probably won't begin until about 10 p.m. Tuesday, St. John estimated.

The wedding hostess

...adds another beam to brides' eyes

By JEAN SANDERS

Aide to the bride's mother?

Seamstress? Nurse? Diplomat? Minister-saver? Protocol expert?

Whatever the title at the moment, she's the woman who hovers out of sight in the vestibule arranging the bride's train or gently prodding father down the aisle.

Or you might find her in the kitchen, making sure the coffee is hot and the canapes are attractive.

Officially, she's known as a "wedding coordinator."

The title emerged some 10 years ago when churches began to realize that weddings were getting larger, ministers were devoting too much time to rehearsals, there was no one to turn to in the case of emergency.

There always have been big weddings, of course, but often at the expense of frazzled nerves on the part of the bride's mother and assorted kin involved.

Thanks to the gracious and enthusiastic church women who serve as wedding hostesses, the frazzle and frenzy have all but disappeared. And, although the approach to the job in their respective churches may vary, all share common attributes.

They revere tradition, enjoy their duties, firmly believe the wedding day should be a happy one and make every effort to see that the ceremony goes smoothly.

THE WEDDING HOSTESS usually meets with the bride and her mother several weeks — even months — before the wedding to work out details.

When a bride wants a wedding too elaborate for her pocketbook, the hostess tactfully offers alternatives. Some brides have idea zero as to what they want and eagerly accept suggestions.

Hostesses relieve the ministers by supervising the wedding rehearsal, sometimes taking the pastor's place if he has previously gone over the wedding vows with the couple in his study.

On the wedding day, she unobtrusively helps with countless details, from shooing in late arrivals and patching a torn veil with transparent tape, to overseeing the care and feeding of reception guests.

Most have handy an emergency box containing Scotch tape, needles and thread, extra buttons, safety pins, smelling salts or ammonia packets. Fainting is not unusual, even in these modern times. Bridesmaids and groomsmen do it fairly regularly.

Nor is the forgetting of wedding rings an experience limited to cartoons. (One 'forgotten' ring was found in the brides maid's bouquet.) Frequently rings have been hastily borrowed from guests in the front pew. Dorothy Betts, wedding hostess at Covenant Presbyterian Church, keeps several spare rings handy, just in case.

WEDDING COORDINATORS spend anywhere from three to nine hours on each wedding, plus additional telephone time with florists, caterers, and counseling on details with the bride and her mother. Some keep their fee as income; others turn it back to the church.

Does anything ever rankle these poised and quietly efficient women?

You bet.

Guests who bring their wedding gifts to the church reap comments like: "It's my pet peeve." "An awful nuisance." "People should know it's improper." They put up with it because there will always be guests who know no better.

Hostess' feathers also are ruffled when guests don't arrive on time. Most will hold the ceremony no more than five minutes and emphasize that the thoughtful guest will arrive at least minutes before the ceremony so that ushers don't have to do yeoman duty at the last minute.

Guests who linger outside having a last cigarette puff before making their dash for the church entrance evoke ire, too.

Barbara Dahl of First Baptist Church of Lakewood wishes wedding guests were more courteous about responding to wedding invitations.

"They may not think so," she says, "but it makes a big difference in ordering refreshments and arranging seating. There can be a lot of waste if people neglect to RSVP."

Other hostesses agree that although South-

FROM A CUTE LITTLE girl who loved horses and the outdoor life, Mrs. John F. Kennedy rose to number one on the Gallup Poll list of the Ten Most Admired Women in the World.

Story I

One day in January, 1952, John Husted Jr., took his fiance, Jacqueline Bouvier, to see his mother.

Mrs. Husted offered her prospective daughter-in-law a childhood snapshot of her son. "No thank you," Miss Bouvier said. "if I want any photos I can take my own."

Story II

In early 1961, while President John F. Kennedy was working on his balance of payments message to Congress, he explained to his friends that in 1960 American tourists spent over a billion dollars more on their trips abroad than foreign tourists had spent in the United States.

This sum, he said, was the biggest single item in the nation's deficit of international payments. A friend asked the President how he proposed to remedy the situation.

"Well, I have considered asking Americans to stay home next summer," Kennedy replied, "but how on

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Handsome Al Unser, who couldn't drive last year after a fluke accident, celebrated his 31st birthday a day late Saturday by riding his royal blue racer from the pole position to a front-running victory in the 500-mile speedway auto race.

Twice delayed by light showers, the Memorial Day classic started 67 minutes behind schedule. But once starter Pat Vidan waved the green flag, it was Unser virtually all the way.

A fiery three-car crash, which slowed the field near the end but produced no serious injuries, denied Unser a chance at a speed record.

The Albuquerque, N.M., speedster, competing for the fifth time, led 191 of the 200 laps before an estimated 300,000 holiday fans — the most domineering victory since the late Jimmy Clark of Scotland in 1965.

Unser, who figures to pick up at least $250,000 from a $900,000 jackpot at tonight's victory dinner, narrowly missed the speed record for the distance, averaging 155.749 mph. Mario Andretti, last year's winner and sixth Saturday, set the record 156.867 last year.

That three-car tangle in the northeast turn 28 laps from the finish — the only crash all day — almost certainly kept Unser from shattering Andretti's record, for he set speed marks for 20 and 30 laps and again from the 60th through the 170th laps.

Lloyd Ruby, who charged through the field from 25th spot to take the lead at the 50-lap mark, set the only other record, at the 125-mile standard.

Unser, runnerup to three-time speedway champion A. J. Foyt in 1967 and completing the grind for the first time, led the first 48 laps, Foyt led the next, then gave way to Ruby for two, and Mark Donohue, the eventual runnerup, led for one.

The leads changed quickly as each driver, in succession, went into the pits for the first of three mandatory stops to take on fuel.

Unser then led from the 53rd through the 100th laps, Foyt led the next, Donohue took over for four and it was Unser again sailing easily along in the lead for the final 94 laps.

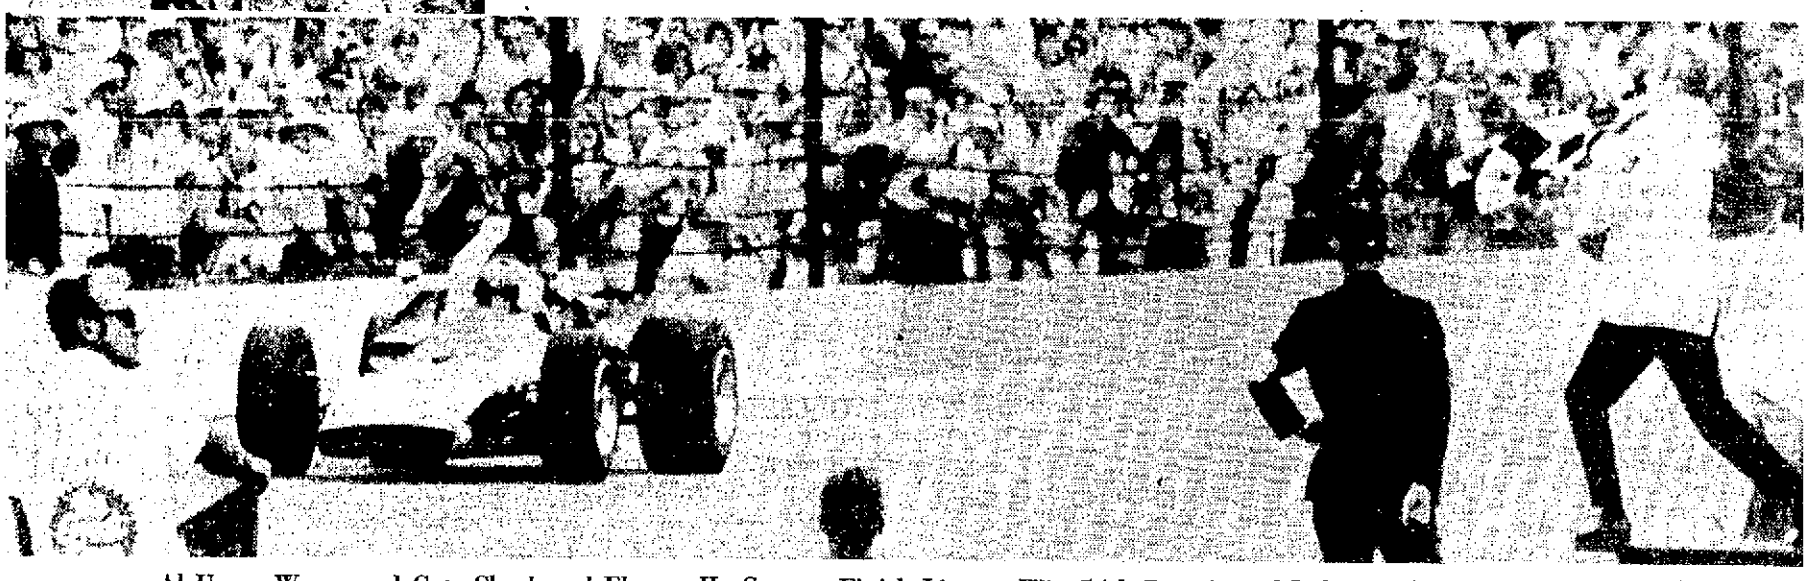

At the finish, Unser led Donohue, of Media, Pa., last year's speedway "rookie of the year," by 33 seconds.

Unofficially, Dan Gurney, Santa Ana, was third, followed by NASCAR rookie Donnie Allison, Hueytown, Ala., in fourth place, with Jimmy McElreath of Arlington, Tex., fifth.

The official finish will be posted by the United States Auto Club this morning.

Thirteen cars were running at the finish, but because of a minor accident on the parade lap of a false start, only 32 started, making it the first time

GRABBY RENEWS ACQUAINTANCE

Santiago! Dodgers Nip Cards

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

ST. LOUIS — "Santiago Guzman!" exclaimed Dodger third baseman Billy Grabarkewitz when told who the St. Louis Cardinals were pitching Saturday night.

"Hey, that's the guy I had the fight with," Grabby said with his wide Texas smile, "Man, did we have a brawl. I haven't seen the guy since."

It was with a great deal of relish, then, that Grabby crashed a two-run triple off Guzman in the first inning that helped propel the Dodgers to a 7-6 victory over St. Louis before 22,437 fans who braved reported thunderstorms that caused a one-hour delay of the game.

Grabby's triple spurred a four-run first-inning rally and it enabled Claude Osteen to earn his fourth win in a row and his seventh in 11 decisions. But Gomer needed ninth-inning help from Joe Moeller to save the win.

"It was in 1968 when I was at Albuquerque," Grabarkewitz said, beginning his account of The Fight. "We were in Little Rock and were way ahead, something like nine or 10 to nothing, and this guy Guzman was really mad. He shook off about five signs and I knew he was going to deck me. I got as far back in the box as I could but he got me anyway, right in the middle of the back. Then I didn't know what to do. But he was saying something in Spanish. I don't know what but it didn't sound good so I went after him. Man, we had a good battle out there."

Grabby didn't forget it, either, and when he slid into third base with his triple in the first inning he came up smiling. It wasn't such a laughing matter in the ninth inning when the Cards rallied for two runs and had the tying and winning runs on base.

The Dodgers took a 7-4 advantage into the ninth and, even after pinch-hitter Chuck Taylor doubled home one run with two out, the game appeared safe when Jose Cardenal lifted a high fly into short center. But Willie Davis was slow reacting to the fly and it fell among Willie, Maury Wills and Jim Lefebvre to score Taylor.

Moeller took over for Osteen but Vic Davalillo got an infield single to put runners at first and second. Lou Brock then fouled out to end the scare.

It was the second day in a row the Dodgers saw a 4-0 lead vanish but still came back to win.

Davis, who hammered out three more singles to climb closer to the .300 plateau — he's now at .293, singled in the first run. Grabby tripled to score two more and then scored himself on Tom Haller's single and Guzman was gone, the second consecutive night the Dodgers had kayoed the rival pitcher in the first inning.

The Cardinals stormed back with three runs in the third on singles by Julian Javier, Brock and Joe Torre and Richie Allen's double, the only hit the one-time Philadelphia bad boy has managed against the Dodgers in the two games.

But Willie D. and Manny Mota singled in runs in the

Johnson's Homer Fells Orioles Before 34,473

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Alex Johnson has a lot of things working in his favor. One of them is a beautiful flair for the dramatic.

For his first home run at the Big A, Johnson chose the seventh inning of a ball game which was tied at 2-2 Saturday night and the subsequent rumble of his bat produced the run which gave the Angels a 3-2 conquest of the Baltimore Orioles.

Johnson's shot, a towering drive, easily cleared the boards in right-center and made Tom Murphy, his chief benefactor, a six-game winner. It also broke a three-game Angel losing streak and enabled the club to remain 2½ games behind the Minnesota Twins.

Murphy, the man with the dancing slider and the devilish sinker, gallantly challenged the Orioles all evening in one of his gutsier performances. His tenacity, in fact, was happily reminiscent of his roommate on the road — Andy Messersmith.

He wound up with a pleasing six-hitter that thoroughly delighted a crowd of 34,473 on Cushion Night.

The crowd was the second largest of the season and only the 16th time the Angels have been able to lure more than 30,000 into the Big A.

The Angels entered the game with a frustrating string of 23 scoreless innings behind them but they finally broke out of it in the third when Oriole starter Tom Phoebus magnimously walked Alex Johnson with the bases loaded.

They could have hit the Orioles with a bunch but Jim Spencer popped up leaving three teamates high and dry.

The Angel lead lasted approximately five minutes. In the Bird fourth, Boog Powell, Friday night's hero, drew a walk with two out and Paul Blair lined a single to left.

Brooks Robinson, enjoying a bounce-back season after two sub-par seasons at the plate, then sent the Orioles winging to the front with a double to right-center. Murphy walked Dave Johnson intentionally and the play paid when Andy Etchebarren flied to left.

Brooks enabled the Angels to draw even at 2-2 in the fifth when he booted Johnson's hot smash for an error with two out to give the home team a foot in the door. Spencer coaxed Phoebus for a walk and Ken McMullen promptly delivered Johnson with a single that fell in front of Blair in left-center.

That was the end for Phoebus and former Angel Marcelino Lopez came on to get-pinch batter Billy Cowan on a foul popup.

Blair lashed his third consecutive single in the

BRYAN VS. RICHARDSON

City Golf Title Up Today

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Willard Bryan, the pride of the Geritol set, and Kemp Richardson, the perfectionist who can't quite master his shots or his temper, are the surprise finalists today for the Long Beach city golf championship at El Dorado.

The 47-year-old Bryan turned giant-killer Saturday and kayoed Dick Mortensen, 2 up, and Mike Fedderly on the 19th hole with a 2-inch birdie, while Richardson, 24, disposed of Dave Joyner, 5-4, and Steve Cook, 2-1.

Richardson's win over Cook avenged his father's first-round loss to the 21-year-old collegian, who had won the title at El Dorado in 1968 and took the favorite's role with a 3-2 morning victory over the tourney's hot shooter, Larry Benson.

Today's final will be 36 holes, with rounds starting at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. It matches men of vastly contrasting size and temperament. Their golf games vary mostly in that Richardson hits longer with less direction off the tee.

Richardson thinks he is playing poorly because he can remember his USC days when he was virtually unbeatable. At times Saturday he flashed his old form, but on other occasions he hit very bad shots.

Bryan, seven inches shorter than Richardson at 5-7 and 60 pounds at 135, made a few mistakes, kept the ball in the fairway and withstood constant pressure from players he wasn't supposed to beat.

A magpie who talks to his putts and often unnerves his opponents, Bryan shot a 1-under-par 71 to oust Mortensen and had the same score against Fedderly in a tense match that was dramatic to the end.

While Bryan was steady all the way, Mortensen beat himself by missing putts of two and four feet and one of only 14 inches

St. Anthony's Wants to Join the Club

In our efforts a few days ago to keep the five Long Beach public high schools in the Moore League instead of, as presently planned, shipping out Jordan, another factor has arisen.

St. Anthony's would like very much to join the Long Beach public schools in a six-team Moore League. Certainly it makes considerable sense to have all the Long Beach high schools in a city league, instead of, say, either Downey, Compton, Warren or El Rancho in the same conference with the Long Beach public schools.

Asked if St. Anthony's High School would want to participate against or with the other Long Beach high schools in all athletic events, Rev. Monsignor Ernest J. Gualderon, pastor of St. Anthony's Church, responded thusly:

"The answer is a definite YES. Brother Elvin, the principal; Mr. Jack Errion, the athletic director; the faculty, the coaches, and myself would highly endorse such an athletic program and league formation. We think it would be great."

"MY OWN REASONS favoring such a program are the following," continued the pastor.

"No. 1: We all live in the Long Beach community and therefore it would build a better relationship between all the high schools in this area. It also would build a better spirit of competition for all the high school students of the Long Beach area.

"No. 2: The competition here in Long Beach is the best and I feel that St. Anthony's High School can add to the quality of competition and also benefit from the same quality of competition which to my mind is the best."

Monsignor Gualderon's concluding remark.

"Thanking you for any assistance you give to this hope realization."

TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO, the Saints had one of the most powerful football teams ever seen in the CIF.

Nicknamed "The Golden Saints," the Catholic school's team romped to the CIF title and its entire backfield (Johnny Olszewski, Dean O'Hare, Billy Mais and John Peterson) enrolled at U. of California, Berkeley.

The time would have been ripe then for the Saints to link with the L.B. public schools in a much-desired city league.

Precedent is on the Saints' side. A complete San Francisco city circuit involving ALL high schools has been functioning with outstanding success for more than 30 years.

Now this year a Catholic school in the West Los Angeles area will join public schools in a smaller league than the Moore.

Kenny Fagans, the CIF's Southern Section commissioner, isn't adverse to having St. Anthony's or any other parochial schools joining a conference with public schools, although he admitted that "some problems would have to be ironed out." Fagans doesn't decide on these issues. The CIF council does the voting. Fagans can supervise and make recommendations, but he doesn't vote.

The idea merits consideration. We'd like to know your opinion. It might be important for the CIF to get an idea of how the public feels.

RECORD BOOKS don't recount such facts, but the odds here would be a million to one that anyone else has done the same thing as Ed Giles, former Poly High runner who now is performing for Utah State. Ed was the leading ground gainer for BOTH teams in the Aggies annual Blue-White spring game.

Injuries forced the Utah State coach to alternate Giles on both squads.

Ed amassed 55 yards in 13 carries for the Whites and 38 yards in 11 trips for the Blues, who lost 23-0.

In an accounting of the game, sports editor Kurt McGregor of the Logan, Utah Herald Journal, had this praise for Giles:

"He showed good ability to find the opening and make yardage. He also pulled in one pass and had the scouts present impressed with his speed and quickness."

The information was supplied by Willie Martin, who scored a few touchdowns himself during the ICBM (Irwin, Brown, Martin) days at Poly.

"JOHN WAYNE donated $5,000 for the Orange Coast College crew team, so maybe we can dig up a Paul Newman."

The speaker was attorney Rick Allen, who is concerned that Bill Lockyer's Cal State L.B. crew squad won't have enough finances to participate in the International Rowing Assn. Regatta June 11-13 in Syracuse, N.Y., against such giants as Harvard, Penn, Dartmouth, Rutgers, etc.

"This is the first time Long Beach has ever been invited," continued Rick, "and the kids feel they're ready for this one. But they need money."

Any contributions can be sent to Lockyer at CSLB or to Allen, 4201 Long Beach Blvd., L.B. 90807. If you show up with the usual required letter at the Century Club's meeting Tuesday at 5:30 p.m., Bill, you might get a helping hand there.

Beckert Gives Cubs Long Split

CHICAGO (AP) — Glenn Beckert hit a tie-breaking home run with two out in the eighth inning Saturday as Chicago outlasted San Diego 8-7 for a split of their holiday double-header.

The Padres took the opener 11-4 as Steve Huntz singled, hit a two run homer, doubled, walked twice and scored four runs.

The Cubs had overcome an early 4-0 deficit in the second game and forged ahead 7-4 before the Padres tied it with three runs in the seventh on doubles by Clarence Gaston and Al Ferrara, Ollie Brown's single and Ivan Murrell's double.

BECKERT

Brown's two run double high-lighted a three-run third, giving San Diego a 4-0 lead. The Cubs bounced right back with three in their half of the inning on an error, doubles by Joe Decker and Don Kessinger and Beckert's single.

Huntz belted his eighth homer in the second inning of the opener after Ed Spiezio doubled and Dave Campbell singled him home.

It put the Padres ahead 4-0 but Jim Hickman hit a three-run homer in the third and Kessinger's triple tied the score an inning later.

NEW SKIPPER HAS SAME WOES
Giants Haven't Outfoxed Foes

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Charley Fox, wrapping up his first week as a big league manager, used five pitchers, one less than his opponent, a pinch-hitter and two first basemen Saturday in guiding his San Francisco Giants to a 13-11 victory over Pittsburgh in a 35-hit slugfest.

Fox has a 5-2 record, but the Giants have allowed 49 runs in those seven games and he must be wondering if there isn't something besides skill involved in his job.

"Both sides were lousy," Fox said of Saturday's games. And defensively speaking, at least, he was right.

The longest any of the 11 pitchers worked was 3 1-3 innings (Giant starter Mike McCormick), and each club committed an error. Giant reliever Ron Bryant was credited with the victory when he managed to get the only batter he faced to hit into a double play. Bill Faul, purchased from Phoenix three weeks ago, got the last five outs and allowed only one hit.

The most effective Pirate pitcher during the three-hour, 41-minute game was rookie Jim Nelson, recently acquired from Columbus, who blanked the Giants over three innings and struck out four.

Hal Lanier's two-run double and a two-run pinch single by Bob Taylor keyed the five-run fifth inning which put the Giants ahead to stay.

Lanier's double came after Ken Henderson walked, Dick Dietz doubled and Tito Fuentes walked to fill the bases. It increased the Giants' lead to 7-3.

Taylor's pinch-single drove in two more runs and a triple by Bobby Bonds produced the fifth run of the inning.

But the Pirates, who outhit the winners 20-15, came back with three in the seventh, Bob Robertson delivering a pair with a single and Willie Stargell's run-producing pinch single cutting the deficit to 10-8.

Dietz stroked a bases-loaded single in the eighth before Fuentes came through with his first hit in the game.

Gene Alley's two-run single highlighted the Pirates' last-ditch comeback in the bottom of the inning before reliever Faul worked out of further trouble.

fourth and then Willie Crawford slugged his fourth home run of the season to lead off the fifth and it turned out to be the decisive run.

Osteen, who hurled 22 innings in three games before he got his first run but has now received 40 runs his last four games, breezed through 13 consecutive Cardinals before weakening in the ninth.

DODGER OF DAY

WILLIE DAVIS had three key singles and drove in two runs in Dodgers' 7-6 triumph over St. Louis.

It was another night of offense on the lightning-quick Astroturf, despite all the rain that fell off and on for a couple of hours before the start.

"They say the rain makes that stuff slower," smiled Walter Alston, the manager, "but if that's the case I hope it doesn't dry out. That's the fastest Astroturf I've seen."

DODGER DOINGS: Walter Alston, the patient manager, says he'll stick with Alan Foster another time or two despite the fact Foster has won but once in his last nine starts and hasn't completed a game since April 19. "We'll stay with Foster another start anyway but I don't want it to sound like it's a last chance," said the manager. "I guess I've been spoiled by the Koufaxs and Drysdales and Perranoskis I've had. You get to expect that from everyone and you don't always get it." One reason Alston is reluctant to remove Foster from the starting rotation is the fact rookie Sandy Vance faces military reserve duty in another week and could miss a turn or two.

Vance (4-3) pitches today's series finale with St. Louis, opposing the Cardinals' Mike Torrez (4-4). The Dodgers take a 6-1 Sunday record into today's game.

The Dodgers' 1,000th game in Los Angeles will be July 1 — barring rain, of course. The gimic is, fans who saw the first big league game in Los Angeles, April 18, 1958, and still have their ticket stub to Dodger Fan All The Way, Dodger Stadium, Los Angeles 90012. The Dodgers will return not one but two tickets free as well as the stub.

Jeff Torborg sat out Saturday's game with an upset stomach. Batting practice pitcher Carroll Beringer caught a line drive off the bat of Wes Parker in a pre-game batting session. He watched the game with a sack of ice on his right shin.

The Dodgers unanimously approved the basic agreement offered by the owners in a pre-game vote . . . Joe Torre opened at first base for the Cards, the first time he's played there since his high school days in 1958, except for a half dozen spring training games . . . Catcher Ted Simmons was called up from the Cards' Tulsa farm club, arrived a couple of hours before the game and found himself in the starting lineup.

OAKLAND (AP) — Don Mincher drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and his 12th homer of the season, leading Oakland to a 5-4 victory over Cleveland Saturday.

Mincher's two-run homer off Ray Moore in the seventh inning gave the A's a 5-1 lead, enabling them to withstand a two-run double by Tony Horton in the eighth and another Cleveland tally in the ninth.

YANKEES VICTIM

Twins Blow 5-0 Lead, Then Rally

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Cesar Tovar's game-tying home run and Rick Renick's two-run pinch single highlighted five-run uprising as Minnesota rallied in the last of the seventh Saturday and beat New York, 10-6.

Tovar started the big inning with his homer off Steve Hamilton, who had just come into the game after the Yankees scored three times in the top of the inning to go ahead 6-5.

With one out, Tony Oliva doubled and Harmon Killebrew was purposely passed. Shortstop Gene Michael then bobbled Rich Reese's grounder, loading the bases. Jack Aker relieved and surrendered consecutive singles to Renick, Leo Cardenas and Paul Ratliff.

Reese drove in three runs with his third homer and a triple as the Twins jumped on Stan Bahnsen for a 5-0 lead in the first three innings.

The Yankees pecked away at Bill Zepp for single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth. They went in front against Dick Woodson and Ron Perranoski on Danny Cater's single, Thurmon Munson's double, a two-run pinch single by Ron Woods and a run-scoring singe by John Ellis.

ONE DAY LATE, BUT...

Victory Lane Party for 500 Champion

Combined News Services

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — When his 31st birthday fell on the eve of the famed Indianapolis 500-mile race, Al Unser just postponed the party a day.

"I think it's going to be a good one tonight," he said moments after winning the world's richest auto race Saturday.

Unser, following one brother to victory on the same Indy oval where another died, dominated the 500 from the beginning to end Saturday and said he won with speed to spare

"I ran a very conservative race. I ran only as hard as I had to do to keep a cushion over the others," Unser said.

The youngest brother in the celebrated New Mexico clan said he ran into trouble only once, when a five-car pileup with just 60 miles to go spilled oil and brought out the yellow caution light.

"There was oil all over the racetrack," he said. "I did slide a little sideways but I didn't have any trouble. The second time I came through, a car was on fire and I simply went by on the infield grass."

Until the crash, Unser was running at speeds far above the record pace for the 500-mile race, but he said he eased up on the gas in the final miles to avoid any trouble.

"The yellow light ruined the record," he said. "But I'm still just as happy regardless. I still get to take the money home."

Unser's older brother, Bobby, 36, who won just two years ago, finished 11th Saturday. They became the first brothers team ever to triumph in the 60-year history of the race.

Bobby, who was driving closely behind Al in the middle of the race, said, "He was handling his car beautifully. It couldn't have been better. I'm very, very happy."

Al Unser became the first driver to start from the number one pole position and go all the way to victory since the 1963 race won by Parnelli Jones, the co-owner of Unser's car Saturday.

Jones had an insurmountable lead in the 1967 race when his turbine car failed with only nine miles left and his crew already waiting in victory lane. The former driver watched each of the final laps Saturday with mounting tension.

"I wasn't going to budge off that pit wall until I saw the checkered flag," Jones said.

Jones met Unser as he wheeled his sleek blue Johnny Lightning Special onto the black-and-white checkered carpet in victory lane, hugged the winner and kissed him.

"Beautiful, just beautiful," he said.

Unser, aware of Jones' fate three years ago, said, "In the closing laps of the race, I could feel all the little vibrations in the car. But we didn't have a bit of trouble. The car ran perfectly all day."

Like Bobby, Al Unser won in the sixth year after breaking into the 500 race. An older brother, Jerry, went over the wall in his only race in 1958, survived that accident and then died in a crash in practice in 1959.

Unser said he felt very confident of winning the race before the start Saturday, but said he tried to take each of the 800 turns during the long marathon with care.

He said, "All it takes is one little slip and you're history. That's what I had to watch all day."

Unser gave his crew and particularly chief mechanic George Bignotti a lot of credit.

"The crew was great," he said. "George was great — he's the greatest."

Unser said his main concern was early in the race when Johnny Rutherford, the second fastest qualifier, "hung close to my tail. It took me a long time to shake John. I was glad when I did."

Unser said he simply followed his instructions from the pit in stopping for fuel.

"I didn't know when I came in," he said.

"I wasn't sure until late in the race where all the cars were," he said, "but I could look at the board and see who was second and third."

It didn't really make much difference. Nobody could catch him.

since 1957 that the full field of 33 failed to start.

Jim Malloy, Denver, Colo., brushed the wall on the parade lap, then hit it again apparently when a torsion bar broke. In 1957, only 31 started when Elmer George and Eddie Russo collided on the pace lap and were declared out of the race.

Cars driven by Ronnie Bucknum, Capistrano Beach, Calif.; Roger McCluskey, Tucson, Ariz., in relief for Mel Kenyon, Lebanon, Ind.; and Australian Jack Brabham collided in the northeast turn and McCluskey's caught fire.

Spilled fuel also blazed across the track and, although the three drivers escaped unhurt, the wreck caused the yellow caution flag to be displayed for nearly 18 minutes.

The field had to dodge into the apron grass to keep going, thus slowing the pace to below record speeds.

Ruby, Wichita Falls, Tex., was black-flagged because his exhaust was throwing black smoke. In all, the yellow caution flag was displayed for 23 minutes and 45 seconds.

ONLY the first five went the full distance. Andretti, in sixth place, was flagged down at 199 laps.

Bobby Unser, the winner's brother and the speedway champion two years ago, was 11th. Al's triumph made the Unsers the first brothers to win in the 54-year history of the race.

Johnny Rutherford, Fort Worth, Tex., and Joe Leonard, San Jose, Calif., were other early challengers. But Leonard's engine conked out after 75 laps and Rutherford, the second-fastest qualifier, went out after 130.

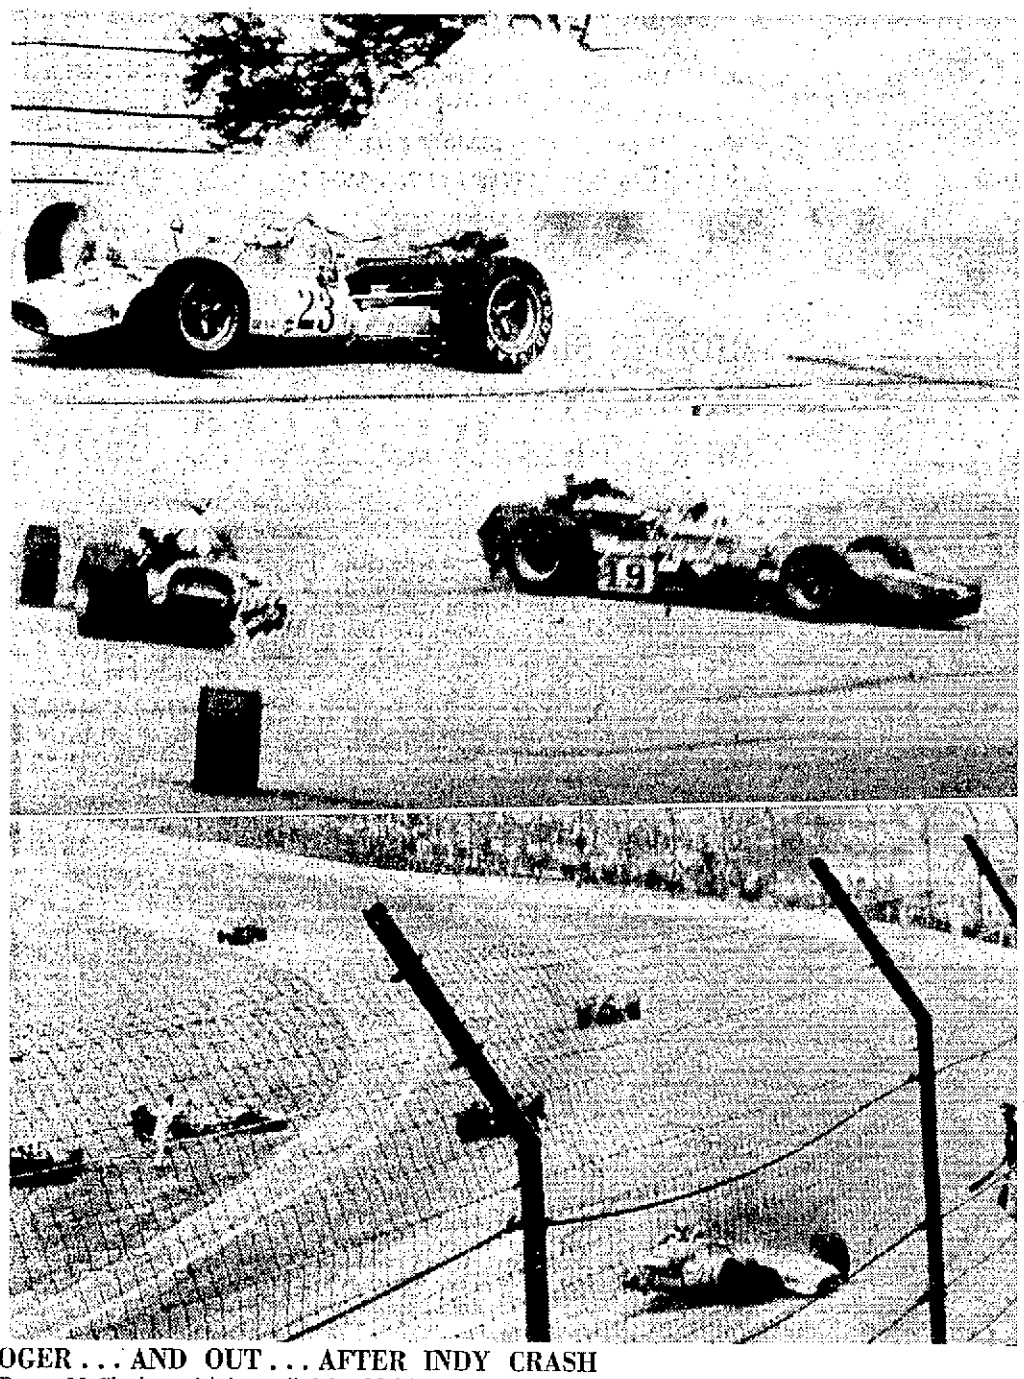

Unser also became the eighth pole-winner to roll into Victory Lane — the first since Parnelli Jones, now his car owner, in 1963. Unser won the pole as the fastest first-day qualifier at a speed of 170.221 mph.

With 45 laps to go in Saturday's grind, Unser had a 49-second lead over Foyt, then running second. But when the green light came out again following the three-car collision, Unser lapped Foyt, and barring mechanical problems or an accident, Unser was home free.

Foyt's engine then became sour and he lost out in the dash for "show" money.

Last year Unser broke a leg in a motorcycle accident the evening after the first day of the time trials, was washed out and sat out part of the racing season.

In 1959 brother Jerry was fatally injured in a practice crash at the speedway.

ALLISON FACES ANOTHER 500 TODAY

Jones Credited With Assist

Combined News Services

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Al Unser's going-away victory in Saturday's 500-mile auto race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway was a mechanical triumph by 1963 winner Parnelli Jones, co-owner of the Colt-Ford, and master mechanic George Bignotti.

Jones and Bignotti put together the 1,350-pound, rear-engine car.

The eight-cylinder, specially built Ford engine has a bore of 3.65 inches and a stroke of 1.902, for 161.703 inches of piston displacement.

It, like all other engines in the field, was equipped with a turbocharger — a turbine wheel in the exhaust pipe which powers a compressor for air going into the fuel mixture.

The Firestone tires were enormous — 13.90 by 15 in front and 15.3 by 17 in the rear.

The engine was fueled with a blend of methanol, a type of alcohol, which yields only one or two miles to the gallon but has a cooling effect.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — At least four persons were treated for injuries Saturday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway hospital.

Fireman David Woodward of Indianapolis was burned on the hands while helping extinguish a fire in a racer driven by Roger McCluskey.

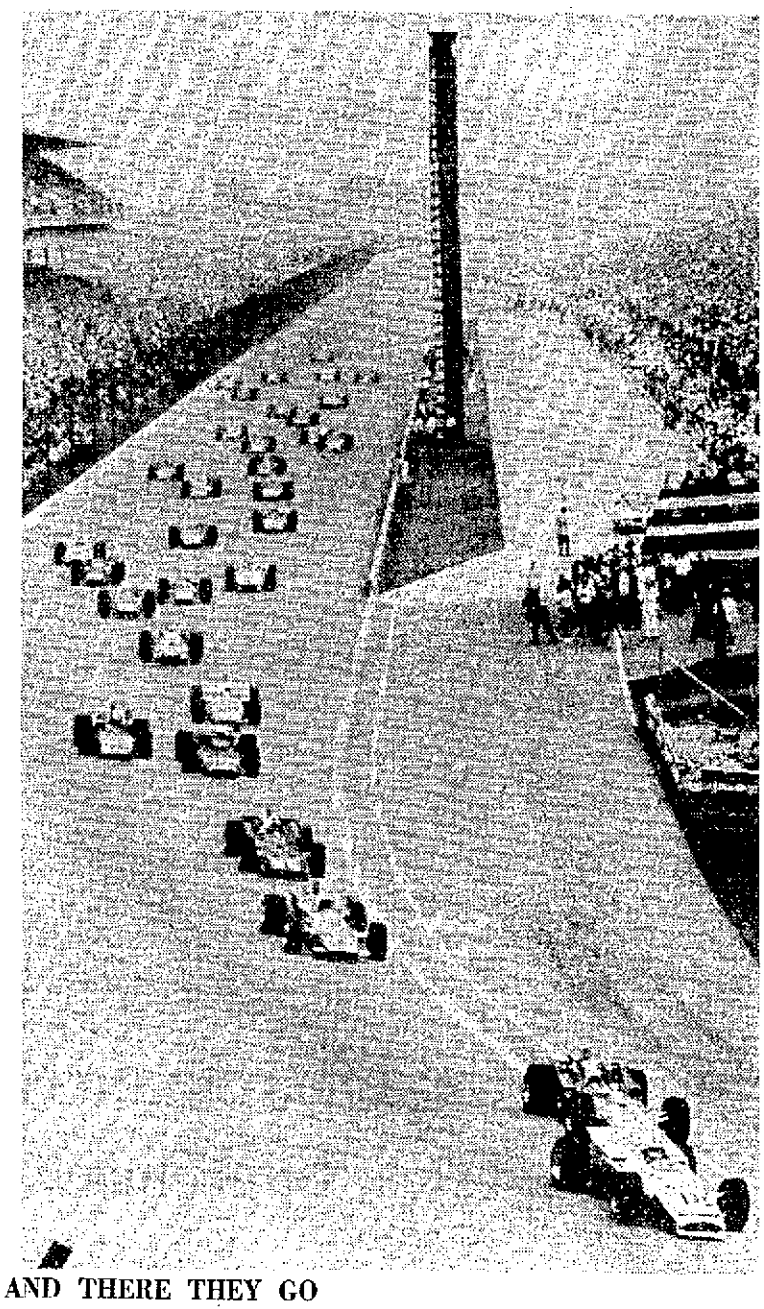

Willie Caldwell, 29, was injured in a motorcycle accident at a tunnel entrance to the infield. Caldwell was treated at the infield hospital and transferred to Indianapolis Methodist Hospital where he was reported in good condition.

Clete Beckner, 47, of Benton Harbor, Mich., suffered a fractured left leg when he was struck by an auto in the infield. A companion said the passenger car which struck Beckner did not stop.

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Donnie Allison, who finished fourth in Saturday's Indianapolis 500, will hold the pole position today when 40 cars break across the starting line in the $50,000 Virginia 500 NASCAR Grand National race at Martinsville Speedway.

Allison of Hueytown, Ala., will be seeking his third major success within a week. He won the World 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway last Sunday.

AND THERE THEY GO
Johnny Rutherford (18) leads pack into first turn at start of Indianapolis 500 Saturday. Trailing Rutherford is Al Unser (2), who took lead on backstretch and was never headed in auto racing's premier event.

Elliott: Upward, Onward...in His Own Time

When man first landed on the moon the first question was, "Okay, so when do we go to Mars?"

No doubt when Columbus stepped ashore in the New World the natives wanted to know what took him so long. When Lindbergh flew to Paris somebody probably asked him when he planned to try it without an airplane.

"I've never really had any publicity at all. It's been a long time comin', so I better enjoy it while I can."—Bill Elliott.

Bill Elliott is just beginning to learn about success and man's restless drive to go upward and onward. Never mind what you did today — what are you going to do tomorrow? The quest: that's what it's all about.

Elliott high jumped 7 feet, 3¼ inches in the California Relays at Modesto a week ago. It was his personal "world" record and the best leap anywhere in two years.

"But they kinda put me on the spot about doing 7-6," he complains in a Texas twang, "after I'd gone out of my way not to say that. I think I can go higher, I'm confident I can, but I can't say when I'm gonna do it."

ELLIOTT, WHO REPRESENTS the Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach, wasn't doing much of anything until the last few months. After Bill took a finance degree from the University of Texas last year, former PCC runner Preston Davis, then a Texas assistant coach, introduced him to PCC coach Tom Jennings.

At the time Elliott was still developing his version of the "Fosbury flop," the over-backwards style employed by Oregon State's Dick Fosbury to win an Olympic gold medal in 1968. Suddenly, everyone was doing the "flop."

Jennings recalls that "Preston asked me if I would take him on, and I thought, 'Oh, geez, here's another flopper.' I had five 7-foot jumpers at the time and I didn't need somebody who had done only 6-10, least of all a flopper, but Preston was sort of anxious so I figured it would be the polite thing to do."

So Elliott, 23 and single, moved to Los Angeles last January, obtained "not a very complicated job" as a teller in a savings and loan and established high jumping as the single most important thing in his life.

"Right now it probably is," he says. "That's why I came out here and that's what I do. I work and I jump and that's about it."

He doesn't even have any romantic entanglements, except, "Well, there's a little entanglement back home." Back home is Sonora, Tex., a community of 3,000 distinguished chiefly for its high school football teams, twice state champions and once runnersup.

"There were only about 20 boys in my class but everybody was an athlete, 'cause there wasn't much else to do," Elliott says. "There's really no big city near. The closest town is San Angelo, and it's not real big, either."

Murphy, pitching cautiously but effectively, limited the Orioles to six hits through seven innings with

ANGEL OF DAY

ALEX JOHNSON laced game-winning home run as Angels nipped Baltimore, 3-2.

Robinson's two-base hit, the only extra base blow off the Angel righthander.

Lopez got by the sixth in 1-2-3 fashion but departed for a pinch-hitter, Dave May in the seventh and Dick Hall, the angular righthander with a glistening 5-1 record, was summoned to the mound.

The Angel seventh began innocently enough when Fregosi flied to center and Roger Repoz popped up. Then Johnson drilled his fourth home run of the season, a mile-high drive that vaulted over the fence in right-center.

ANGEL ANGLES: Upset of the season — at least one Baltimore writer encountered a great deal of success when he sat down to chat with usually tight-lipped Alex Johnson. Jim Elliot of the Morning Sun actually described Johnson as an engaging personality. When Elliott asked the Angel slugger if he noticed any difference in the National and American Leagues, Alex replied dourly, "Yeah, the prices of a cheeseburger are much more in Boston than they are in Cincinnati" . . . Joe Azcue's wife, seven months pregnant, is seriously ill at her Overland Park, Kan., home . . . Saturday's game was delayed 15 minutes to accommodate the large crowd which flocked in to gets its cushions . . . In four-plus seasons at the Big A, the Angels have had only 15 crowds in excess of the 30,000 figure. Best on record was a gathering of 42,555 which turned up May 14, 1966, to see the Boston Red Sox. The only other crowd over 40,000 came out May 8 of the same year to get a peek at the New York Yankees.

The three-game series concludes this afternoon at 1 with Clyde Wright going against Baltimore's Dave McNally. Wright owns a 4-3 career record against the Angels . . . the Angels against the Angels . . . The Angeles get a day off Monday before launching a three-game set with the Detroit Tigers Tuesday night. Three games with Cleviand next weekend will wrap up the longest home stand of the season . . . Ten of the last 14 Baltimore pinch-hitters have reached base safely, six on walks and four on singles . . . Since April 20, Boog Powell has hit an awesome .371.

KENNEDY GAMES AT BERKELEY

Matson Unloads SP: 71-4¼; LaBenz Runs Mile in 3:56.9

BERKELEY — Olympic champion Randy Matson came within an inch and a quarter of tying his world shotput record Saturday at the second annual Kennedy Games with a prodigious toss of 71 feet, 4¼ inches.

Matson, the former Texas A&M star who is now a stockbroker in Houston, took dead aim at a yellow flag staked at his world record distance of 71-5½ and put the shot just to the right of it on his fourth try.

The world's only 70-foot shotputter had one of the best series in history at 69-6, 68-1, 69-8¾, 68-8½ and 68-9½.

Matson set his world record three years ago and hasn't come as close again until Saturday when 15,000 fans at Edwards Stadium on the University of California campus had a chance to see him perform.

It was the first 70-foot put outside of Texas and Matson was almost matter-of-fact about it.

"The 70-foot barrier is not that psychological," he said. "It's simply a matter of adjusting to the time changes and the facilities."

Matson's mark overshadowed the fastest mile run in the world this year by Arizona State graduate Chuck LaBenz, who now represents the Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach.

LaBenz let Dick Quax of New Zealand set the pace through the first three laps before overtaking the fading Kiwi to win in 3:56.9.

PCC teammate John Mason went under four minutes for the first time in taking second at 3:58.4. John Lawson, also of the PCC, was third in 3:59.2. Quax faded to fourth in 3:59.9.

Sprinter John Carlos was the meet's only double winner, taking the 100 in 9.4 and 220 in 20.4.

Another PCC athlete, George Freun, made the third longest hammer throw every by an American with a 232-7 effort.

Villanova New IC4A Champion

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Villanova, fattening up on seven running titles and an iron man performance by Dick Buerkle in winning the 3 and 6-mile runs, captured the 94th annual IC4A track and field championship Saturday with a 60-52 decision over defending titlist Maryland at Franklin Field.

It was the 10th championship in the past 14 years for Villanova as it and Maryland overpowered the rest of the field.

Buerkle tackled the 3-mile title to the 6-mile gold medal he won a day earlier. The 12 points the senior from Rochester, N.Y., picked up in two days, and a flashing victory in the mile relay which the Wildcats won by a stride over Morgan State made the championship sure.

The mile relay nailed it down as Villanova trailed 52-50 going into the event.

Larry James had been lifted from his normal anchor leg in the mile relay to run in the 220 and miler Marty Liquori substituted.

Liquori won the mile in 3:58.5 less than two hours earlier.

MIDDIES SINK CADETS IN 4 OF 5 SPORTS

Associated Press

It was Anchors Aweigh Saturday for the Midshipmen of Navy as they sank the Army Cadets of West Point in baseball, lacrosse, golf and tennis.

The only consolation the Cadets gained in the annual spring service clashes of June Week was a 111-43 victory over the Middies in their track meet on Friday.

The Middies beat the Cadets 3-1 in baseball, 8-7 in lacrosse, 5-2 in golf and 6-3 in tennis.

Juniors Upgrade 9 SPAAAU Marks

The Southern Pacific Assn. Junior Track and Field Championships set a record for records Saturday at Cal State Long Beach.

Nineteen events were contested, and 47.4 per cent of them — nine — terminated with records.

"It was the biggest (252 competitors), best junior meet we've ever had," huffed meet director Jack Rose as he aligned hurdles in preparation for the conclusion of the decathlon today, 1 p.m.

Mike Hill of Mt. San Antonion College was a surprise decathlon leader with 3,758 points, and defending champion Mark Long of Cal State Long Beach was a surprising fifth with 3,452.

Long is 60 points behind his school record tempo, but his punch is in the second day of the two-day decathlon.

"Long can win," said Rose. "There aren't many strong decathlon men in the javelin, discus and pole vault — but Long is a good one."

Hill, 18-year-old freshman, won the state junior college long jump title a week ago. Saturday his achievements were 11.2 100 meters, 23-0 long jump, 39-4½ shotput, 6-4 high jump and 49.8 400 meters. Long's marks were 11.5, 21-8, 39-9, 6-½ and 52.2.

Best mark of the day was a 47.9 440 by Ivory Scott of Valley State. More noteworthy were the accomplishments of high school entrants.

John Weston, 14-year-old freshman at Edison High of Huntington Beach, was fifth in the steeplechase in 10:48.5.

Bob Grace, Aviation High sophomore, was third in the six-mile at 31:27.4.

Cal State Long Beach athletes won two events. Andy Smith was No. 1 in the triple jump at 47-8¼, Herman Clayborn topped shotputters at 51-2.

Uni Ends Southern Track Supremacy

University High became the first non-Southern League team since 1955 to win the L.A. City high school track championship, edging Fremont by one point Saturday at East Los Angeles College.

Uni scored well in the last two events - pole vault and mile relay - to nip Fremont, 37-36, with Hamilton another point back in third.

Hamilton could possibly gain a tie for the title if Monday's review of a photo finish in the 100 elevates Tom Reddick from second to first.

State runnerup James Baxter of L.A. High posted his best time of the season in the half-mile at 1:52.2.

In the mile relay, Baxter took the final leg handoff next to last, then roared the quarter in 47.8 to just miss catching Washington at the finish line. L.A. got the win, however, when a Washington runner was disqualified for cutting in.

Banning's David Jackson won the long jump at 23-3¼. First four places qualify for the state meet at UC Berkeley June 5-6.

THE NON-GRADUATES

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Coach Joe Paterno of Penn State says that colleges that want to "protect their athletes" need only require them to progress normally, semester by semester, so they may be graduated with their classmates.

Paterno may be slightly smug on the subject: He gave 21 football scholarships four years ago; 17 of the recipients stayed to become seniors, all but two will be graduated with their classes. Of eight players drafted by the pros from Penn State this year, only one will go to training camp without his undergraduate degree.

Paterno's score is very high. A sampling of 124 of the 442 drafted players disclosed that only 53 per cent of them will go to training camp with degrees, and many took five years to get them.

Many college coaches are reportedly concerned lest the spreading political awareness affect their athletes, especially around election time next fall when they will be in the midst of their schedules. It would seem that coaches should be less concerned about their players' campaigning for candidates, and more concerned that they might form a union and strike for higher wages.

"I'm of the older school," says an athletic director on his way out. "I coached football for 27 years. I believed it taught values. My proudest statistic was that 80 per cent of my players got their degrees. Well, I just can't keep up any more. The football teams now are getting better, their sources of supply are better, the boys are bigger, faster, better coached. There are new techniques.

"There are just too many demands now, and the emphasis on winning is too great for the average player to be able to get it all done, and his school work, too, in four years."

For many of them, the scholarship runs out after four years, and further schooling depends on personal motivation and private financing.

But at Nebraska, for example, under Big Eight Conference rules, a football player can have a five-year scholarship under a program known as "red shirting." While he still is allowed only four years of eligibility, the years can be spread out at the coach's discretion.

College Athlete: A Mockery of Education?

OPPONENTS of the red shirt program believe it offers nothing to the player and exists merely to give the coach greater flexibility with his personnel, and that it is, ultimately, another aspect of the dehumanization of the college player.

This is not a new thought, but it is only recently being articulated by players, usually ex-players who complain about whimsically authoritarian methods, racism, commercialism and physical unhealthiness caused by drug abuse and improper medical care.

Such circumstances, a cynic might say, are the working conditions of the scholarship football player: the payoff is a college education, and a degree.

That the colleges so often fail to pay off is a measure of their hypocrisy — if the player was not qualified to be graduated, he probably was not qualified to be enrolled.

Troubled Tigers Buried by Birds

May Day! May Day! That's the distress signal the already harassed Detroit Tigers had to send up the second week in May when, in just seven days, they saw their hopes of challenging for the 1970 pennant in the American League's Eastern Division go down the drain.

The Tigers, who move into the Big A Tuesday night for the first of their two Southern California appearances against the Angels this season, were looked upon the past winter as the one team which possibly could slow down the Baltimore Orioles.

It looked as if the Tigers had strengthened themselves considerably in pitching as well as defensively in the infield. They expected better years from two or three regulars who were hobbled with injuries in 1969.

The first blow to land caught the Tigers in a most critical spot. Denny McLain was suspended until July 1. Denny had nine of his 24 victories in '69 in the bag through June, won his 10th on July 2.

This put a tremendous burden on the Tiger pitching staff, but the Bengals nevertheless got off to a very encouraging start. With an eight-game winning streak under their belts, they led the division after the first two weeks.

The Tigers played .667 ball the first three weeks and were still winning at a .619 clip and were only a half-game behind the Orioles after the first full month.

The feeling was that if they could stay close until McLain returned, they could give Baltimore a real battle right down to the wire.

BUT THEN DISASTER STRUCK. The Tigers started the week of May 5 with five men hitting .300 or better and threatening to regain the lead from Baltimore. Seven days later, though, they were 5½ games behind Baltimore.

The Tiger bats cooled off and the pitching began to sag as they lost five of their next seven games. Meanwhile, the Orioles were reeling off seven victories in a row and captured eight over-all before the streak was snapped.

Detroit has continued to flounder around since then.

What's wrong with the Tigers? One can point to many things, but primarily, as Detroit analyst Watson Spoelstra points out, the situation is magnified by Baltimore threatening to run away and hide from the rest of the teams once again. The Orioles are the soundest and deepest American League team since the New York Yankees of 10 years ago.

George Kell, who now is on the broadcasting team airing Tiger games, goes back to an old baseball saying to prove a point: "A team is never as good as it looks while winning and not as bad as it may look when it loses."

Many believed the Tigers were really that good when they got off to their flying start this season without McLain. "On the other hand," Kell says, "it's hard to believe they are really as bad as they've been in the past three weeks."

THE BIGGEST TROUBLE, IN KELL'S estimation, is the failure of the Tigers' bullpen. "They haven't got anybody in relief they can really trust these days. And if you're going to battle for the pennant, you've got to have one, preferably two, men who can come in rather consistently and protect a one-run lead in the late innings."

This problem is emphasized by the statistic that the Tigers have lost 10 games from the seventh inning on this season.

Smith thought he had enough added help coming in to shore up the bullpen this season but miscalculated rather badly.

Mickey Lolich has yearned to be the No. 1 man on the Tiger staff, but now that he has moved into that role for at least a half-season, he hasn't been able to handle it. He got off to a 4-1 start but has faded to a 6-5 standing.

MICKEY'S FIFTH VICTORY, a 4-0 shutout over the Orioles a week and a half ago, came exactly one month after he had won his fourth game — another shutout against Cleveland. In between those two masterpieces, he was 0-3. Then, after he beat Baltimore so impressively, Washington rocked him with eight hits and six runs in 2 1-3 innings as he suffered his fifth loss.

Veteran members of the Tigers felt at the time that Lolich pitched the greatest game of his career against Cleveland for win No. 4, and they agree now that his performance against the Orioles perhaps was even better.

It was the first time Baltimore had been blanked this year and, when asked about it at the Big A where his club is playing the Angels this weekend, Oriole manager Earl Weaver declared that "I've never seen Mickey any faster. He had good hard stuff right down to the final out and I can't recall him making any bad pitches."

Over-all, though, Lolich hasn't been able to take up any of the slack caused by the loss of McLain. In fact, Mickey is far behind his 1969 pace when he was 6-1 through May.

BUT ONE MAN alone can't be blamed for the May slide. Kell says that Detroit still has the nucleus of a good club . . . and that Smith is making all the moves any man could make under the circumstances despite severe criticism and there really is no need for a managerial change.

Biggest rap against Smith is his hit-and-miss schedule of his starting pitchers. Instead of setting up a regular four-day rotation, there have been six- to eight-day gaps in the appearances of both Lolich and Joe Niekro.

Smith also is criticized for sticking to his strategy of playing for the big inning even when the Tigers aren't hitting.

And there is no denying that Detroit isn't the happiest club in baseball, but as Spoelstra points out, the "atmosphere isn't there to get maximum effort from everyone." He reports that the players are "spoiled rotten" and that the situation goes beyond Smith giving McLain special privileges in past seasons. It eminates from the front office and Mayo's hands are tied.

However, if you took Baltimore out of the league, things wouldn't look quite so bad for the Tigers.

World Cup Excitement in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Russia and Mexico open one of the world's most exciting, most passionate and most hotly debated sporting events at noon today with the kickoff of the first of 32 games to decide the World Soccer Championship.

No other single sport arouses such international fervor, such nationalism, such pride as does the world tournament for the Jules Rimet Cup.

National passion will reach fantastic heights by June 21 when one country stands dominate over the world of soccer. In that champion's wake will be the hopes and dreams of millions of soccer fanatics and 330 deeply disappointed players from 15 other teams.

Once every four years since 1930—with time out for war—this tournament has been held for a golden trophy, which in cash terms is worth only a bit more than $2,000.

England won the trophy for the first time in 1966 in London. Alfo Ramsey, the coach, became Sir Alf Ramsey immediately afterward when Queen Elizabeth II touched his shoulder with a sword to honor the triumph. Bobby Moore, the team captain, accepted for the entire 22-man squad the Order of the British Empire.

The World Cup, like all international events, has its controversies and its shocks. The biggest this year has been the detention, in Bogota, Colombia, of Moore. A jewelry shop owner accused him of lifting a $1,300 bracelet while the team was in Colombia for tuneup matches.

Moore, a millionaire, denied the accusation and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson backed him up.

More than just sports is at stake. Mexican President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz went through the formal ceremony of giving the Mexican flag to the national team. But he went a bit further than most presidents have in such ceremonies.

The United States, which has never made it to a final in soccer, was eliminated early by Haiti, which in turn lost to El Salvador.

The finalists: Group 1, Mexico, Russia, Belgium, El Salvador; Group 2, Uruguay, Israel, Italy, Sweden; Group 3, Rumania, England, Brazil Czechoslovakia; Group 4, Peru, Bulgaria, Morocco, West Germany.

Maccabiah Track Meet Next Sunday

4,400 SEE HOLIDAY REGATTA

McCullah King of Speed

Clem McCullah emerged the day's only double class winner as a holiday crowd of 4,400 enjoyed an afternoon of speedboat racing at Marine Stadium Saturday.

The Torrance driver piloted Master Charger to the checkered flag in K racing runabout competition. McCullah later came back to post the day's fastest average while throttling Psychedelic to a winning time of 73.831 mph in the superstock event.

Bob Clune of Long Beach won the popular crackerbox class with an average of 62.069 mph.

Another Long Beach driver, Ron Armstrong, drove Avenger VII to victory in the 5-liter class.

The day's hottest race developed in the second heat of the superstocks when McCullah and Phil Bergeron of South Gate dueled neck and neck for four laps. When Bergeron nearly lost control of his boat, Super Rat, in a turn on the final lap, McCullah dashed home the winner.

The only mishap occurred in the superstocks when Bill Burnett of Lakewood spun out and his boat, Clever Trip, sank.

There were no injuries sustained in the 22nd annual Lions Club regatta.

Near Defeat, Julie Rallies

PARIS (UPI) — Gritty Julie Heldman, within two games of elimination in the second set, turned aggressor Saturday to defeat South Africa's Esme Emmanuel and join Californian Rosemary Casals in the quarterfinal round of the French Open tennis championships.

Miss Heldman of New York beat the plump Miss Emmanuel, 3-6, 9-7, 6-4, after Miss Casals qualified for a quarterfinal berth against topseeded Margaret Smith Court of Australia. The great grandniece of celloist Pablo Casals whipped Kristy Pigeon of Danville, Calif., 6-2, 6-1.

Little Miss Casals demonstrated the ruthless determination that carried her to the 1969 quarterfinals as she trounced Miss Pigeon with a steady barrage of long volleys that pinned her opponent in deep court and prevented her from rushing the net.

The clay playing surface at Roland Garros Stadium did not suit Miss Pigeon and she instantly expressed her dislike of the court.

"I hate these courts," she said. "Most Americans don't expect to do well here because of the slowness of the clay."

Billie Jean King of Long Beach, the tourney's secondseeded player, advanced Friday in the women's singles.

Arthur Ashe of Gum Springs, Va., and Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Texas, are the only American survivors in the men's division. They reached the quarterfinals Friday.

In men's fourth-round singles Saturday, Martin Mulligan, an Australian residing in Italy, defeated Jaime Fillol of Chile, 6-4, 5-7, 3-6, 7-5, 8-6, and Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia beat Ion Tiriac of Romania, 4-6, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Topseeded Rod Laver of Australia rallied Saturday night to topple Ismael El Shafie of Egypt, 6-3, 5-7, 6-1, and advance to semifinals of the $30,000 Rawlings Tennis Classic at Forest Park.

Second-seeded Ken Rosewall of Australia cut down John Newcombe, 8-6, 7-5, and fourthseeded Roy Emerson of Australia beat Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, 6-4, 6-4, in other quarter-finals.

Fred Stolle made it an all-Australian semifinal by turning back France's Pierre Barthes, 6-4, 6-4, in the last match.

Singles champion in the tournament, which concludes Monday, will receive $8,000.

In doubles action, Ralston and Ron Holmberg defeated Marty Riessen-Bill Bowrey, 3-6, 8-6, 6-4. The Newcombe-Andres Gimeno vs. Cliff Drysdale-Ray Moore match was delayed by rain.

Ann Beats Patti for Surrey Crown

SURBITON, England (AP) — Ann Jones of England swept the final four games Saturday for a 6-4, 6-3 victory over Patti Hogan of La Jolla, Calif., in the final of the Surrey hard court tennis championships.

Anti-apartheid demonstrators interrupted both the women's final and the men's final, the latter between two South African Davis Cup stars. Bob Maud won over Frew McMillan, 6-4, 6-3.

Ram Defense Has Crutch to Stand on

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

When linebacker Maxie Baughan and free safety Ed Meador retired, Ram coach George Allen feared the Rams' defense wouldn't have a crutch to stand on.

It does today after coach George Allen acquired linebacker Tommy Joe Crutcher from the New York Giants in exchange for two undisclosed draft choices. It marked Allen's second trade this month for an outside linebacker.

The 28-year-old Crutcher, 6-3, 235, will be playing his seventh season in the NFL.

A third-round choice of Green Bay in 1964, Crutcher spent four years with the Packers as a reserve outside backer before being traded to the Giants prior to the 1968 season.

Tommy played left linebacker in '68 then was shifted to the right side last season. In the final game against Cleveland, he injured his left knee and had to undergo surgery in January. Ram' surgeon Dr. Dan Levinthal examined Crutcher before the trade and gave Allen the green light to go ahead.

"Tommy Joe is valuable because he can play both the left and the right side," said Allen, "The retirement of Baughan left us thin at outside backer and Crutcher will give us the depth we need."

Crutcher was a running back at TCU during his college career, gaining 1,583 yards.

Nitehawks Split Pair in Tourney

SAN BERNARDINO — Manager Red Meairs received a 16-hit birthday present from the Long Beach Nitehawks who bombed Mission Billiards of Hemet, 11-2, in the San Bernardino Invitational Saturday.

But the gift, though a pleasant one, came after the Hawthorne Hustlers, behind the five-hit pitching of Ron Smith, had whitewashed the Hawks, 3-0.

The Nitehawks, who never do anything easy, now must play four games today if they are to win the tournament. Starting time is 1:45 p.m. when they meet the winner of a noon game between Hemet Hawks and the hosting San Bernardino Flame.

BILL ELLIOTT: UPWARD—

— which Jennings says out-Fosburys Fosbury — at the Coliseum Saturday night. It will be the same pit where Fosbury first convinced people that he was more than a fluke with a freakish style when he won the "non-Olympic Trials" of '68

But Elliott suspected Fosbury had something before that.

"The first time I saw him was in 1967 at the NCAA meet in Provo. I had seen pictures but I was really anxious to see him do it myself because I couldn't figure out exactly how he could get in a position like that over the bar."

Since his Olympic success and some disillusioning mediocrity later, Fosbury has become a high jump dropout. One report had him living as a hippie at the Mardi Gras but Elliott says he "heard he was working in his hometown in Oregon and planning to compete indoors next winter."

The '72 Olympics probably are farthest from Fosbury's mind, but Elliott, now pressed by his success, admits that he "really can't help but think about it, 'cause since the first part of the season I'd gotten to where I was fairly consistent going over seven, so I knew it was only a matter of time until I went higher."

ELLIOTT ALSO WAS an exceptional long jumper with a windblown mark of 26-3.

"Yeah, that was the first of the year in El Paso," he says, "but the next week you had the Long Beach Invitational and I hurt myself warming up for the long jump, so I don't do it anymore.

"Really, there's no future for me in the long jump because there's too many good long jumpers around and I don't think I could be consistent."

Bill doesn't even high jump when he trains. "No sir, I don't. My feeling is that I've got enough confidence that if I'm physically ready and in good condition, the style will take care of itself. I worked on it a lot last fall to where I got it down pretty good so I'm not gonna worry about it at all."

But many people worry about Bill's style. He closes his eyes when he jumps, they say, inviting a terrible accident.

"There used to be pictures of me with my eyes closed," he laughs, "but I'm not sure if my eyes are closed now or not. I know I don't see anything when I'm jumping. About my last two steps I just kinda black out. I'm really not conscious of anything once I start running.

"But if my run's good and my takeoff's good, my jump just takes care of itself. As for when I'll go higher . . . well, that'll have to take care of itself, too."

HILL, WEISKOPF WAIT IN WINGS

Homero Needs 67 to Maintain Lead

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Homero Blancas, bidding for his second tournament victory in three weeks, maintained his one-shot lead after three rounds in the $150,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic Saturday with a three-under-par 67, but Dave Hill and Tom Weiskopf dogged his trail.

Blancas, winner of the Colonial National two weeks ago, was at 198, 17 under par after 54 holes.

The slender Hill, paired with Blancas for the second day in a row, came within a hair of tying the leader on the 18th green when his birdie putt lipped the cup.

Weiskopf, who was in a seven-way tie for fifth place after two rounds, turned in a 64 Saturday, touring both the front and the back in three under par.

All alone in third place was Steve Spray, who had a hole-in-one on the 182-yard par-three 12th hole en route to a third-round 65 to put him six strokes under for the tournament.

"I think that we are going to try to get rid of each other," Blancas said as he and Hill exchanged gibes while going over their scorecards with writers. "We have been playing together for three days now and that must be some kind of a record.

"I played real well. On number eight I three putted, missing from one foot. I just got careless and went to sleep.

A stroke of luck saved Blancas from possible disaster on the par-four 11th hole when his hooked drive hit a tree and bounced toward the green.

Hill said he did not putt nearly as well the last two days as he did Thursday when he fired a record-tying first-round 63.

"I'm gonna go with two putters in my bag tomorrow," Hill said.

on the 16th hole. The last failure put him 1 down.

Brimming with confidence, the fiesty Bryan stuck an 8-iron four feet from the cup on the 18th and was conceded the putt after Mortensen missed a 10-footer.

Fedderly parlayed birdies on the 13th and 16th holes and an eagle on the 17th from 25 feet to oust Gary Wishon, 2-1, in the morning round and his hot putter figured to be too much for Bryan.

The 32-year-old Fedderly holed a 10-foot birdie putt on the first hole, but Bryan drove the green and "saved" a 5-foot birdie to launch what was to be a classic match that tested the nerve of both players.

It seesawed through the eighth hole with Bryan, even par, holding a 1-up lead. Nine holes later the margin was the same as they halved every hole in par except the 12th, which they bogeyed.

Remembering his morning-round eagle, Fedderly drilled a 3-wood seven feet from the hole with his second shot on the 17th and once again was staring at a "three" on the par-5 hole.

Fedderly narrowly missed birdie putts five times in the previous eight holes as the tension mounted. Bryan almost birdied a couple himself but also was frustrated that he couldn't put away his tough opponent.

Bryan, who had five birdies on the par-five holes in eight tries chipped to within four feet on his third shot and then "watched my salvation" as Fedderly's eagle try rimmed out. Bryan confidentally stroked in his putt.

With victory in his grasp, Bryan knocked a 6-iron over the 18th, chipped back within seven feet and then slid his putt off the right side to force extra holes.

Fedderly's drive caught the trap, but he picked it out nicely and had a downhill 22-footer left for his birdie. Bryan then made his game-winning approach that was only two inches to the right of the cup.

Richardson and Cook were supposed to stage the best match, but it was less than classic. Richardson had birdies on Nos. 3 and 4, but he went bogey, bogey, double bogey to turn in 39 and trail by two.

The turning point might have come on the 10th hole when Cook three-putted. He couldn't get his putter working after that.

Cook had 14 pars and two birdies in beating Benson, but he bogeyed three of the last eight holes against Richardson.

TROUBLE WITH A 'TEE'

Willard Bryan (top photo) and Kemp Richardson were winners Saturday in semifinals of city golf championship, but both were losers on these shots. Bryan's putt on fifth hole slid off left for bogey, while Richardson's blast from high grass on sixth hole was good one, but he missed putt and lost hole.

Shirley Moves Into Tie

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP) — Shirley Englehorn, the runnerup the last two years, fired a 4-under-par 68 Saturday and moved into a tie for the lead with first-round leader Mary Mills after two rounds of the 54-hole O'Sullivan Open golf tournament.

While Miss Engelhorn was shooting her 68 to make up three strokes from Friday's opening round, Miss Mills was carding a 71 that gave both a 36-hole score of 139.

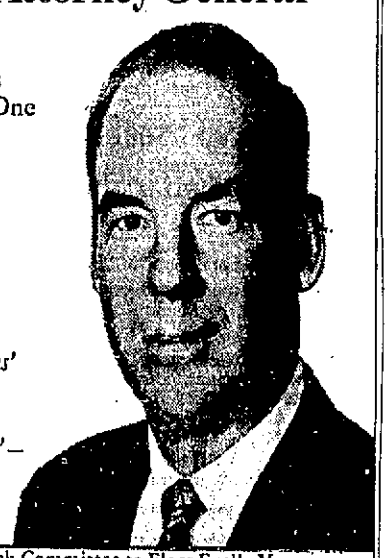

Trailing by a stroke at 140 going into today's final 18-hole round of the $15,000 tournament are Sharon Miller who shot a 69 Saturday, and Margie Masters, who faltered with a 71 after a first-day 69.

Feminine Touch to Rum Run Powerboat Race Saturday

Brawn was lost but pulchritude and charm added to Rum Rum V, fifth in a series of 96-mile Long Beach offshore powerboat sprints, with the announcement that South Gate sportsman Dick DeWitt will bypass the race but that three all-girl teams have entered.

Rum Rum V, sponsored by the Pacific Offshore Power Boat Racing Assn., is expected to draw as many as two dozen entries in four classes for its 10 a.m. start Saturday off Belmont Pier in Long Beach Harbor.

Feminine entrants include the teams of Mrs. Nancy Eppard-Dottie McKinney and professional model Rebecca Kapp-Cindy Townsend, all from Phoenix, and Mrs. Earl Palmer-Mrs. Gwen Spratte of Anaheim.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Wild Tuna Story From Kona Coast

Four yellowfin tuna strikes at one time, two lost, two boated, the skipper's left middle finger cut off, a scared but determined woman steering the boat composed the story that Ronald and Judy Dreiman, 12971 Loretta Dr., Santa Ana, and Ronald's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dreiman, had to tell when they returned just recently from a fishing trip off the Kona Coast of the big island of Hawaii. And it was their first deep-sea fishing trip!

The two couples engaged Rope Nelson's boat, the Pua Kai, for the trip. Shortly after four trolling rigs had been set out off Kailua-Kona, the four strikes came simultaneously.

One shook the hook, another broke a leader, but the other two fish stuck. Otherwise, there might have been more hell aboard the Pau Kai than anybody could have handled.

Nelson had no deckhand, so he asked Judy to steer the boat. She admitted that he might as well have asked her to run a heavy road-building machine. Ronald fought his fish for two hours before the skipper was able to grab the wire leader with his gloved left hand.

Then, just as he tried to make the gaff, the fish lunged and his gloved hand was caught in the ensuing snarl. The wire cut off the tip of his middle finger; the fish sounded taking glove, leader and finger tip. Ronald kept working the fish and the skipper finally made the gaff. Ronald's fish weighed 225 pounds.

THE GLOVE WAS RETRIEVED and the tip of Nelson's finger was in it. Meanwhile, Lewis was holding off his fish and was almost at the point of giving up, but the skipper, with a bleeding hand, encouraged him. Lewis finally brought his 190-pound fish to gaff. The skipper radioed to shore for a doctor and then raced the engine full-bore to Kailua.

The doctor sewed the tip of Nelson's finger back to the stub. Before the Dreimans left Kailua they saw Nelson, who said that the finger was knitting and that at least he would have the finger, although it might be stiff for the rest of his life. He said that in 23 years of fishing off Kona it was the first serious accident that he ever had had.

Before the two couples left Hawaii, they had a chance to see the 934-pound Pacific blue marlin which Herbert L. Tollisen, Seattle, boated in 2 hours, 55 minutes. It was the largest marlin that had been taken off Hawaii since Hale Erickson took his 1,100 pound billfish in 1967 and which until just recently was co-holder of the world record.

The accident aboard the Pua Kai brought to mind several other incidents involved in the gaffing of big game fish. It's a dangerous business, especially if the fish is "green," and by green, I mean a fish that is not exhausted and still capable of long runs or leaps.

The recent catches of marlin and ahi (yellowfin tuna) gives hope to Kailua that the August Hawaiian International Billfish Tournament will be one of the best in history.

PUERTO VALLARTA, A SLEEPY Mexican port until Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor made a film there and gave the town enough publicity to make it famous, apparently is humming with activity and setting up attractions for the tourists.

The port, situated not too far from Tepic and connected with Tepic, Mazatlan and the United States by good paved road, hopes to cater to the tourists who roam in campers and trailers as well as those who fly.

On our recent trip into the Sierras, Benno Huene, who owns the concession at Bridgeport Lake, showed us some pictures of the retirement home he hopes to occupy with his wife, Juanita. Some of the scenes were beautiful enough to put La Paz, Mazatlan and even Acapulco to shame.

Now comes a letter from Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Morgan, 269 Venetia Dr., Long Beach, who have no claim whatsoever to Puerto Vallarta, but who do have some information that is quite interesting.

Several years ago the Morgans met a bush pilot, Eustace Bowhay, and his wife, Nora, while traveling in Canada. Not long after that, the Bowhays wrote that they were selling out in Canada and moving to Puerto Vallarta.

Then, just a few days ago, the Morgans received a letter from the former Canadians, saying that they were building a trailer park, with pool, patio, paved streets and spaces for 150 campers and trailers. It will have a Mexican name, Tacho's Trailer Park.

LAKE HAVASU MARINA'S MANAGER, Mil Steele, has a thought for the derby fishermen trying for bass in the annual $100-per-pound event. Mil says: "Find the tule beds anywhere in the lake and pitch your surface lure right at the edge. I don't mean several feet away either. It's better to hit in the tules and pull out than to hit in clear water several feet away. You are more likely to get bass that way."

So far, the size of bass caught in the derby haven't been startling. However, anglers who know Lake Havasu are getting some in the two- and three-pound class.

The annual derby started last Monday at Havasu, with three weigh-in stations in Lake Havasu City — Lake Havasu Marina, Desert Sport Shop and the G&P Country store.

In addition to $10 per pound for the largest bass caught between last Monday and Monday, Sept. 7, the derby officials will pay $100 for the largest striped base and the biggest crappie.

There is no entry fee for the derby. When an angler catches one of the three species mentioned, all he has to do is to take it to a weigh-in station and have it weighed and measured.

Rooms at the Lake Havasu City Hotel are available to the public from June 15 through July and August. Other air-conditioned units are available at the Nautical Inn. Five-day Arizona fishing licenses are available for $5. California anglers, with their own state licenses, may have an Arizona stamp affixed for $2. Night fishing is permitted.

Personality, Nodouble Score in Memorial Day Feature Race

Combined News Services

Personality and Nodouble scored impressive stakes victories in Memorial Day feature races at Garden State and Belmont Park Saturday.

Personality took over leadership of thoroughbred horse racing's topsy-turvy 3-year-old division by winning the $128,400 Jersey Derby with an effortless stretch run.

The Preakness winner, owned by Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs and trained by her son John zipped through the stretch for a 1¼-length victory over Corn Off The Cob, with Silent Screen another 2½ lengths back and 2¾ lengths ahead of Mrs. Jacobs' High Echelon.

By adding the Jersey Derby to his victories in the Wood Memorial and the Preakness, Personality set himself up as leader of the division and the favorite for the June 6 Belmont Stakes, final jewel in racing's Triple Crown for 3-year-olds.

The entry of Personality and High Echelon went on as the favorite and rewarded backers in the Memorial Day crown of 40.157 with a payoff of $4.40, $2.60 and $2.20.

Nodouble came charging down the middle of the stretch and got up in the very last stride to win the $114,600 Metropolitan Handicap by a head and set a Belmont track record for the mile of 1:34 3-5.

A holiday turnout of 54,105 saw the 5-year-old so-called Arkansas Traveler catch the favored Reviewer right at the wire and atone for his second place finish to Arts And Letters in the Met last year.

Nodouble, an Arksnsas-bred son of Oholme II, went off at 5-1 and paid $13.60, $5.20 and $3.60. The $74,490 first prize boosted him into the $800,000 bracket with total earnings of $846,749.

Juan Gonzalez gained his 100th victory of the Golden Gate Fields meeting by guiding heavily favored Diego Security to a three-length win in the $20,000 Memorial Day purse.

Chilean-bred Ciquingo came from far back to score his second American victory in as many starts when he won the $10,000-added Memorial Day Handicap at Miami's Tropical Park before a crowd of 6,554.

King Of The Castle and Te Vega each won a division of the $50,000-added Governor's Cup Handicap as Arlington Park in Chicago opened its 72-day meeting before a crowd of 29,412.

Plots Comeback at 43

Are Chargers Going to Pot? Nino Skeptical About Basilio

Three men, one a college freshman football coach and one a San Diego Chargers' draftee, were arrested on marijuana charges Saturday.

They were identified as Tom Williams, 21, Cardiff, the Chargers' second draft choice from UC at Davis; Michael Robert Clark, 21, Davis, the frosh coach for the Aggies, and Michael Warren Stelzer, 22, Davis, a student at UC Davis.

Middleweight champion Nino Benvenuti appeared skeptical but said he would consider a title defense against former champion

SPORTS BEAT

Carmen Basilio who said Friday he is thinking of a comeback.

Basilio, 43, hasn't fought in nine years, but says: "I saw Benvenuti's last couple of fights and I know I can handle him."

"Basilio was a great champion in the past, but now . . . ? I followed him when I was a little boy. He was a champion that I admired," said Nino.

A GROUP of students from the U. of Chile in Santiago kidnaped four Chilian soccer stars to protest lack of adequate physical education program in Chilian public schools.

RIOTING fans were dispersed by police shooting tear gas at the ticket offices of the Aztec Stadium in Mexico City.

The mob grew unruly after waiting all night to buy cheap tickets to the first game of the ninth world soccer championship.

THE ONE thing certain about Saturday's Belmont Stakes is that Dust Commander, the Kentucky Derby winner, won't be in it.

MICHEL Briere, center for the Pittsburgh Penguins of the NHL, was reported in satisfactory condition Saturday following a second brain operation for removal of a blood clot in the left temporal area.

Briere, 20, was seriously injured in a car accident near his hometown of Malartic, Que., May 15. He has not regained consciousness since the accident.

54,050 See Fiddle Isle Equal Mark

Bill Shoemaker was booed after he lost and after he won races Saturday at Hollywood Park. But those observers in the Memorial Day crowd of 54,050 who saw him try to make a dead-heat out of the featured $56,250 Lakeside Handicap aren't likely to make any more anti-Shoe noises.

Shoemaker, riding Howard B. Keck's Fiddle Isle, failed in his "tie" mission, however, as the high-flying chestnut nipped his stablemate, Pinjara, by a nose in 1:34 flat. The time equalled the American record for one mile on the turf and established a Hollypark course mark for the distance.

The Keck entry of Fiddle Isle and Pinjara was favored at 9-5 and paid $5.60, $5.60 and $3.60 across the board. Bargain Day, who finished third to complete a one-two-three Lakeside sweep for trainer Charlie Whittingham, returned $9 to show.

"I tried to make it a dead-heat, but my horse was just going too fast," Shoemaker reported after getting off the 117th stakes winner of his career at Hollywood Park. "When I finally let him run in the stretch I knew we were going to catch Howard (Jockey Howard Grant on Pinjara) so I took a little hold of Fiddle Isle coming to the wire. It would have been nice if we could have finished even."

Whittingham's success in stakes competition has been almost unbelievable. He has started 23 horses in added-money events and only two have failed to bring back a check of some kind. Besides his seven winners,

The final mutuel handle hit $5,052,868, the third time in Hollypark history that the five-million mark was bettered.

Carol Channing Never Misses a Show

LONDON — "The closest I ever came to missing a show," Carol Channing said, sitting in her dressing room at the Drury Lane Theater after her one-woman performance, "was when I stubbed my toe in Miami in '66 when I was out running on the beach with my son Channing.

"I was doing 'Hello, Dolly!' and a stubbed toe didn't seem too serious. I decided the only thing to do was to explain it to the audience and ask if they minded if I did the show with my left foot bare. They applauded every time I lifted my skirt — and showed them my bare foot.

"Another time was in Little Rock when I got bronchitis.

"I explained it to the audience and they sent me dozens of home remedies for sore throat. One of them must have worked. I got over bronchitis."

(On the night that Carol was confirming and explaining that she had never missed a show, her apartment was being burgled of a $25,000 mink coat as she was talking to the B.W. and me. She phoned us afterward to tell us that the thieves had been after her diamonds, which she had stashed in a bank vault. The apartment was a mess with everything strewn about by the diamond-hungry marauders.)

"Do you think you haven't missed a show because you are a Christian Scientist and don't acknowledge that you're ever sick?" I asked.

"No! Sophie Tucker believed the same way — and she was Jewish!"

PATIENTLY, she tried to explain. "My father said, 'If you're sick, go to the best doctor you can.' I know there are some who disagree, Ginger Rogers, for example. She's always lording it over me because sometimes I've been known to see a doctor."

By coincidence, the plush dressing room we sat in had been prepared so luxuriously for Ginger in "Mame," which had now departed.

"Mary Baker Eddy never said many of the things attributed to her. One thing I'm devout about is age. I've never known how old my mother and father are. We never celebrated birthdays.

"When I don't feel well, I think of all the people who went to the trouble of getting tickets and I decide to do the show.

"Afterward, people sometimes say, 'That was the best show you ever did.' Sophie Tucker was wheeled out on a stretcher once with two nurses taking care of her. She wanted everybody to see she was really sick. Nobody ever dies when the curtain is up. They may faint or collapse or die when the curtain is down — but never when it's up.

"God loves you when you're active. Sometimes you come off the stage with your leg bleeding and you say, 'When did I do that?' You didn't feel it on stage. You must have been in a coma out there. It just shows that a human being should do what he's supposed to do — get up out of bed and work."

CAROL WILL have played eight weeks here when she returns to the Las Vegas Riviera July 29 after having been a positive smash in her first show in London. She does all the great sketches better and slicker than before, and has added a Brigitte Bardot impersonation (as Lady MacBeth) where she's in a towel (and chewing it). And then there's Marlene Dietrich with the legs and the flowing negligee and a few German expressions and Carol has Dietrich saying, about all the young glamor dolls, "But don't you see, compared to me, they've not a leg to stand on!"

Actress Zoe Caldwell, starring off-B'way in "Colette," was awarded England's O.B.E. (Order of the British Empire). She says jokingly the letters mean "Off-Broadway Equity" . . . Eliott Gould's latest hit film, "Getting Straight," will earn back its entire cost by July 4. . . . Restaurateur (and amateur horseman) Van Rapoport of The Spindletop will compete in a horse show next month against another Rapoport — his son Gary . . . Jacqueline Bisset cut short her publicity tour for "The Grasshopper" to be with beau Michael Sarrazine on his birthday . . . Barbara Dana, who's in the B'way comedy "Room Service," sometimes "daylights" on the TV soap opera, As the World Turns.

Rudolf Nureyev'll be the subject of a TV special (produced by Jerry Purcell) . . . Maurice Chevalier finishing his eighth book of memoirs . . . The producers of "B.S., I Love You," filming in N.Y., promised Peter Kastner two days off the take his final exams at UCLA.

Frank Sinatra Jr. bought $400 worth of music tapes at the Colony Record Shop . . . Karen Prettyman, production ass't on the David Frost TV'er, booked singer Michael Allen for the show and thye've been dating ever since . . . Dionne Warwick hasn't arrived yet at Harrah's Tahoe for her opening, but her 10 wardrobe trunks have.

Ron Dante, who helped sell 10 million records as an unbilled singer with "The Archies" and "The Cufflinks") will finally work under his own name. First record: "Let Me Bring You Up" (for Kirshner Records).

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Murray Kouvant recalls that he was once concerned that he couldn't understand rock 'n' roll lyrics. Now he's worried because he can understand them.

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Be glad, men, when you reach your 30s. That's when women are still interested in you, but the Army isn't.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Nothing lasts as long as a suit you don't like."

EARL'S PEARLS: A man boasted that he never drinks on the job — and then he tried to remember if his last job was in '61 or '62.

Pat Henry described crowded, traffic-clogged Manhattan: "It's an island, 15 miles long — and four hours wide." That's earl, brother.

SWEDISH HAPPENINGS

I am Curious (Blue); Prison Film Planned

By A. H. WEILER
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Now that Vilgot Sjoman's "I am Curious (Blue)" has been, shall we say, exposed here (following "I am Cruious (Yellow)" which was a $7-million box-office bonanza for Grove Press), we can perhaps look forward to still another example of Sjoman's penchant for investigative filmmaking. In "Curious" and it sequel, the Swedish writer-director examined his countrymen's sexual, social and political attitudes. Recently, it seems, he's been taking a look at Sweden's prison system and the result is "Ni Ljuger" ("You're Lying").

"You're Lying," an amalgam of documentary and fictional techniques, is said to be Sjoman's cinematic retort to those who claim Sweden's penal setup is modern and enlightened. The script is based on a book by two ex-convicts and some of the footage was shot in Sweden's Langholm Prison. Grove has acquired the rights, but no release date has been set.

MEANWHILE, Sjoman is here on a visit and talking about his newest feature, "An untitled movie I completed about three weeks ago in Stockholm. It's a story I wrote and directed about a truck driver who has an affair with a pregnant woman. It's a comedy — my first — and I worked with a cast of unknowns. We used a new technique with 16mm. film."

POLITICS

Anonymity New for Sax Elliot

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Saxon (Sax) Elliot, 53, although currently listed in the nameless "others" category of statewide polls in the primary election for state superintendent of public instruction, was one of the all-time athletic stars at Poly High School in Long Beach.

Elliott, a 40-year resident of Los Angeles County, has had 32 years' experience in administration and teaching, including 11 years in public secondary schools and 21 at the college and university level.

He is now chairman and professor in the Health and Safety Studies Department at Cal State Los Angeles. He organized and developed the department in 1950.

Elliot is campaigning for a redirection of education "with reemphasis on self-discipline, acceptance and respect for authority and moral standards. The toboggan slide to a sensualistic, drug oriented, degenerate and immature society without educational tools for a better life must be met by a courageous, sophisticated education system with strong public support."

ELDERS ENDORSE

The annual convention of the Protective Council of California Senior Citizens Inc. announced recommendations to its members who are Democrats: Jess Unruh for governor; Sen. Alfred Alquist for lieutenant governor; Council President James DeWitt for membership on the Democratic Central Committee. The convention also voted to support Prop. 8.

CHAMBER OPPOSES 8

The Long Beach Chamber of Commerce has voted to oppose Prop. 8 on the Tuesday primary ballot. Their statement expressed concern over the absence of guidelines or any specific formulas or sources for tax revenues that would be tapped by the state to cover added costs of financial aid for public schools and welfare services.

POWER HITS JARVIS

Gordon Powers, Republican candidate for Board of Equalization, has charged that GOP opponent Howard Jarvis' ballot listing as "tax reduction expert" is an attempt to "to deceive voters who don't know his true record."

Powers said Jarvis was taken to court in 1964 and enjoined from collecting funds for the Barry Goldwater presidential campaign without authorization to do so.

Spanish Speaking Show Folk Unite

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Nosotros" is the Spanish word for "us."

It is also an organization of show folk of Latin origin, primarily Spanish-speaking individuals, who have banded together to exact a better shake from the bigwigs of motion pictures and television.

Black actors made tremendous strides in the past decade. Now black technicians, directors and writers are finding jobs.

But Puerto Ricans, Mexican-Americans (a term Americans of Mexican origins don't particularly esteem), Cubans and other so-called Latins have had a rough time of it.

FOR YEARS the Mexican has been portrayed as the sleepy peon, the greasy-hairy gigolo, the comic blunderer, the mountain bandido.

Under the leadership of Richardo Montalban — a native of Mexico who has played the cliche roles — nosotros is pressing hard on all fronts for a clearer picture of Chicanos (another word with mixed impact) and other persons of Latin descent in show business.

One of the group's best spokesmen is Henry Darrow, the star of "High Chaparral." He was born in Puerto Rico but plays a Mexican, and changed his name from Delgado to Darrow to find work.

"If a producer or a director sees a Latin name on the cast sheet, he immediately creates an image of the cliche Mexican," Darrow said.

"THEY THINK of him as shiftless or comic. Nosotros wants to change all that. We have a three-part program.

"First, we don't want roles in TV or films just because we are Latins. We want to compete with everyone else. Second, we are organizing a training program and school in East Los Angeles for Spanish-speaking actors. Thirdly, we must change the image."

Darrow is an engaging man, vital, filled with humor, able to laugh about producers who wouldn't interview him when he was named Delgado but now hire him under his present name.

"I would like to change my name back again. But it is too late. Everyone knows me as Darrow now," he said, shaking his head.

"I am the first Puerto Rican to appear in a regular series. When I go back to my homeland they call me Mano; that means brother. In Mexico they call me Manolito.

"It is a touching thing to see the pride and affection on their faces. I am one of them."

DARROW SPEAKS faultless English. His appearance allows him to play roles of all national origins. But a simple thing, the name of Delgado, roadblocked his career for years.

It is not enough that he has found success. He seeks it for others.

"Nosotros needs more members,' he said. "Anthony Quinn is helping set up the training school. Desi Arnaz is giving support. The blacks have shown the way, and we must follow their lead.

"I suppose there are 15 million Spanish-speaking people in the United States. I don't know, but I am happy to include all Latins. They should be recognized for their contributions to our culture; their talents should be given an opportuntiy to flourish."

LACK OF MUGGEES CUTS CRIME

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio, known around Capitol Hill for his caustic statements, doesn't think much about police reports indicating crime has decreased in the District of Columbia.

"How can you have as many muggers on Washington streets to commit crimes when there aren't as many muggees for the mugger to mug?" he asked in a Senate speech.

"The valid and correct reason that there is less crime not only in downtown Washington, but throughout the entire District of Columbia, is that men and women do not venture out at night nor do they permit their children."

SALESMEN ARE RARE . . .
You Have To Find Them
One at a Time

NATIONAL CHEMSEARCH CORPORATION is looking for a special kind of man—not a specialized set of skills.

Our many faceted business involves the manufacture and sale of industrial and maintenance chemicals to the industrial, institutional, and commercial markets, and we need outstanding men in sales and sales management. The backgrounds of our men are varied; some are experienced salesmen, some not. We are interested in the man and are willing to invest our time, money, and effort in training the right man to become successful.

If you can work well under normal business pressures, make decisions, and learn to lead others, NATIONAL CHEMSEARCH CORPORATION can offer you an outstanding career opportunity now.

The average income of our salesmen after their first year is over $17,000 annually and they have a growth potential dependent only upon their own ability. Rewards are directly proportional to individual effort.

We have been growing at a 20% rate annually and for the past nine years and intend to continue. Thus, at NATIONAL CHEMSEARCH CORPORATION, you don't stand in line for opportunity, your future is limited only by yourself. Men with SALES MANAGEMENT potential need only prove themselves in the field.

If interested, we would like to talk with you. Please call LOU SCHWARTZ

New Life With Linkletter

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

Art Linkletter is best described as: (a) A television personality; (b) A multimillionaire businessman; (c) An enthusiastic skier and surfer; (d) A crusader against drug abuse; (e) All of these.

The answer is, of course, that Linkletter is all of the above and more.

Taping his weekday afternoon television show, managing his wide-ranging businesses and investments and criss-crossing the country to counsel youths against the use of drugs — the youngest of his five children, Diane, fell to her death while on LSD — makes Linkletter one of the busiest men in show business.

THE CANADIAN-born Linkletter has been talking to people for 37 years, first as an announcer for San Diego radio station then as host of "People Are Funny," "House Party," and, finally, "Life With Linkletter," where he shares duties with his son, Jack.

"I wanted to be a star," he said, "but my trouble was I had no talent. I couldn't sing, I couldn't dance or tell jokes. Then two guys in Texas started something called Vox Pop. They just took a mike out onto the street and talked to people. And that changed my whole life."

Linkletter, who at 58 is a husky 6 feet 1, said, "The thing about this business I love — and I love it — is that I'm as curious and enthusiastic now as I was 37 years ago.

"I'm genuinely interested in people and operate on the known theory that every person is unique. I'm constantly amazed or appalled by their reactions."

Since his first job, Linkletter has seen the audiences grow more sophisticated. "I'm doing stuff now that's three times more controversial than before," he said. "It's candid. What are people talking about? The new morality. Mixed marriages. Homosexuality. They're talking about subjects practically taboo 10 years ago. We're getting practically no protest mail."

AS MUCH as anything, Linkletter is known for his interviews with children. Many of their answers have been collected into such best-selling books as "Kids Say the Darndest Things."

"The first thing I do with a child is that I try to ask him a question that is simple, easy and that he knows the answer to. You might ask him his name. It's like priming a pump," he said.

"Kids are different today. They have the same childlike approach to things, but the biggest difference is in their vocabulary and their surface knowledge of things. That comes from television. I asked a 7-year-old boy what he wanted to be and he said, 'Outrageously happy.' He probably got that from some commercial."

SINCE THE death of his daughter in April 1969,

The Anchorman

He May Fade from the TV Screen

BY JOAN HANAUER

Ned Calmer believes the day of pretty-boy television newscasters is over and the era of specialized broadcast reporting has begun.

Calmer is a considerable authority on such matters. After becoming a foreign correspondent for the Chicago Tribune Paris office, then for the New York Herald-Tribune's Paris edition, he turned to broadcasting, a career he pursued for 27 years.

He recently took advantage of an "early retirement" program so, he explains, he could give himself time to think — and to write. One result is "The Anchorman," a recently published novel about the business he knows so well.

"TELEVISION news is getting farther and farther away from the concept of 'pretty boy' newscasters and anchormen," he said in an interview. "There was a time when the 'pretty boy' flourished, but I think that day is over."

That doesn't mean a matinee idol profile will disqualify anyone from television broadcasting and he pointed out that some particularly distinguished looking — as well as talented — types remain on the air.

"Look at Howard K. Smith," he said. "He's a very good looking man. And Eric Sevareid looks like he ought to have his face carved on Mt. Rushmore.

"There's just one thing — you still have to have hair. A bald anchorman, at least one who is bald in front of the camera, is unthinkable. But otherwise TV is getting farther and farther away from that."

CALMER believes television is in for more serious changes in its news programs, particularly as to specialization. He said:

"Television news has become less exploratory and more immediate — that could almost be a motto for television news. Great effort is being made to give more depth to television news. Compare television news with the press, or radio for that matter, and you find that television has far less time for news at its disposal."

He said that in the effort to reme-

TV's Only Private Eye

MIKE CONNORS . . . Emmy Candidate

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Mike Connors, star of the "Mannix" television series, has been nominated for an Emmy and says candidly: "I'd certainly like to win it."

The handsome former UCLA basketball star was nominated for best performance by an actor in a leading role in a dramatic series.

It's possible Connors turned in the best single acting job of the year in one of his show's episodes, "The Sound of Darkness," in which he loses and regains his eyesight.

"I'd bet you anything I wouldn't have been nominated if I hadn't done that particular episode," Connors said, grinning.

AS THE only Private Eye on television during the past season, Connors explained that few award winners — whether on Broadway, movies or in television — play the difficult straight parts.

"It's the flashy, gimmick roles that get the attention — alcoholics, prostitutes and the rest," he said. "But the best advice I ever got was from a man who won his Oscars the hard way, Spencer Tracy.

"One day when I was making the 'Tightrope' series, Tracy was working on the lot and flagged me down. 'I watch your show all the time and you do a great job. I always believe what you're doing.'

"He asked me to stop by his dressing room and advised me to concentrate on the simple form of acting. He said if I did, I'd outlast any other young actor around.

"Then when I did 'Stage Coach,' I was chatting with Van Heflin, and he said, 'It took me 25 years to realize what acting is all about. Simplicity.'"

CONNORS PLAYS his role with simplicity, showing honest concern for the characters involved in each of the show's segments.

"Before the nominations were announced, I told my wife (Mary Lou) that I would be content with a nomination. That it would be honor enough," Connors said. "Now she's kidding me because I want to win. And there's a good reason for it.

"I'd like to win so I can say I was the best actor on television one year in the eyes of my peers.

"Look at Richard Burton. I think he's been nominated for the Oscar seven times and never won. Someday, I'm sure, if he doesn't win, there will be a big void in his life in regards to achievement."

As "Mannix" moves into its fourth year, Connors expects to see other detective shows in prim time. He's not certain how long they will last.

"The public has to like what you stand for if you're going to sustain a show on television," Connors concluded. "Evidently, viewers like what Mannix is and does."

They also dig Mike Connors.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

I . . . NOTICE that "Big Valley" is not listed in its 8:30 p.m. time slot on Ch. 13. A few weeks ago you explained that the repeats would not be dropped. If so, what has happened to them. I like the show and I don't want to miss it.

R.G.,
Long Beach

(Ch. 13 now says the program is off for the summer. It is "tentatively" scheduled to return in the fall.)

CH. 11 reached an all time low in television programming with screening of "Red, White and Maddox," May 16. Not only was the content personally offensive to my wife and I, but the presentation of this material at this time was highly inflammatory and capable of provoking more incidents of unrest throughout our nation.

In our opinion this was not social or political commentary as the program was labeled, but personal villification of the highest order. The fact that a disclaimer at the end of the show stated it did not reflect the station's viewpoint does not excuse the station from poor sense of timing in presenting this show.

Specifically, our objections are to the following points:

We both do not agree with most of what Gov. Maddox says, yet we fail to see where this attack served any useful purpose in correcting Georgia's problems. We also fail to see how a dramatization of weakness contributes positively to correcting problems . . .

There were perhaps many subtitles o fthe program that we missed, but one obvious point was made — the scenes in which campus demonstrations are portrayed as the non-violent, loving kind. The current picture of campus unrest, as portrayed by the mass media, seems to be anything but non-violent . . .

We both found the casual treatment of the Diety in extremely poor taste. We really find it difficult to believe there is a thread of truth in the scenes where Gov. Maddox is talking to God. This again, tends to reinforce the casual regard for God today, and does nothing to strengthen either a person's or a nation's faith.

This was the wrong type of program for this medium. People may purchase a book or tickets to a play, to view any particular viewpoint they wish. But to bring it into the family living room, under the guise of political commentary, is pure propaganda. The fact that the program was billed as part fantasy in no way lessens its impact . . .

We feel strongly that the station has a public responsibility to more carefully present material that can have adverse effects on contemporary society.

Phyllis F. Sprague,

TV NOTEBOOK

Directors of Mississippi's state-operated Educational Television System, who had refused to show "Sesame Street" because its cast was racially integrated, changed their minds and agreed to air the nationally acclaimed children's program.

The seven directors, in a split vote, had decided last month that the series would not be carried on the state's new ETV system because it would be "offensive to some Mississippians."

The decision touched off a flood of mail from persons in and out of Mississippi to the ETV authority. The directors read much of the mail and then voted to show the program.

"There will always be people in Mississippi and across the nation who will find an integrated television cast offensive," wrote one supporter of the program. "But there are probably more conscientious parents who will put the education of their children ahead of their personal prejudices, and these people should not be denied a choice."

William Smith, executive director of the ETV authority, said "Sesame Street" would start being shown on the ETV system within a couple of weeks.

"Sesame Street" is an excellent instructional program for small children," Smith said. "It teaches them numbers and letters, and makes learning very easy for them."

"Sesame Street" made its nationwide debut last November. It is offered free to ETV stations and nearly 95 per cent of them broadcast it.

CBS ORIGINALLY announced that Glen Campbell's July and August replacement would be a comedy hour called "Rap." The program's title has now been officially changed to "Comedy Tonight."

The new title, while hardly electrifying, may be more precise than the original. "To rap" in current youth-jargon means — approximatley — to converse. The hip, young crowd might have believed that the program was still another of the talk shows.

Titles really don't mean much in TV. Does any member of the viewing audience really call it "The Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour"?

"HALL OF Fame's" two-hour production of "Hamlet," starring television's former "Dr. Kildare," Richard Chamberlain, in the title role, is set for NBC-TV Nov. 17 . . . Goldie Hawn, who gained fame on "Laugh-In" and recently won an Academy Award as best supporting actress for the movie "Cactus Flower," will headline her first television special on NBC-TV next season . . . ABC-TV has tentative plans to develop a daily soap opera based on the old movie "How Green Was My Valley."

CBS-TV will begin summer reruns of some of the "He and She," series segments, with Paula Prentiss and Richard Benjamin, starting 8 p.m., June 19. The series ran on the network in 1967.

WALLY COX, reminiscing about "Mr. Peepers" he did in the early 1950s on NBC, said he "didn't like doing the show. It was in the days of live programming and we had to remember the whole script. It was just too rigid and tense," he said.

"Panel shows (he's on "Hollywood Squares") are fun — and such a nice way to make a living . . ."

CBS and Vietnam Atrocities

Some Questions Answered; Some Still Remain

By RICHARD WILSON
(Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1970)

CBS Evening news has offered authentication, as requested in this column (Televues, May 17) of one filmed horror incident in Vietnam, without, however, coming to grips with the central question.

An 8½ minute rebuttal on the Cronkhite show to the Pentagon's challenge of its film of the stabbing of a Vietcong prisoner by a South Vietnamese soldier gave no additional clue to the identity of American advisers alleged to be present, nor the degree of complicity, if any.

According to an official Pentagon spokesman "insufficient information was gained from the CBS film presentation to aid in the investigation."

This is the point at issue and was the reason for the Pentagon's request for unused film and additional information on this particular incident and two others.

CBS EVENING NEWS acted in its long range interest in supporting the authenticity of the incident and is to be commended for that, although there were some gaps. Still, there was enough supporting evidence to indicate that the Pentagon was wrong in suggesting that an Australian helicopter was involved and on other points concerning whether training film had been patched into what was supposed to be the real thing.

The main point remains in a fog. This point is not that acts of cruelty and barbarism take place in war. Or that CBS's constitutional freedom is being challenged. Nor that the Pentagon is laying on the heavy hand of censorship, which is rather laughble in view of the incredible latitude given to the broadcasting media in a war zone.

The point is that the Pentagon, sensitive to the public horror over the My Lai massacre, and under pressure from the White House, has been trying to move against war atrocities involving Americans. CBS has declined to cooperate in furnishing any information more than it has broadcast publicly on the general ground that it will not compromise news sources and news personnel in Salgon. This refusal, however, did not prevent CBS from producing the South Vietnamese soldier and recording his story that in stabbing the Vietcong he acted in self-defense. It was admitted that this might have been the case, which is contrary to the impression given when the incident was first broadcast that it was an act of "savagery", simple and awful, and witnessed by, or related in some way to American personnel.

HOW and why these inquiries into CBS films of war atrocities were initiated in the first place is of the greatest pertinency. They were not initiated as an investigation of CBS. They were initiated to make sure that the Pentagon bureaucracy was taking all reasonable steps to pursue violations of the Geneva Convention on the treatment of war prisoners or other atrocities so that the White House would not again be caught short as it was in the My Lai incident.

The several "fact sheets" requested by and submitted to the White House by the Pentagon were all related to alleged violations of the Geneva Convention as filmed by CBS. They included, however, evaluations of the authenticity of three incidents, raising questions on whether the incidents had been staged or fictionalized in any way. A White House memorandum intended for internal use arrived at some very broad conclusions on what was called thorough distortion of the picture on alleged war crimes with some highly inflammatory remarks that freedom of the press should not be permitted to stand in the way of exposure of what amounts to fraud by the press.

It was argued in this memorandum that in other cases it was essential that the FCC and Congressional Committees obtain unused film and testimony of network officials "to establish the fact that CBS was perpetrating a fraud upon the public."

IN THAT context, then, the whole range of incidents in which the news agency has been challenged in the past couple of years was brought into the picture. Those included an alleged "staged pot party" in Chicago, "staging" of incidents of police brutality at the Chicago Democratic Convention, the financing and "staging" of the planning of an invasion of Haiti, and possibly the most delicate of all, the purported death of a baby allegedly from malnutrition as an introduction to the CBS documentary on "Hunger In America." The latter incident needs more attention because the film, according to officials, is being shown abroad.

These matters have been the subject of inquiry in Congress, the Federal Communications Commission, the Pentagon and the White House. The point was reached where the CBS thought it should respond publicly in its own medium and it did so effectively on one incident.

When the network, however, goes beyond this to imply or allow the inference to be drawn that what really is at issue is its freedom under Pentagon pressure to tell it like it is credulity begins to drop. An answer to such an implication is that in preparing its rebuttal to the Pentagon CBS had to have cooperation from the command in Saigon, which is rather a strange way for government repression to work.

Syndicated Television

Image Changing From That of 'Bicycle Service'

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

Increasingly, syndicated television is changing its image from that of a "bicycle service" offering fourth reruns of network castoffs.

Many advertisers, including some of the biggest, now are producing first-run programs for syndication directly to stations across the country.

They see it as a means of reaching the audience they desire at rates lower than those offered by the networks.

A COMMON practice among advertisers is to produce the show and offer it free to the stations in return for three commercial minutes. The stations can make a profit by selling another three minutes to local sponsors.

"A great advantage," said one producer, "is that off the networks you only have two ratings a year rather than the weekly ratings. You're not living and dying by the old ratings game." Rating services sample local stations' audiences twice yearly.

First-run syndication is a $30 million a year business of up to 15 hours a week of game, talk and variety shows, which makes it an effective fourth network.

The show business weekly Variety calls it "the bicycle network," after the old practice of bicycling the prints around.

Among the top syndicated programs are "The Mike Douglas Show," "The David Frost Show," "To Tell the Truth," "Girl Talk," "Beat The Clock," "He Said, She Said," "The Galloping Gourmet," and "The Movie Game."

The syndicators and advertisers also have their eyes on cable television, which has been authorized by the Federal Communications Commission to originate its own programming and to sell advertising.

The syndicators could receive a shot in the arm from the FCC rule limiting the networks to three hours of non-news programming between 7 p.m. and 11 p.m. each night.

Another means of getting programs to the stations, other than mailing out tapes, is through the Hughes Television Network.

Since Howard Hughes took over the old Sports Television Network, its programming has become diversified.

One such program is a series of specials produced by Life magazine, the first of which, "Thirty Days to Survival," was a critical success.

Its second show, "Cowboy," was shown nationally by Hughes Wednesday night. It was a vivid portrayal of Ike Harold who consciously chose the lonely life of the open range.

SPECIAL

KCET AUCTION '70 (23), 6 p.m. — Art Linkletter, Pierre Salinger, Robert Wagner, Barbara Eden, Ernest Borgnine and Gisele MacKenzie are among celebrity auctioneers who'll be on hand through Saturday, 6 p.m. to 12 midnight, so viewers can bid on items from a thoroughbred horse to a teakwood sailboat — from a suit of armor to a cruise to Acapulco — and from Nancy Sinatra's white boots to one of Jo Anne Worley's feather boas. Station's goal is $300,000 to defray operating expenses.

1985 (11), 8 p.m. — If man survives George Orwell's 1984, here's a possibility for the next year, with total extinction of mankind likely due to pollution and overpopulation. In a simulated newscast we find power out in New York, a water crisis in Washington, agriculture paralyzed in the midwest and a killer smog striking L.A. Maury Green hosts a local follow-up to the Metromedia hour at 9 p.m.

CAMPUS CRUSADE (5), 9 p.m. — A new kind of revolution hits the campus as Pat Boone, Bobby Vee, Paul Stookey (without Peter and Mary), and the New Folk perform at UCLA. Presented by Campus Crusade for Christ, hour features both secular and sacred music, and informal discussions by students of today's problems.

2 MAN POP TENT

This is a fun thing for the young and young at heart. Can't you just see Dad and the kid on a campout, and Pa's number 12s sticking out in the rain.

BEACH BACK REST

A wonderous thing and a joy to behold, especially if you're at the beach trying to sit up and watch the kids. Canvas and hardwood frame.

10 LB. BRIQUETS

These are no better and no worse than those going for 89¢ in the stores, but why pay more. They burn slow, hi-heat, low spark, and make good beef taste better.

FOLDING BAR-B-Q

A real cutie, you can use it at home or just fold it up and take it to the beach or visiting. Adjustable grill.

STRUCTO SMOKER WAGON

Very deluxe, with the big cabinet, condiment shelf, serving counter, see thru oven, UL motor, the works.

No, Alice, this is not our best paneling, but it isn't a terror for the price. That word 'Mock' does rather throw me, so see for yourself.

SCALLOPED EDGING

Concrete in red or natural, the thing to edge once and never have to replace it. A lot faster to lay than brick and cheaper too.

Linkletter

Linkletter has turned drug abuse into a personal crusade. In recent weeks he has been in Atlanta, where he did five television interviews on the subject, and in Phoenix, where he talked to about 2,500 high school students called Teen Counsellors.

"Each Teen Counsellor is assigned an elementary school class and they tell the kids that everyone in high school isn't taking pot," he said.

"This is really making a dent because the kids talk to the smaller kids better than anyone else."

CRITICS' CORNER

DICK CAVETT SHOW, aired May 26, Ch. 7.

Dick Cavett, angered by numerous shouted interruptions, exchanged heated words with female hecklers in the audience during a discussion of the Women's Liberation Movement on his show.

Cavett drew rousing applause when, about halfway through the show, he finally lost patience with the hecklers who interrupted what was actually a good, intelligent — and at times, racy — discussion between Playboy's Hugh Hefner and two representatives of the women's movement, Diane Crothers and Holly Tannen.

The climax came when what sounded like a frantic woman's voice in the audience was heard shouting loudly.

Cavett asked if he could please have quiet so the discussion could continue. He told the hecklers he had two representatives of their cause in the discussion. And then, his anger mounting, he told the hecklers that if they couldn't behave, they should "get the hell out of here."

The audience responded loudly with its applause, but the shouting continued -- although, as throughout, it sounded like the work of relatively few but persistent hecklers. At this point, Cavett said that anyone who yelled from then on would be tossed out of the theater, and he instructed the pages and other authorities to do their duty. He also drew more applause.

Earlier in the discussion, Hefner had been interrupted and heckled. At one point, a woman shouted loudly and clearly: "You make all your money off the exploitation of women." She yelled that, as women, they were on hand to demand reparations for damages.

Cavett also observed that someone had called him a "male, chauvinist pig." Yet he was quite fair, as, in fact, were all the participants, despite their personal views. It was basically a lively, serious, good-humored discussion, and very provocative television. And that's something.

—Rick DuBrow, UPI

WILDERNESS ROAD, aired May 24, Ch. 4.

When adult, professional program makers move into the specialized area of children's programming, the result most often is a vicarious trip.

The audience may visit lobster pots off the Maine coast, see the nation's capital or travel through history back to colonial Boston.

NBC children's special "Wilderness Road," took the familiar route and covered the Arizona desert, Wyoming's mountains and Georgia's Okefenokee swamp. The scenery and the sights were strung together on a slender plot with characters consisting of a real life nature photographer named Will Lewis and a couple of kids.

There was nothing much the matter with the program but nothing much, either, that warranted the use of the word special—except that it replaced a trio of cartoon shows including "Penelope Pitstop," which is always a plus. —Cynthia Lowry, AP

THE GREAT BARRIER REEF, aired May 22, Ch. 4.

Third in the ecology documentary series by NBC in which "Today" show anchorman Hugh Downs gets a chance to indulge in his favorite sport — scuba diving — on the Great Barrier Reef off the east coast of Australia. The 1250-mile haven for some of the most interesting and curious piscatorial specimens finds the animals in an underwater jungle of their own, among shipwrecks, corals and killing among themselves to survive.

It took a year and a half to film the subject . . .

A most interesting subject for educational institutions and which, undoubtedly, will be brought back again and again for students in many areas, not alone in ecology or undersea sporting life . . . —Bill Ornstein, Hollywood Reporter

The Anchorman

dy television's lack of depth, the anchorman may be on his way out. First, he defined the anchorman:

"THE ANCHORMAN, in the purest sense, is only an extension of the camera. But an anchorman can be what he wants to make of the job — that is, until he runs afoul of Spiro Agnew or the boss of the network or similar hazards with which television newsmen are familiar.

"Television network news programs are so complicated and cover such a vast field. Control is all in the choice of the news. Frequently the anchorman is so busy with the task of reading that he doesn't even have time to edit.

"Walter Cronkite calls himself managing editor, so you can see how he regards the job. David Brinkley writes his own stuff. But other anchormen neither edit nor write their own copy because there's so much to be done, one man just can't do the job."

THAT'S WHY Calmer believes anchormen of the present kind are on the way out, that they will give way to teams of specialists, each of whom will take over the spot when the major emphasis of the news is in his area of knowledge.

Calmer, puffing on a pipe and speaking in a soft voice with perfect, regionless diction, defended the networks against their detractors, included Vice President Agnew.

"In so far as possible," he said, "I believe television news by and large is doing its level best to tell the whole story. Objectivity? In a pure sense, there's no such thing. Every man has his own bias and no matter how much he tries to control it, by the simple act of selecting one piece of news and omitting another, he must show it."

The veteran broadcaster said the question he was most asked on a recent speaking tour was how he rated today's network anchormen. In diplomatic style, beginning with his former CBS colleague, he said:

"They each have their own quality. Cronkite is a superb reporter who never gets the chance to report anything on the regular evening news program. Instead he gets to read bulletins, then there's the commercial, then he introduces someone else who is on the scene. Even at the end, Sevareid does the commentary.

"But Cronkite on a moonshot or any story he can cover independently — I think he's the greatest reporter on the air.

"Huntley and Brinkley make a good team, and Brinkley is the great stylist of television news. Every young television reporter in the country is trying to imitate Brinkley's delivery.

"As for ABC's Frank Reynolds — he's coming along very fast. He may turn out to be the towering figure on television news of the next generation, as the older men retire. That is, if anchormen last that long."

Underground Radio

Rock on FM Rapidly Expanding Development

By JACK GOULD
New York Times Service

The most rapidly expanding development in broadcasting is "Underground Radio," which transmits a broad diversity of rock music for FM listeners from their late teens to their middle 30's.

A random survey of such stations in many parts of the country suggests that the audience for underground radio covers the spectrum of those who like the music for itself, those who use it as background music for social marijuana smoking and in some instances "to get stoned by," those who respond to pleas for active social protest within the law and those who openly want to radicalize the country.

The emergence of what many broadcasters believe is a fundamental medium of communication among an unmeasurable number of the nation's younger people is taking place on frequency modulation stations which found classical music unprofitable and have switched to rock.

THE LYRICS provide a springboard for expressions of dissatisfaction with society's status quo, alienation from older people with "closed minds," loneliness, general love of humanity and disgust with political leaders who "don't know what time it is" and are purportedly preparing "greater oppression to stifle dissent."

Virtually without exception, rock FM station owners and students said television's influence had almost completely waned save for sports, news and an occasional movie. Most TV commercials insulted the intelligence of those either in college or recently graduated, they said.

In broadcasting, the most articulate foe of underground radio and rock subculture is Art Linkletter, TV entertainer and wealthy businessman, whose 20-year-old daughter, Diane, died last October after jumping out of a sixth floor window under the influence of LSD. He has been touring the country asserting that the ultimate affect of much of "underground radio" was to encourage experimentation with drugs.

THE PHRASE "Underground Radio," which many avante gardists of FM rock already regard as passe, if not used in the general political sense. Rather, it represents the technique of picking "cuts" or segments from long-playing rock albums which often do not make the list of the top 40 rock tunes offered on single 45-rpm disks. The top 40 are still widely used by powerful AM stations to attract less sophisticated youths. But such records also may censor out lines from the original album version.

The stereophonic FM, which surrounds the listener with sound, is purposely raised in volume by the young so that they can physically sense the vibrations of the audio waves and simultaneously emphasize what one college graduate characterized as the social schism between generations.

Unlike the rapid-fire delivery of earlier rock disc jockeys, their new FM counterparts talk in low, seductive voices, do not speak louder in delivering commercials. The Boston sation WBCN-FM, simply read a news report of proposed legislation in the Massachusetts legislature that challenged the legality of the Vietnamese war on the ground that Congress had not formally declared war and then urged its listeners to telegraph their opinions. The resultant deluge of messages was believed to be partly responsible for Gov. Francis W. Sargent's decision to sign the bill.

In San Francisco, Robert Preston, program director of KMVX-FM, said that his outlet was urging neighbors to form car pools to drive out to the country and buy fresh vegetables to avoid paying inflationary supermarket prices. Listeners were also informed of legal agencies prepared to take action against landlords who either were seeking rental increases or not maintaining their buildings in good condition.

Sarah Newsom, business manager of WBCN-FM, said the Boston station once received heated protests from college girls for running standard cosmetic advertisements.

Students at Santa Barbara, living in their beautiful community by the sea, should be happy, but terrible evil has invaded their paradise. Ehud Yonay, a young free-lance writer, tells of his visit to a place where people expect more fire, more murder.

Kids, You Didn't Invent Riots

At Harvard, arsonists attempted to burn the residence of the president of the college. Rocks were thrown through his office window. A bomb was found in a men's room. The president resigned.

At Yale, students rioted through the town, killing one citizen. A tutor trying to seize a window-breaking student was fatally stabbed. Students shot and killed a fire-fighter in a pitched battle with the New Haven Fire Department.

At Princeton, a huge bomb exploded in Nassau Hall, breaking windows and cracking walls.

At the University of Georgia, six drunken students set upon and painfully wounded the president. At Oakland College, Miss., a student farally stabbed the president.

Sounds familiar? Accounts of violence out of yesterday's newspaper, maybe? Wrong.

These are all historical accounts of student violence in this country in the early 1800s. Rioting has a long and enduring tradition on American campuses and some of our forefathers in their college days displayed a talent for destruction that makes SDS and The Weatherman look like honor societies by comparison.

Student riots in the early 1800s were called rebellions. There was a Rebellion Tree in front of Hollis Hall on the Harvard Campus, where students gathered to air their grievances, stockpile their rocks and incendiaries and compile their lists of faculty members marked for pummeling.

The immediate causes of violence are often vague or not stated at all in the college histories. Harvard students rebelled in 1807 over finding maggots in the dining hall cabbage. The Princeton riots of 1807 began as a protest against the suspension of three students for drunkenness. At Brown, the Hell-Fire Rummaging Club devoted itself to what Jerry Rubin would call "revolution for the hell of it." It persistently and systematically destroyed college property for no apparent reason.

There is no doubting that what Morris Bishop calls "the habit of mutiny" was part of college life prior to the Civil War. It paralleled a strong predilection for violence present in our cities and on the frontiers of early America. As the illegal violence perpetrated by young people on our college campuses mirrors the legal violence demanded of our young people in Indochina, so in the early days of the Republic did college students mimic the examples set by their elders.

There were the usual cries about weak-kneed administrators nor cracking down on rebels. Actually, the penalties meted out seem rather drastic.

In 1834 after bombing and furniture smashing, Harvard President Josiah Quincy called in the police and banished the entire sophomore class for a year. It no more ended incendiarism and violence than had the Harvard faculty in 1823 by expelling 43 seniors out of a class of 70.

The Yale faculty expelled half the sophomore class after an 1830 riot, but trouble kept erupting at intervals. The tutor mentioned at the beginning of this article was stabbed in 1843. A townsman was killed in 1854 and the fire-fighter in 1854.

After the Princeton riots of 1807, the president closed the college and suspended 125 out of its 200 students. The college nevertheless had five more major rebellions before 1830.

At Hamilton College, N.Y., the administration adopted harsh new rules forbidding students to "blaspheme, rob, fornicate, steal, forge, duel; or assault, wound or strike the president or members of the faculty."

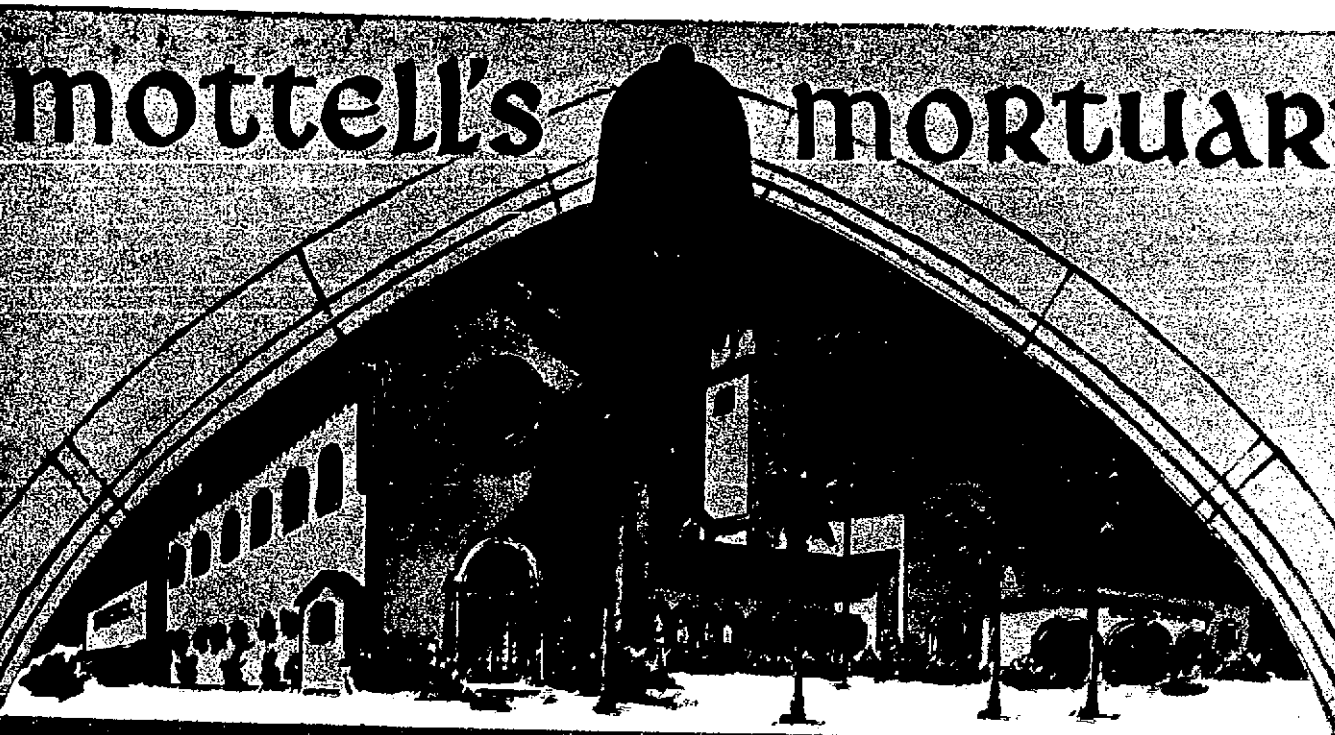

Despite these prohibitions, students dragged a cannon to the fourth floor of a dormitory and fired it through the door of an unpopular tutor. He narrowly escaped the smoking ruins with his life.

After the Civil War, the archaic curriculums of the private colleges were overhauled. The classics were abandoned in favor of relevant courses and students were allowed to choose electives. The Morrill Land Grant College Act of 1862 saw the launching of state universities. The sons of farmers as well as the sons of the gentry began appearing on the new public campuses.

The noted scientist Benjamin Silliman had blamed the Yale rebellions of the 1830s on democracy. "Its spirit infests our seminaries of learning," he said. Yet it appears that with the stronger surge of democracy and equality onto the new state campuses after the 1860s, violence began to subside. □

WHEN HEADLINES ARE FORGOTTEN . . .

MANY NAMES flash quickly into prominence via newspaper headlines . . . and then, just as quickly, are forgotten.

IN THE BUSINESS or professional ranks a few names take firm root in the public mind, actually becoming better known and more deeply respected each year. This slow but sure development of public confidence we know as "reputation."

SELDOM IS A good reputation so important as in the funeral profession. It must be earned through years of experience . . . cherished under all circumstances, and passed on by way of teaching and example.

SUCH IS THE reputation of Mottell's, built on the integrity of its founder, and preserved intact during the sixty-one years of this firm's existence.

ONLY THOSE who have been served by Mottell's can truly appreciate the comfort of entrusting all arrangements to our care.

OUR ONE AIM . . . "To make possible a beautiful tribute to the memory of loved ones, without occasioning hardship to those who remain." Public acceptance of Mottell's Mortuary for sixty-one years has proven the validity of such a statement.

Inside Isla Vista

This paradise by the sea, where 9,500 UCSB students live with their textbooks and surfboards, is no longer a quiet haven of sand and surf and studies. A bank has been burned, a student has been shot to death. There is talk of guns and unrest and more violence. It's like a city gearing itself for a siege. But against whom? Why? Does anyone have the answers?

By Ehud Yonay

I didn't go to Isla Vista to find out what happened, but why it happened there. I always had the image of the Santa Barbara campus as a haven of sand and surf and palm trees, where classmates at UCLA often disappeared for the summer, returning three months later with a deep tan and calluses on their feet from riding surfboards. A nostalgic preserve of such obsolescence as beer busts and school dances and holding hands in the moonlight.

The violent events of recent months just didn't make sense. They came over the wires in rapid succession — massive strikes in support of an anthropology professor whose contract was not renewed by the university, student arrests, frantic receptions for William Kunstler and Jerry Rubin's wife, the burning of a bank. And finally, a student shot and killed while trying to put out a fire. In Santa Barbara? It had to be a mistake.

I drove into Isla Vista on a sunny Friday in April and went straight to the Bank of America. I had a feeling that whatever I was looking for couldn't be far from it. The new bank, a temporary structure hastily put up after the fire, stood against the back fence. In front of it, yellow sand covered the site of the original building, with a few charred remains still visible. A tall chainlink fence surrounded the lot.

Everything was very quiet, which is one way to describe Isla Vista today. White apartment houses glistened in the sun with phony Greek and Polynesian and Californian fronts, their drab continuity punctuated by silvery sprinkler-jets, like so many real estate contraptions that have lined up the freeway from Los Angeles. A few students pedalled bicycles slowly to school. Others walked, cutting their way across empty lots that were still covered with a thick, waist-deep growth of weeds and wild flowers. Nobody paid any noticeable attention to the bank, yet it was there, visible from all the spots where students sat and walked and stood. Like the headless horseman, returning to taunt the little community with the spectre of events yet to come.

I have spent most of the day talking to students wherever they were, in the local deli, the park, on the beach. The bank seemed to be everywhere. And Kevin Moran, the student who was shot a week earlier, and buried two days before I came. The young people knew immediately what I meant when I asked them what was happening. They talked readily, but their answers were serious, somber, disturbed.

The violent eruptions didn't always make sense to them, either. "This is really not a radical community, yet a bank was burned, and I don't think it will stop at that," said Steve Hamm, a junior in political science from Saugus. He was sitting outside Taco Bell on Embarcadero del Norte, lunching alone on taco and coffee.

He thought for a while before going on. "The bank burning—it wasn't so much a grievance against the bank, but something much larger. It symbolized the frustrations of students who think the world is going to pot. Everything is based on money nowadays. And then you have the war. Did you know that last January the Student Legislative Council took all of its funds out of the bank?"

Michael Kander, in red shirt and a collegiate haircut, joined our table. He is a senior in economics from Long Beach, and a member of Phi Delta Thera, whose members attempted to put out the first fires before giving up. He talked readily, ticking off what he thought were the causes of the riots, talking mostly in third person. As a fraternity member, he was suspected by the radicals of siding with the establishment. Did he? "No way, man." He said people were griping about the war, high rents, exploitation by the capitalists, police abuse, lack of power—I was to hear those reasons again and again throughout the day. "This weekend is going to be different, though," he said. "Kids have been buying guns, and are ready to use them."

Neither he, nor any of the others I have talked to, had a gun, or personally knew of anyone who did. But they all believed it. Which made I.V.—as Isla Vista residents call it—very much like the places you and I come from, where the difference between rumor and fact is the number of people who believe it. Michael shrugged. "I don't know. You hear it all over, so I guess there is something to it."

The more I talked to the young people of Isla Vista, the more I gave up on pinpointing specific issues that caused the tension. I heard about everything from rats in dilapidated apartments to the oil slick in the channel to the Chicago 7 trial. Yet, when asked if that was REALLY the reason for the riots, nobody was sure. But they all knew it was going to happen again. Anytime. Some said it had to get much worse first, before the community finally takes matters into its own hands.

More than anything they said it was the way they said it that was most convincing. That fatalistic acceptance, the knowledge that violence was inevitable, could be as much a cause as anything they attempted to articulate. "Something really terrible will have to happen before it'll get better," said Michael. On the highway leading out of I.V. girls were asking for rides to Santa Barbara, going away for the weekend.

Like a city gearing itself for a siege. But against whom? There was something about Isla Vista that afternoon, the tense expectancy of a battle zone. The waiting. And then I realized what made Isla Vista — a 6-square-block area adjacent to the UCSB campus—so different from the communities around it, where earlier that morning people were going about their daily living as if nothing had ever happened nearby, saying "oh, nothing" when I asked them what was happening.

It was the people. Sitting on the balconies with sunglasses and paperbacks, coming out of a bookstore in curlers covered by a flimsy scarf, carrying babies in shopping carts from the market — they were all young, in their late teens or early 20s, living on their own in a suburban routine carried over from wherever they came from. They seemed vulnerable suddenly, with no adults around, waiting for the outside world to strike at dawn. There were more people on the streets here than in the average neighborhood, walking, sitting on sidewalks, or riding bicycles. There were more people sitting on the grass in the park. And there were more patrol cars, ceaselessly taking in everything at a leisurely 15 miles per hour.

Earlier that day I had talked to a young student counselor on the tree-shaded patio of the Isla Vista Deli, across the corner from the bank. He was a tall, serious looking young man, with a mane of blond hair and two German shepherd puppies playing between his feet. He spoke slowly and carefully. "You hear much about the generation gap, the youth culture and all that. Well, here it is, what I.V. is all about. The kids here are the same as anywhere else, only here they are more concentrated, and can turn the whole community into a fort against the police." He didn't think the police caused the trouble, yet he blamed them for the escalating radicalization of the students. "What you have here," another student said, "is the radicals on one side, the police on the other, and then you have the majority in the middle which is becoming more and more radical because of the police."

Police brutality is no longer a slogan in Isla Vista, but a way of life. "Friends of mine were sitting in their apartment when the bank was burning. Suddenly the police broke the door down, put guns against my friends' heads, and asked them 'do you ..... like what's going on out there?'," recalled a student. Another said the police shot into his window with an air gun during a recent riot, to drive him away from the window, and that other policemen did the same with rocks. "Is it against the law to look outside your own window?"

"The majority of students here are really opposed to violence, but who wants to stand up and get shot?" said Michael. "People who've been on the side of the police have seen too many of their friends busted to remain in the middle." In a small, poster-covered room on campus, a young man with sunglasses and an indifferent voice told me the police were using new plastic handcuffs that keep getting tighter with every movement, causing several students to lose all feeling in their arms for a considerable time. His name was Jim. He wouldn't reveal more, nor let me take his picture. Until recently he worked as the chairman of the Associated Students Intelligence Agency (ASIA). He was relived of his duties after being suspended from school in the wake of a student demonstration, but continued to run the operation. He had nearly 50 people working under him, gathering evidence of police brutality, collecting photos, seeking out witnesses.

As we were talking, students came in and filed reports, leaving their names and phone numbers for future reference. Could the charges of police brutality be substantiated? Jim shrugged. "It is very difficult to do anything about it. We had a student here who was beaten up and arrested for no reason. The judge later dismissed his case. Well, he filed a complaint against the police. I can't prove the connection, but exactly a day later the sheriff issued an open warrant for his arrest, which made his complaint meaningless until they finish prosecuting him in court, which can take forever."

But resentment against the police seemed to

"I Remember Mama" Underground Heroine

By Mary Eunice Markus

The time is July 22, 1944; the place, the comfortable home of John and Jeanne Parent in Liege, Belgium. It is 2 a.m. Jeanne and her daughter, Julie, 18, are asleep. The Parents' only other child, Jacqueline, 15, is spending the night at the nearby home of an aunt. John Parent is not at home, either. He has been in a stalag or German prison camp for nearly two years. An American-born citizen of Belgium extraction, he was classified as an "enemy alien" shortly after that November day in 1942 when U.S. troops stormed ashore in North Africa. (This was the beginning of the long, bloody trail northward into Europe to drive out Nazi forces.)

But there is still another person in the Parent home; a houseguest not unlike 29 others before him. He is 1st Lt. William Calmes, a young Texas aviator. Calmes, forced down over enemy territory, was quickly whisked away by the well-organized, fearless Les Violettes. "The Violets" are Belgian underground members who risk their lives as well as those of their families to help American and allied fliers shot down over Nazi-infested terrain. The Belgian underground members work closely with their French counterparts in moving the fliers to neutral Switzerland. And they work under the noses of the well-trained, ruthless Gestapo.

Jeanne Parent has been in "The Violets" for nearly a year. Although only her two daughters know it, soon their well-kept, dangerous secret will be exposed.

In a few seconds two members of the dreaded Gestapo burst into the Parent home. The young Texan is hauled off to POW camp. Mrs. Parent and Julie are taken to political prison in Liege, a stone-walled horror house in the wealthy old mining city. Julie is questioned and released. But the Nazis are not through with Jeanne.

She is grilled mercilessly, slapped, beaten with leather belts and kicked by Nazi steel-tipped boots in an effort to get underground information, especially names of other members. Jeanne Parent says nothing.

Long days of solitary follow, interspersed with more beatings and questioning. A standard procedure of the Gestapo is placing her in a small, closed room with a radio turned on full volume. Then they scream questions at her. But their favorite punishment is starvation. Jeanne goes without food for days while enduring the torture. But even with the promise of release and 25,000 francs, she remains silent.

Finally the Nazis are convinced. She will die before telling them anything. The questioning stops and she is told she will be sent to the notorious Buchenwald death camp as soon as the Nazis can get transportation for the group of prisoners she is with. Her date of execution in the gas chamber is set for Sept. 2, 1944.

Meanwhile Julie and Jacqueline wait outside the barbed prison walls each day, not knowing their mother's fate has already been decided. All the girls have received from the Germans is a terse form letter telling them of their mother's imprisonment. They are also asked in the letter to bring a few toilet articles, some dress material, a needle and thread to the prison for her. All Jeanne Parent has been allowed to write on the letter is her signature.

One day during the girls' sad vigil, a German chaplain emerges from the prison. Julie gets up enough courage to approach him. He is supposed to be a man of God. Maybe he'll tell her something. "When will they release our mother?"

His face looks like a death mask to the frightened, bewildered girls. His answer is quick: "Never."

But the chaplain's merciless decree does not come true. Allied forces are invading Europe and pressing hard on the Germans. The Nazis must use all transportation facilities for retreating. The Buchenwald trip is delayed day by day. On Sept. 7, 1944, the American 1st Army troops liberate war-racked Liege and Jeanne Parent is freed.

Afterwards, Mrs. Parent said, "There was never any doubt in my mind that sooner or later they would kill me. But I told them nothing."

Today, a Lakewood woman, Jacqueline Parent Blunt, vividly recalls the experiences of her mother, Jeanne Parent, and the rest of the family during World War II years. Jacqueline is rightfully proud of her heroine-mother who was presented the Medal of Freedom, our nation's highest civilian decoration, on Nov. 4, 1948. The presentation, made by Gen. Courtney H. Hodges at Bird Island, N.Y., honored Jeanne Parent for "exceptionally meritorious service which aided the United States." Yet the United States was a country she had never seen until three years after her work with the underground began.

At the end of the war, Jeanne received a special citation from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for her "gallant services in the allied cause."

She was honored in two countries. From her native land, she held the Belgium Cross, the Commemorative War Medal, the Political Prisoners Cross, and a certificate from the Belgium Intelligence Service.

Jeanne Parent came with her husband and daughters to live in John Parent's hometown of Newark, N. J., in 1946. When Jeanne applied for her United States citizenship papers, she was asked only one question: "If we get into another war, will you do the same thing over again?" Mrs. Parent smiled and said simply, humbly: "Yes." In her heart she had been an American since May, 1940, when tiny Belgium, America's declared ally, lay crushed in the wake of Hitler's fast-moving war machine.

Jeanne's feelings regarding what she did are reflected today in the words of her daughter, Jacqueline, who says, "She did it because her husband and children were American citizens and she wanted to help those boys."

"Those boys" numbered well over 150, including the 30 who stayed in the Parent home – 29 Americans and one Briton. Jeanne and her underground colleagues not only hid the boys but helped them obtain cleverly forged identification papers and work permits. With these, the fliers appeared in public and lived the same as Belgians. Once they were slipped over the border into France, they got new papers from the underground there while awaiting eventual transportation to Switzerland.

But Jeanne Parent's story really began in 1924. She was then Jeanne Frankinet, dark-haired, petite and very pretty. John Parent, a young, handsome American businessman, and his parents were visiting relatives in Liege. The two met and the vivacious Belgian girl asked John to extend his trip a little longer. He did. He stayed 22 years.

After their marriage, Parent retained his agency for an American firm and established a beauty and barber shop in Liege. Juliet and Jacqueline were born and life was good until the early '40s.

The Nazis had invaded Poland in 1939 and the Parents made a fateful decision to stay in Belgium. They mistakenly thought the Germans would honor a treaty between the two countries. Once the Nazis invaded the Lowlands, it was too late to leave.

Because John was an American, he was arrested after the U.S. invasion of North Africa in late 1942. He and other "enemy aliens" were packed into a crude cattle train. After 14 days, they reached their destination, a stalag in upper Silesia. Treatment was bad. "If it hadn't been for the Red Cross food packages, he wouldn't have lived through it," says his daughter, Jacqueline.

Jacqueline Blunt doesn't talk about the family's war experiences easily. Too many memories of Nazi horror are dredged up along with the story of her courageous mother. Most of Jacqueline's mementos are within the pages of a bulging scrapbook. "I should arrange it better but I don't like to look at the things," she says.

Among the "things" are letters written by her father to her mother while he was in the German prison. Some of the writing is in French, some in English. "He wrote in English when he didn't want us to know what he was writing," Jacqueline says, smiling.

Many of the letters are adorned with brightly colored floral designs or scenes done in charcoal. The art is so intricate that the pages appear like printed stationery at first glance. But the artwork had been laboriously done with crude materials by a fellow prisoner, obviously a talented artist.

In the scrapbook is also an armband with the red, yellow and black stripes of the Belgian flag. It is the armband her mother wore when, after Belgium's liberation, she became a women's guard at the prison where she had been incarcerated. After the liberation, loyal Belgians rounded up those countrymen who had gone over to the German side.

These people were usually mercenaries like Albert Schoonbroodt, the man who had been responsible for Jeanne's arrest. He had also turned in about 100 other underground members at the same time. They, too, had been arrested in the predawn hours on that July day in 1944. It is the time of day people are most likely to be home.

Schoonbroodt had posed as an underground worker. Jacqueline remembers him as a small, dark man with a heavy mustache. He was a wealthy bachelor with a plush apartment. The money provided by the Nazis had enabled him to enjoy such luxuries as a huge record collection. He often played Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra records to impress underground visitors with his Americanism. His visitors included the two Parent girls.

Just a few days before their mother's arrest, Schoonbroodt had asked them how their mother was getting along and what they heard from their father. Schoonbroodt, too, took allied fliers into his home.

But they were the unfortunate ones. Although the details of their fate was Schoonbroodt's secret, it is probable that they met with much the same end as the one whose body was found in the dark Ardennes forest. The flier had been strangled.

The traitor did not go unpunished. A yellowed clipping in Jacqueline's scrapbook tells of the execution of Albert Schoonbroodt by the Belgians after the liberation.

Life for the Belgians during the German occupation had been one of constant terror. Jacqueline tells of the Nazis arresting 20 Belgians at random if one of their officers was found shot. Then they would kill a Belgian each day unless the killer confessed. And she adds, "They usually didn't."

Belgian Jews, like the Jewish people throughout Europe, suffered the most. They were sought out for Nazi slaughter. Boxcars filled with naked Jews rumbled often through Liege on the way to death camps, Jacqueline recalls. "Belgian Jews would not admit to their closest friends who they were," she says.

Also in the scrapbook are copies of the underground publications like the ones Jacqueline and her sister would carry on the handlebars of their bikes and deliver to other members. Jacqueline admits that although the teen-age years of the Parent girls were far from the usual, carefree time many youngsters of today experience, it was an exciting life. But, as she puts it, "We went from being children to being women." She is referring to the awesome fact that only she and her sister knew of their mother's involvement with the underground. Moreover, one blunder could cost their mother's life.

Jacqueline remembers one close call. She was on a streetcar when the Gestapo entered for an impromptu search of everyone aboard. She had underground papers in her purse and was wearing a charm bracelet with the American, Russian and Belgian flags on it. However, when she showed the Gestapo her identification papers (which had to be carried at all times) stating that she was an American citizen because of her father, they did not search her further. Jacqueline attributes this rather curious behavior by the Gestapo to the fact of her youth and a German agreement with the Swiss consulate.

Jeanne Parent and her daughters' risky involvement with the underground had all begun with a telephone call in October, 1943, from a close family friend, Father Libotte. The Catholic priest had received a package which bore a label he couldn't read. Mrs. Parent spoke fluent English. Would she read it for him? She agreed to come to the priest's home in Seraing, a suburb of Liege. Ironically, the priest lived next door to the Gestapo barracks.

The "package" was two American airmen, Staff Sgt. Benjamin H. St. John of Olean, N. Y., and Sgt. Howard Lawson of Goldendale, Wash. The two airmen and others of a Flying Fortress crew had bailed out behind German lines after two engines were knocked out and a third flamed up and ignited the plane.

The two men had found refuge with the Belgian underground and had been staying with Father Libotte since February. Now German intelligence was making things hot. A safer hideout was needed. Would Jeanne take them into her home?

At first Jeanne had been suspicious of the priest's request. It was a time to trust no one. Often German soldiers who had been captured and exchanged for allied prisoners were returned to service, although this was in defiance of the Geneva agreements. By then the Germans had learned to speak English fluently. Equipped with American uniforms and articles stolen from dead Americans, they set out to trap the underground.

They were seated at the table, talking it over. Besides Jeanne, the airmen and Father Libotte, another priest was present. Suddenly the door opened and a Gestapo agent stalked into the room. The Gestapo never knocked. The agent glared at the group and came over to the table.

They had been conversing in English, teaching it to the other priest. Quickly they switched to French. English would have given them away. They tried to look unconcerned but it wasn't easy.

The Gestapo agent gruffly blurted out that the pipes in the barracks had frozen and he wanted hot water to thaw them out. That was all. He got the hot water and left.

By then Jeanne was convinced the Americans were genuine. She consented to keep them in her home. It wasn't an easy decision. The Parent home was in the heart of Liege, just a few doors from Gestapo headquarters.

Later Father Libotte and the airmen went to church. Mrs. Parent and her daughter Julie were also there. After the services St. John and Lawson joined the two women. Together they left the church. Even the transfer from the priest's home could not look suspicious.

The two Americans were the first of many temporary boarders at the Parent home during the following year. They stayed from four days to two weeks and then moved on through other stations of the underground. Too long a stay in any one place could cause German suspicion.

The first two aviators became "Ben and Cotton." Cotton's nickname was because of his blond, wavy hair. The girls took part in teaching the two fliers and all the subsequent guests how not to betray themselves by their American mannerisms. The sharp-eyed Gestapo were trained to spot various "giveaways."

First, the fliers were taught to abandon the American practice of switching the knife and fork from hand to hand. The European takes the fork in his left hand and the knife in his right and each utensil remains there throughout the entire meal. Invariably, the Americans would cut their meat with the knife held in the right hand, lay down the knife, then switch the fork from the left to the right hand.

Also the European scrapes vegetables up on the fork with his knife and Americans had to learn this fine art also. These table manners had to be practiced at all times so the airmen wouldn't forget if they went to a Liege restaurant where the Gestapo were likely to be also.

Another American habit that had to be overcome was "showing leg." The European wears long socks and garters or high boots to prevent any leg exposure. When the girls accompanied the men to the movies or the theater, they had to keep reminding the fliers to keep their trouser legs down.

At public swimming pools, the men swam alongside the Germans. But there was one place the Parent "house guests" would always refuse to enter the first time at the pool. It was the shower. The French word for shower is douche. To the wary fliers, it looked like a place they should keep out of.

Although fearful apprehension was an integral part of everyday life for Jeanne Parent and her teen-age daughters during those tumultuous years of the early and middle '40s, pictures in Jacqueline's scrapbook show there were some pleasant, fun-filled times, too. There are snapshots of the men with the Parent girls, sightseeing in the city of Liege. Also there are many casual shots of the young, smiling men taken in the Parent home.

It is evident from these pictures that the Parents accepted their situation with admirable aplomb. One underground member put it aptly when he said: "We lived in danger constantly. Our safety depended on the appearance of innocence. We knew we must never show fear."

And the guarded secrecy of the underground was nothing short of astonishing. On the day Jeanne Parent was freed from political prison, she learned that her husband had been in the movement even before his imprisonment in the stalag. He had been with a group of 57 and was the sole survivor. The other 56 had been caught and killed by the Germans.

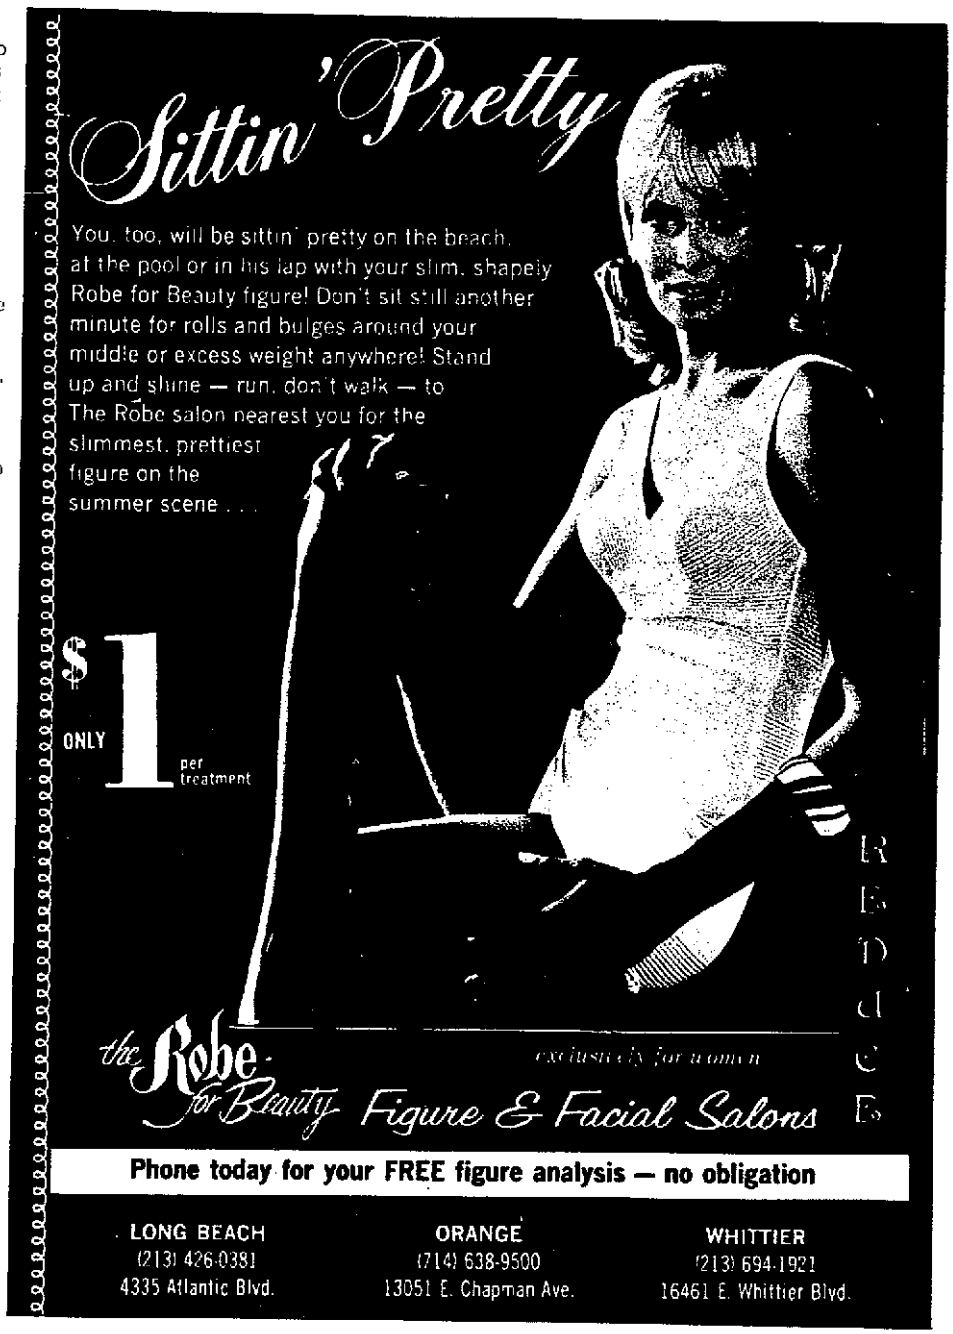

After the liberation, the Parent home became a kind of social club for American soldiers. As John Parent said, "They would stop by for a meal and because my wife could speak English it was a taste of home."

John and Jeanne did visit Staff Sgt. Benjamin H. St. John in Olean, N. Y., shortly after their arrival in Newark in 1946. But for the most part, Jeanne Parent had few contacts with the men whose lives she had saved while putting her own life in peril.

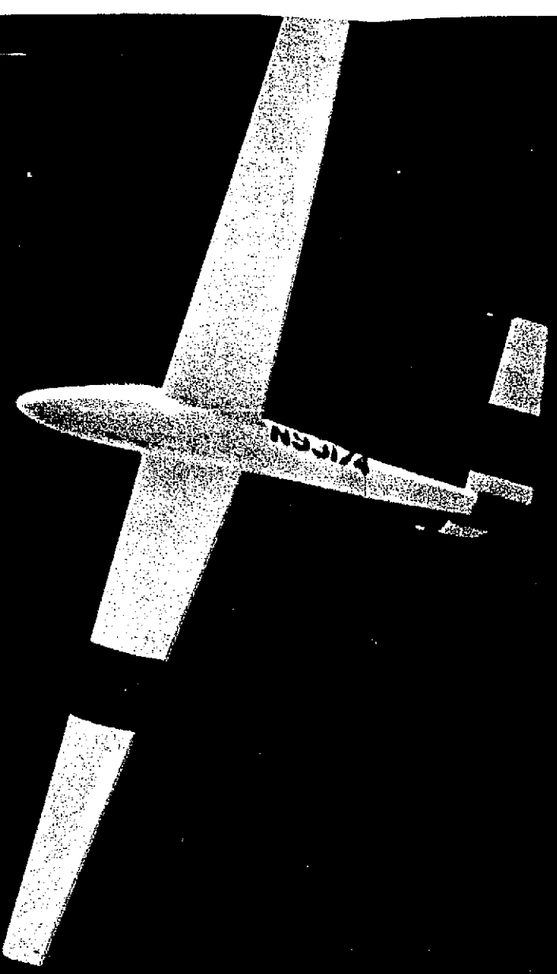

Jeanne died of cancer in 1957 at her home in Newark, where she had lived quietly after her heroic war experiences. She was only 53.

The Parent family sought quiet and peace after the war. They wanted no fanfares. As Jeanne said, "The war is over."

True, the war was over and probably best forgotten. Yet Jeanne Parent's kind of courage and patriotism to a country she knew only in her heart should never be forgotten. It is her kind of quiet heroism that will always glow and light the path to greatness. □

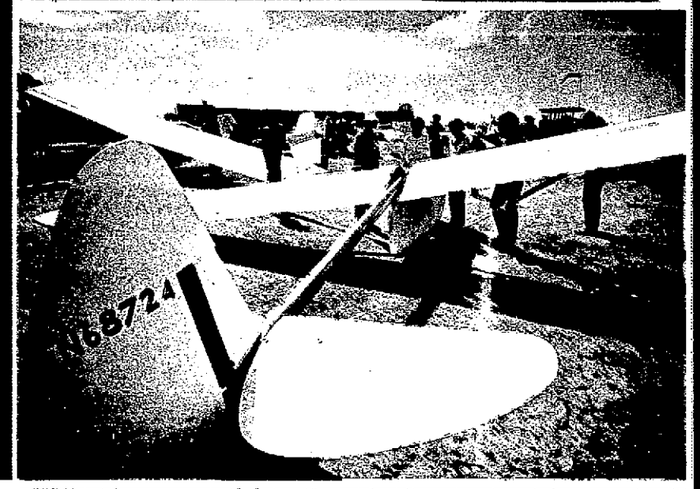

Soaring at Torrey Pines

Soaring at Torrey Pines

46,000 feet—that's 17,000 feet higher than Mt. Everest, the world's highest peak — in the "Bishop wave" where the prevailing westerlies turn upward over the Sierra Nevadas.

The art of soaring is to find winds that are going up and take advantage of them.

The reward is flying in silence except for the wind touching the wings high, high over the world.

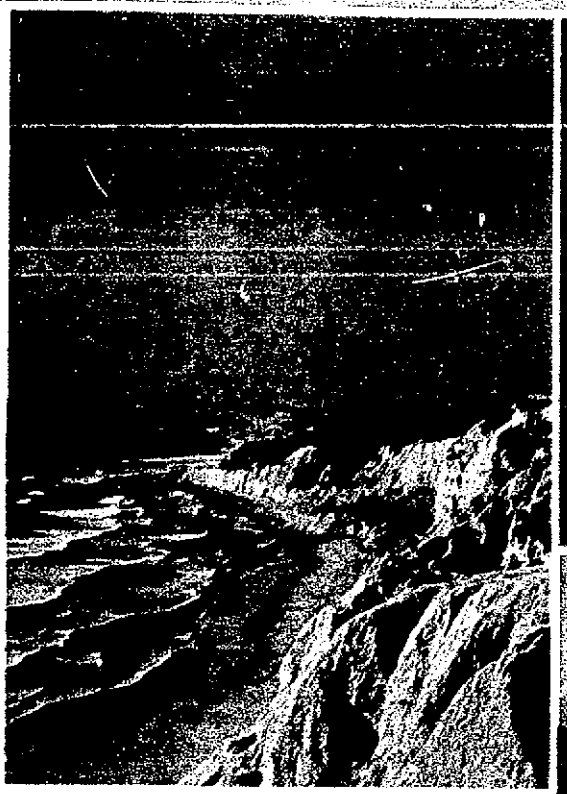

All kinds of people do it — men and women, young and old, jet pilots who like a change of pace, sportsmen who have tried everything else, stodgy businessmen who want their Saturdays different.

Much beloved by "glider-guiders" is Torrey Pines, a mesa above the Pacific near La Jolla. The winds are often just right there. At a recent meet, not the best kind of day, Phil Thorndyke, San Diego, won the trophy with a 65-mile flight.

Another participant was Rickie Lockwood, Garden Grove. At 14 years he has 80 flights to his credit. A generation apart is Norm Walker, 46, Long Beach, chief instructor of the Orange County Soaring Association. Norm began flying airplanes as an eighth-grader in exchange for chores he did around an airport. He took up sailplanes in 1960.

The sport is becoming more popular each year.

The history of gliding and soaring has much of its origin in California. In 1883 a John Montgomery "flew" after a fashion by attaching wings to his back and running off a mesa near San Diego. He later launched gliders from hot-air balloons. At one time an outsized slingshot was used to launch gliders from Mt. Soledad, near La Jolla.

The total possibilities of soaring have yet to be explored. A two-pilot team waited over the Pali in Hawaii just one hour short of three days. Flights to destinations more than 600 miles away have been completed.

Most enthusiasts, however, are not seeking records. They just like to get aloft and enjoy the adventure of riding the invisible winds. ☐

Glad you asked that!

By HY GARDNER

Godfrey Cambridge . . . fond of Negroes.

Dr. Kinsey . . . in one era, out the other.

Milton Berle . . . clown professor.

Q: My girl friend, visiting expo '70 in Tokyo, tells me she sees the Tom Jones and Englebert Humperdinck shows on TV there. How'd they learn to sing in Japanese? — Eleanor S., Dalas.

A: They didn't. The editing trick was a breeze for the Nipponese. Electronically, they have Tom and Engelbert singing in English while the dialogue and comedy segments are dubbed by Japanese actors. By a similar means, the Jones show is televised in virtually every nation in the free world, with the Humperdinck musicals slowly latching on to the same syndication.

Q: Who said, "I like Negroes so much I even had them for parents"? — Theodore B., Des Moines.

A: Black ethnic humorist Godfrey Cambridge.

Q: The Kinsey Report was the sex shocker of the late '40s. How do you think Dr. Kinsey would treat the subject in today's permissive climate? — E. B., Iowa City, Iowa.

A: He'd probably consider illustrating his books! Both "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male" and ditto "Female" were factual, not fictional, documents culled from personal interviews. Before Kinsey, nobody dared to discuss sex so openly. That restraint went in one era and out the other.

Q: Milton Berle to become a clown for Ringling-Barnum-Bailey? When can we see that? — John M. Chester, Pa.

A: Never. Uncle Miltie won't clown around in the circus. But he did participate at the graduation exercises for clowns in the circus's winter quarters in Venice, Fla. After presenting diplomas to the Pagliaccis, he accepted an honorary faculty membership in the College for Clown.

Q: From the scores of readers who ask: "What's happened to Larry Hooper of Lawrence Welk's show?"

A: "Larry Hooper has been ill since the beginning of December," Welk reports. "He was on the sick list but we expected to have him back quickly. Unfortunately, he had a serious setback and open heart surgery was necessary. He is doing only fairly well now despite many other complications. It will be a very long time before we can even hope to have him back on the show."

Q: How come fictional spies like James Bond, Nick Carter, Matt Helm are all bachelors? Authors afraid married men have no fight left in them? — R. L., Cincinnati.

A: The authors agree that these professional killers lead such hazardous lives it would be unfair to make instant widows out of beautiful brides. It's also likely their torrid sexploits (in the guise of "business") might be unacceptable to certain segments of society. In the novel and recent film, "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," 007 did tie the knot but not for long. The honeymoon was over before it started when Mrs. Bond was eliminated by assassins.

Q: Is that the former movie moppet, Baby Peggy, we see doing TV commercials? — S.B.T., Chippewa Falls, Wis.

A: No. Peggy Montgomery was Baby Peggy long before TV came of age. She's now gotten movies out of her system, lives in Spain, and is happily married to a magazine writer.

PLASTIC ART AND THE ARTIST

We live in a mobile society and should study the gypsies' way of life, according to Long Beach furniture designer Stacy Dukes. The nomads travel with all the necessities, some beauty and a minimum of waste space in their small portable shelters.

The CSLB instructor in graphics design is part of the plastics revolution and has strong feelings about application, design and function.

The past is too influential, especially in the demand for the near-exhausted wood supply for homes and furniture, he insists, and adds: "It's a Mom and Dad complex, a continuation of an obsolete way of life."

The plastics revolution won't be total until the '80s in this country. Now mainly institutions demand plastic for its functional, hard-wearing qualities.

Dukes' first — and hugely successful — design was the "Efebo," the child's chair formed from ABS plastic so strong it can be dropped from a helicopter and will merely bounce. The chair will be used throughout the Los Angeles County library system and eventually will be made in three sizes, but its history of progress is fascinating.

Plastics development in the United States is still 20 years behind the times. Technological advances all have been made in Italy. "It was impossible to have the original concept of the Efebo completed in this country, and, along with accolades and museum interest, orders for the chair were coming in by the thousands," says Dukes, "so we took the design to Italy and were amazed at the feverish excitement about plastic use. The Italians have left the iron and steel age far behind in their designs."

Dukes was delighted with the nearly unbreakable plastic which proved to be five times stronger than its nearest competitor. It's so weatherproof it can sit at the seashore for a year with no more than a coat of dust to be removed. Burning will affect the finish but no worse than that of very hard wood; a cigarette will leave a film of charcoal that can be wiped away. And for the aesthetic, it will relate well to the organic designs with its smooth contours and rounded forms.

The innovative Dukes soon will produce the Uccello chair. The folded wings of a seagull were the inspiration for the graceful shape as well as the name. His vibrant designs are the result of the new "no hands" concept. With sophisticated technology available to produce low-cost furniture at the rate of one chair every 50 seconds, the satisfaction is in the original design and the craftsmanship of the tool-maker who translates the design into steel for the mold making. Each piece of furniture goes from the machine to the package with a minimum of handling, which contributes to the lowered cost.

This is protype of "Efebo," a chair made of super-strong plastic.

This is another creation of Dukes. The chair's frame is wood.

The furniture may be the direct answer to furnishing a mobile home because of its stackable qualities. The built-in practicality allows the furniture to move outside when needed and it is light enough for less active persons to handle with ease. At this point in time the mobile home depends on built-ins or family-dwelling leftovers. This same fundamental furniture also can be the solution for young marrieds with whom cost is a necessary consideration . . . and it certainly is child-proof.

To date the apologia for plastic made it useful only in reproductive forms. Wood finish plastic was acceptable, tile designs in plastic were useful but the beauty of plastic for plastic's sake alone will require more education. If plastic is formed to work as wood, it isn't effective and never can compete with the warmth and sensual quality of fine wood . . . but then it never should be compared with anything except other plastic forms. Plastic has its own warmth, but its true value comes in wear, light weight, color and low cost.

Never without plans for the future, Dukes hopes to start a minor revolution in bed systems. At the present time he considers most bedroom furniture far too large for the small rooms in today's homes. Next to the delight of the chief cook and table setter, Dukes hopes to remove plastic flatware from the limp picnic basket variety and produce firm, brightly colored utensils which will provide a full-scale color change for each table setting.

Dukes calls his development "the new art nouveau," which he contends places beauty before form or function. □

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Many servicemen upon their return from Vietnam suffer intestinal distress, including bloating.

The trouble is not an exotic tropical disease, says a doctor at Chelsea (Mass.) Naval Hospital. It's cows' milk.

Deprived of fresh dairy products for many months, many of these men overindulge in milk, the doctor says. And the body can't handle the sudden increased amounts of lactose (milk sugar). Upshot: gastrointestinal distress.

The solution: Stop drinking milk for a time — and later don't drink too much.

Dr. Julian Katz, who reported on the topic at a meeting of the American College of Physicians, says that many servicemen feel that their symptoms are caused by an ulcer and attempt to treat it by drinking additional milk. That just makes things worse, he says.

The report is in Health Bulletin.

Dr. Charles C. Edwards, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, says many women are taking The Pill without proper medical supervision and prior physical examination.

And this has government doctors worried.

The FDA, however, is not worried about women under the care of a physician, Dr. Edwards says in a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A doctor has asked a medical journal for an evaluation of the "Le Gac treatment" for multiple sclerosis.

The treatment was devised by the bacteriologist Dr. Paul Le Gac and reported to the Pasteur Institute in Paris. It is said to have produced "remarkable recovery" in 30 cases.

Dr. J. H. D. Millar gives the following reply in a British medical journal, The Practitioner:

"The Le Gac treatment is based on the supposition that multiple sclerosis is due to infection with Rickettsiae (a class of microorganism). These organisms have never been identified in multiple sclerosis nor have other workers found any evidence of increased antibodies to Rickettsiae. To the best of my knowledge, a properly conducted controlled trial of the treatment has not been carried out."

Russia's Caspian Sea, which produces 95 per cent of the world's black caviar, has been hard hit by low water levels, pollution and increased salinity, and the sturgeon that produces this caviar appears to be fighting a losing battle against these environmental changes. The report is in Eco Bulletin: Environmental Action Line.

For several years, worried parents have been sending questions about their children to Today's Health magazine, a publication of the American Medical Association.

The questions have been answered with the help of the American Academy of Pediatrics in a regular monthly column called "Growing Pains." Now a large selection of this material has been published in book form. You can obtain a copy for $1.

Write: Order Department, American Medical Association, 535 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60610. Ask for: "Growing Pains." (Please do not write to Southland Sunday; we cannot forward orders.) □

599-1336 — Long Beach

GOURMET

He's a familiar figure standing behind the glass-topped counter at Jones Cafeteria, 120 E. Fifth St. in downtown Long Beach.

He has a round friendly face, gray hair and wears a white shirt. He's at his station — carving delectable roast beef, ham and lamb — every Sunday from noon to 7 p.m. and daily from 4 to 7 p.m.

Scores of people who pass the counter every day know that he's the proprietor, Harold A. Jones Sr. They also know he's been at that location over 40 years. Many of his patrons have known him during that entire time. Others, including some who were his high school classmates, have known him even longer. They always greet him affectionately.

Lots of the cafeteria's patrons are newcomers to Long Beach. During their first few visits, they assume that the cheerful meat carver is one of the employes. When they hear his co-workers refer to him as "Mr. Jones," some react with surprise.

"You mean you're the boss of this big place?" they ask. "Why do you work so hard? Couldn't you hire someone to do all that slicing for you?"

"I do it because I enjoy it," he replies with a modest smile. "It gives me a chance to meet our new customers as well as all our old friends. I used to have employes who did this work for me. When they retired, I took over. Now I'm glad I did."

Harold is also owner of another large restaurant, the adjacent Jones Dining Room. His wife Ivalou and their son Hal are familiar figures there, greeting old friends the way Harold does at the cafeteria.

On Sunday the immaculate cafeteria offers juicy, tender round of roast beef, leg of lamb, roast turkey, chicken and dumplings and Swiss steak, all $2.25 on bountiful dinners including large salad or soup, two vegetables, hot muffin or roll, beverage, cake, cream pie or pudding. Also offered are chicken croquettes or roast beef hash, $1.65 on the dinner.

A la carte orders of carved beef, lamb, ham and turkey are $1.50. Half portions (still quite generous) are 75 cents. Salads and vegetables are 30 cents. Also featured daily and Sunday are hot beef, ham or turkey sandwiches, $1.25, with salad or a hot vegetable.

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

AS THEY leave the Ranch House Restaurant, 1600 E. Pacific Coast Hwy., Seal Beach, people invariably wear satisfied expressions.

A man who has dined on thick steak or tender roast prime rib au jus looks ready to meet any of the world's challenges. A vivacious woman who has enjoyed stuffed abalone or luscious veal Oscar wears an expression which indicates that she can't wait to tell her friends about the pleasures she'd just discovered.

Recently the Ranch House's patrons have seemed even happier than usual, thanks to an innovation on the dinner menu. Each night, owner and host Mike Comminos offers a specialty which is considerably lower in price than during the rest of the week.

On Sunday the innovation is glazed Cornish game hen stuffed with rice, $3.25. The Monday treat is savory roast prime rib au jus, $2.95 (which is $2 less than its normal tab). On Tuesday, it's eastern top sirloin steak, $2.95 (normally $4.95). The Wednesday special is Australian lobster tail, $3.95, a $2 saving. On Thursday the feature is London Broil, $3.25, a rolled steak marinated in wine and served with mushroom sauce. Friday's innovation is sea food Newburg, $3.25. On Saturday it's render tournedoes of beef in a rich sauce, $3.95.

All are served with beautiful salad or Manhattan clam chowder, piping hot cheesebread, brown rice or baked potato and beverage. The service is by experienced waitresses who enjoy their work because they deal with so many well-pleased customers.

The Ranch House, decorated with interesting antiques, was opened last summer by Mike, a well-known Long Beach restaurateur. It is a spacious, quiet establishment, luxuriously furnished, with a lounge and extensive banquet facilities. The main entrance opens into a large carpeted lobby.

The staff includes manager Mike Dimas and his hostess wife, Katherine. Each Sunday, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., they offer a special $1.25 breakfast, including ham, sausage or bacon with eggs, toast and ranch-style potatoes. Also served are imaginative omelettes.

Sunday dinner is served from 2 p.m. Luncheons, emphasizing beef and sea food dishes, salads and sandwiches, are offered weekdays. □ transcend those individual abuses. The police was an outsider, alien and dangerous to everything the students in Isla Vista embraced as their "way of life." Laws, after all, are designed to preserve the value and customs of society, only in Isla Vista it doesn't work this way. "Private property doesn't mean anything to me," said one of the students, and even more students indicated that, although they may not approve of all that their friends were doing—like popping pills or stealing to support the habit—they would not make it easy for the police to come in. For one thing, they do not trust them. They do not trust society. Too many feel they are victims of society's inability to solve its problems.

"You've got to be crazy if you think that by busting a kid who has five buck's worth of stuff you are going to solve the drug problem," said Pico, a philosophy student from Long Beach. "It's the big boys, the ones with the money who finance the operation, they should go after. A detective once told me they know the Mafia is in Santa Barbara, only they can't do anything about it because they are in legitimate business. So it is easier for them to come here and bust the kids. Besides, do you realize that most of the pills we have here are legal? Sure, they are manufactured right here in the states, then shipped over to Mexico so they could be smuggled back. Why don't they do anything about that? Isn't that ridiculous?"

He was wearing only a bathing suit, on his way to the beach. It was getting late, only the sunset was different now. I was not sure the students really wanted Friday night to come to Isla Vista. "You know, it's really funny," said Todd Warner, a red-haired, angelic-faced student I had driven into I.V. from the campus earlier. "I came here in September, 1968, and the first activity I attended was an inter-fraternity dance. The name of the band was The Sixpack. Can you imagine that now? I guess most of the incoming freshmen today have already tried LSD, and the political activists would probably be giving the dance. It all happened so suddenly here, but I guess it was leading to it all the time. Like the wood was dry, the gasoline poured, and all that was needed was the spark."

Which is much the way Isla Vista still is. I walked south on Embarcadero del Norte, past the Bank of America, dwarfed behind a tall fence and a ring of powerful flood lights. Past the tiny park where two stoned street people smiled blankly, one offering to pose for a picture with his fist raised. Past the last street where the ground suddenly drops thirty feet down to a strip of white sand, where the surf came in smooth and steady.

Some two dozen surfers were perched on top of their boards like so many seagulls on the water, craning their necks back to read the water, waiting for the magic second when the smooth ripple swells to a wave, then a surf to be ridden till it breaks in a cloud of foam, bucking its rider head first into the shallow water. A pack of dogs played on the beach, breaking now and then to check with their owners, then resuming the chase. Along the top of the cliff, as far as I could see, students sat and looked over the water, mostly alone, shivering slightly in the rapidly cooling air.

It was getting dark fast. Surfers clad in wetsuits and bikinis carried their boards up the steps from the beach. Deep thuds of rock music flooded the streets from open doors. Young people were all over, sitting on balconies and fences, carrying home the grocery bags, driving carefully under the watchful eye of ever-present patrol cars.

But it was a very quiet town that Friday night. I couldn't help thinking of a note one of the students showed me earlier. He had found it in his mail box where his girl put it a few hours before he was to take her out on a date.

It said: "I just don't feel as though I can go out and drink and dance tonight. A lot has been happening lately to me and within me. Also, one of my dear friends is in trouble. I must be alone and think for a while—then I have to act. We will talk soon." □

This sparkling design suddenly takes on a more formal flavor in this Sea-foam White color finish. This off-white presentation allows the wood grain to come through. Hand painted gold striping adds richness to the overall effect.

You'll love the grace and charm of San Miguel Bedroom with a dash of bravado. Plume carvings and geometric door panels reflect Old World elegance. The brass hardware has a weathered patine finish for contrast. Dresser has 9 drawers (3 tray drawers behind door). Top center tray drawer is red felt lined for jewelry.

Q. Recently I've heard John N. Mitchell, our Attorney General, referred to as "the flash from Apawamis" and "the unofficial President of the U.S." Can you tell me what is meant by those references? — E.F., Chicago, Ill.

A. Apawamis is the name of a country club in Rye, N.Y., where the Attorney General used to play golf. This was back in the pre-1968 days when he was a senior partner along with Richard Nixon in the Wall Street law firm of Nixon, Mudge, Rose, Guthrie, Alexander and Mitchell.

Since Nixon's election, John Mitchell has become the President's closest confidant on domestic, political, and foreign affairs even though Mr. Mitchell's expertise in some of these fields is open to question. It is the type of special relationship which existed between President John F. Kennedy and his brother Bobby, between President Lyndon Johnson and Justice Abe Fortas. Although Richard Nixon is by nature "a loner," he, like every other President, needs at least one friend and adviser to help him in the hours of doubt and darkness. That man is John N. Mitchell, "the flash from Apawamis."

Q. Who is the world's richest girl, Doris Duke or Barbara Hutton? Is Doris going to marry Gen. John Coulter, the widower of Constance Bennett? That's what I read.—Ellen Owens, Greenwich, Conn.

A. Doris Duke, whose fortune derives from the American Tobacco Company, and Barbara Hutton, whose fortune derives from the F. W. Woolworth chain, are both multi-millionairesses. But neither is as wealthy as Queen Juliana of the Netherlands, reputedly the world's wealthiest woman. Doris Duke has been seen around New York City with General Coulter, but it is a silly practice to predict the eventual chemistry between male and female.

Q. Who named it the White House and when?-Bill Moldoff, Nassau, N.Y.

A. Teddy Roosevelt first used the name White House officially in 1902. But as early as 1809 the Presidential mansion was popularly referred to as the White House because of its whitish limestone walls, so different from the red brick of other Washington buildings. The characteristic whiteness of the building was reinforced when after the British attack on Washington in August, 1814, the mansion's blackened walls received a coat of white paint.

Q. Who is the other woman responsible for the breakup of the Jane Fonda-Roger Vadim marriage?—Lee Truscott, Bristol, Tenn.

A. No other woman. According to Vadim, who announced the separation in Paris, "I prefer to be married to a soft and vulnerable woman rather than to an American Joan of Arc."

ROGER VADIM AND JANE FONDA

Q. Ellsworth Bunker, our Ambassador in Vietnam, is an old man at 76. Why doesn't he call it quits?—Ed Howe, Orlando, Fla.

A. Bunker wants to retire, but he is a most valuable man to us in Vietnam. Moreover, he is married to Carol Laise, our Ambassador to Nepal who is only 52 and now at the height of her State Department career. Mr. Bunker looks forward to his retirement at the Bunker farm in Putney, Vt., but Mrs. Bunker at this point is probably not ready to call it quits. Most likely Ambassador Bunker will retire before the year is out.

Q. I know that Bop Hope is a high school dropout, but doesn't he have more honorary degrees than any other man in America?—Rocky Crane, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A. A Federal prosecutor has recommended that millionaire Long be indicted on bribery charges for influencing a Government contract to build underground parking facilities for the House of Representatives in Washington, D.C. But the decision not to move against the powerful and influential Senator has been made by the Justice Department.

Q. Whatever happened to Richard Whitney of the N.Y. Stock Exchange who was convicted of grand larceny in a sensational financial scandal in 1938?—N. Marks, Hartford, Conn.

A. Whitney was sentenced to Sing Sing, paroled after three years in 1941, went into seclusion, is still alive at age 82. His brother, George, of the House of Morgan, borrowed $1,002,000 at 4 percent annually from Thomas Lamont of the same banking firm, eventually paid back every penny his younger brother had borrowed or stolen.

Q. How old is Lauren Bacall? Why do people call her Betty? Was she Humphrey Bogart's fourth or fifth wife? — Lissa Lewis, Brooklyn, N.Y.

A. Lauren Bacall, 45 —real name Betty Joan Perske —was Humphrey Bogart's fourth wife. His previous wives were Helen Menken, Mary Phillips, and Mayo Methot.

Q. Do our astronauts have aboard a self-destruct capability in order to avoid prolonged human suffering in the event of their being lost in space?-Donald Stetson, Washington, D.C.

A. No. U.S. astronauts do not carry "suicide pills" or any other self-destruct system. According to NASA, "they do not go on a mission with the feeling that something is going to happen to them." Thus, if efforts to bring back the crippled Apollo 13 spaceship had failed, Astronauts Swigert, Lovell and Haise would have faced the prospect of slow death in space.

A breakthrough for Maddox: Georgia's Governor rides the hood of a car through a cardboard barrier as he opens a new highway near Atlanta. Stunts like this help keep the controversial politician in the news.

Will Governor Maddox Fall Off His Political Bicycle?

by Jack Anderson

ATLANTA, GA.

Not long ago, Georgia's Gov. Lester Maddox summoned the press to watch him open the final stretch of the 60-mile interstate highway that encircles Atlanta. The ceremony, however, was uninspiring, and the reporters showed little interest in publicizing the proceedings. For Maddox, who has repeatedly shoved even George Wallace out of the spotlight of Southern politics, the situation was intolerable. "You could see the gleam in his eye," recalls a friend who attended the opening. "He just had to figure out a way to liven things up."

When it came time for the Governor's limousine to break through the paper barrier stretched across the highway, Maddox hopped onto the front of the car. He straddled the hood, braced his feet on the bumper, thrust his head forward and gave the signal to drive on. As the car reached the finish line, the military honor guard fired an artillery salute, which gave Maddox's driver a start. His foot jerked down on the accelerator and sent the car hurtling through the barrier, which turned out to be made not of paper but of sturdy cardboard.

The collision dazed the Governor who teetered precariously on his forward perch, looking as if he might pitch onto the pavement. Fortunately, he escaped with nothing more than a skinned forehead, which he undoubtedly felt was an acceptable sacrifice. For pictures of his balding head crashing through the ceremonial barrier were carried in newspapers around the world.

Political Barnum

In his three years as the most unorthodox and controversial Governor in Georgia's memory, Lester Garfield Maddox has established himself as the P. T. Barnum of American politics, alternately outraging and entertaining the public with his wacky ways. He has encouraged defiance of Federal law, often in a speech that preached law and order. His ax handles, which he passes out as souvenirs, have become symbols of resistance to racial equality.

Now, with his lease on the state Capitol running out and the law preventing him from succeeding himself, Maddox has announced he will run for Lieutenant Governor. His opponent, incumbent George T. Smith, a veteran politican, says he is confident he can beat Maddox. But he doesn't act too confident, and he is obviously at a loss for a way to campaign against the flamboyant little man who rose to national notoriety in 1964 by driving Negro ministers away from his Atlanta fried chicken parlor--the Pickrick—with a snub-nosed revolver and an ax handle.

"If I did some of the things he has done," says Smith, "I'd be drummed out of the state. But when he does them, everyone just says, 'Well, that's old Lester.' He's the only Governor who will go down in history as having been good because he was not as bad as people thought he would be."

It is no exaggeration to say that Maddox has gotten away with antics that no other politician could have pulled off. For example, he made no effort to play up to the prominent and powerful state legislators whose help he badly needed to get his programs enacted. At first, he didn't even bother to learn many of their names, addressing them as either "Cap'n" or "Ole Buddy" when he found it necessary to talk to them at all.

Important visitors to the splendid new Governor's mansion on Atlanta's swank North Side are likely to find Maddox not in his office, but in the front yard romping with his basset hound. One women's group was horrified to find that the Governor had erected a makeshift boardwalk so that his pet goose, "Mac," could walk up to the elegant fountain in front of the mansion for his daily bath.

Off to parade

Another time, when key legislators had worked out a crucial agreement on a major tax bill late in the session, they rushed to the Governor's office only to find that he was nowhere around. He had gone to Macon to ride his bicycle in a children's parade. He pedaled it backward part of the way, as is his custom at such events as parades and the half-time ceremonies at football games. "If a man is going backward and he knows where he is going," says Maddox in his high-pitched nasal twang, "he'll get there quicker than a man going forward that doesn't know where he's going."

The Governor attributes his bizarre career to a higher power. "I don't think I had a whole lot to do with it. I think it was divine purpose. God has used me in the way I wanted Him to use me. I've got a commitment and a promise and a covenant with my Maker to spend my life serving Him."

Maddox is a devout Baptist Fundamentalist, and he holds a devotional ceremony in his reception room every morning. He gets his religious inclinations from his mother, Flonnie, who at 76 is still active in church affairs. A teetotaler, Maddox has banished liquor from the Governor's mansion and says he has never tasted the stuff. He doesn't swear or smoke, either.

Carrot-juice fancier

Instead, he drinks four ounces of fresh carrot juice every day. He also does deep breathing exercises, runs up the Capitol stairs two at a time, and is given to taking off on foot to destinations that may be miles away.

One of his sworn enemies is Ralph Dawson, the sawed-off, cigar-chomping boss of notorious Long County. The county's most celebrated town is Ludowici, which for years has been famous for its speed traps, quick-change red lights and clip joints. Last November, Maddox became so agitated with Dawson during a meeting in the Governor's office that he shouted: "Everything here is clean except you. You're unclean and corrupt!" He then grabbed Dawson by the coat and threw him out of the office. The astonished Dawson sputtered: "I consider that the action of a madman."

In the latest round, Maddox posted billboards guarded by state troopers at each end of Ludowici, which lies along a well traveled highway to Florida. "BEWARE!" the signs read, "YOU ARE IN LONG COUNTY AND APPROACHING LUDOWICI, GEORGIA. DON'T GET FLEECED IN A CLIP JOINT. DON'T GET CAUGHT IN A SPEED TRAP. LESTER MADDOX, GOVERNOR."

Saddened by son

His stern righteousness was put to the ultimate test when his own 26-year-old son, Lester Jr., recently was arrested for burglary, his second arrest in four years. The first led to a $1000 fine and a probation term that was still in effect when the second arrest came. A saddened Maddox called reporters to his office. His voice breaking and his eyes brimming with tears, he said: "I have just learned that my son has been arrested. I just don't know what I can do. I have tried to be a good father and to help him."

It was Lester Jr. who on July 3, 1964, stood at his father's side, ax handle in hand, as they defied the just-enacted Civil Rights Act by barring three Negro clergymen from a public restaurant, an incident that made national headlines. Subsequently, Maddox has never missed an opportunity to denounce the Federal Government and has frequently counseled defiance of Federal court orders.

A visit to the Governor's office today seems at first to bear out the hand-wringing fears that many progressive Georgians had when Maddox was inaugurated. The Governor's reception room is a distribution center for ultra-right-wing literature. He approves of the John Birch Society and while he does not endorse the Ku Klux Klan, he has been friendly with some of its leaders. His favorite Washington politician is South Carolina's white-maned L. Mendel Rivers, the House Armed Services chairman, whose bombs-away militarism has sent shudders even through some generals.

Man of the people

Maddox has striven to bring the Governor's office closer to the people, and his sharpest critics concede that he has done so. He is easily the most accessible Governor in the state's history, always available to the press despite his feuds with the newspapers, holding as many as five impromptu news conferences a day in the hallway outside his office.

Twice a week for two hours, Maddox conducts what he calls "Little People's Day," when anyone can walk in off the street and tell his troubles. The Governor listens intently to everyone's problems, and, when he can, will turn them over to his staff for action. Many citizens come just to have their pictures taken with Maddox, and he is always glad to oblige, hamming it up with the parents, and kissing the little girls on the cheek, greeting them as "honey chile."

His red-carpeted office is a repository of memorabilia and the tables and cabinets are covered with such souvenirs as sculpted hands in prayer, assorted Bibles, a variety of plaques and pictures. The Governor also distributes long wooden ax handles from a back room behind his office. He calls them "Pickrick drumsticks."

Maddox likes to show cycling prowess, as at this physical fitness meet. He quips it's all right for a man to go backward if "he knows where he's going."

Confrontation on the Hill

Maddox brought a shipment to Washington recently and tried to hand them out in the House dining room, a stunt that got him into a heated argument with Charles Diggs, a black Congressman from Michigan. Maddox loudly denied that he was a racist and called Diggs an "ass" and a "baboon" for suggesting so.

But if Maddox has made atrocious racist statements, he also appointed the first Negro in the state's history to a constitutionally created state board, the Board of Corrections.

The Governor's inept handling of the legislature has encouraged it to assume an unprecedented importance in state affairs, even setting up its own budget office, previously an exclusive function of the executive mansion.

Yet despite his alienation of the legislature, his dogged refusal to do things the accepted way and his shrill right-wing statements, Maddox has compiled a generally moderate record. He has energetically pressed for reforms in the state's prison system, and teachers have received more money in raises under Maddox than during the terms of the two previous Governors combined.

Elected without the help of a political machine, Maddox had no debts to pay off when he took office. Result: there was virtually no employee turnover. Further, his appointments to the state's higher courts have been uniformly excellent. In some cases, he selected men who had actively opposed him politically. However, some of his other appointments have drawn criticism.

The business boom that began prior to Maddox's election has continued at a feverish pace. With characteristic promoter's style, Maddox claims credit and annually erects a huge sign at the Capitol displaying a graph showing the increase in industrial growth since he has been in office. Maddox's showmanship has also brought the expenditure of $60,000 for lighting equipment to illuminate the Capitol at night, and he is now planning to spend thousands more to install a carillon.

There is no doubt that Maddox feels much more comfortable with the "little people" than with government officials or politicians. "I'm just an average fella," he said, "and there are more average people than any other kind, so I'm right at home."

Lester Maddox was born in 1915, the son of an Atlanta steelworker who had six other children. During the Depression, his father lost his job, and Lester quit school to help support the family.

Lester's Grill

After restlessly moving in and out of various jobs, Maddox went into the restaurant business with a 10-by-14-foot establishment built partly from an old chicken house. He called it Lester's Grill and it was a combination general store, short-order grill and ice cream parlor. He subsequently sold it for ten times what it had cost him and stashed away some of the capital he would use a year later in 1947 to build a new restaurant, which he called the Pickrick. By now, Maddox had four children, and his quiet, retiring wife, Virginia, had to spend much of her time helping him run the restaurant. The first year, the place earned less than $2000, but thereafter the Pickrick caught on.

At least part of the Pickrick's success is attributable to the chatty advertisements Maddox placed in the Saturday Atlanta Journal under the heading "Pickrick Says," the ads combined promotion for the restaurant, local gossip and homey political commentary. In 1953, Maddox expanded the Pickrick by building a brick building around the shell of the original structure. By the late 1950's the Pickrick had become a large and well established business.

But the chatty weekly ads in The Atlanta Journal had begun to take a more strident tone. They contained more politics and less chatter. At times, they gave vent to the most vulgar brand of racism. "I hope you'll get your integration wishes," he said one week in reply to a letter, "a stomach full of race mixing and a lap full of little mulatto grandchildren, so you can run your fingers through their hair."

From Pickrick to politics

In 1957, Maddox made his first foray into politics by entering the primary for Mayor of Atlanta. He was soundly defeated. He made the race for Mayor again in 1961. Again he was walloped. A year later he ran for Lieutenant Governor and finished second in a nine-man primary.

In 1966, "famous" by then over the restaurant incident (he closed the place rather than integrate it), Maddox ran for Governor. The rest is history.

Love him or hate him, this is Lester Maddox fulfilling "a covenant with my Maker."

The incident that made Maddox "famous." Gun in hand, he drove off Negro ministers from his restaurant just one day after passage of the Civil Rights Act.

Why Were Bankers Warned

That This "New Book Could Upset the Savings Applecart"

How to Make Up to 13½% on Your Savings or More—All Fully Insured

There are many things banks don't like to talk about. They don't like to talk about the fact that they do, indeed, pay interest rates of 8%, 10%, 13½%, and often more, to a select group of knowledgeable depositors!

What's the difference between these men and women and you? Simply this—that they know certain "inside" techniques of depositing and withdrawing their savings (all perfectly legal, incidentally) that you don't! And—therefore they earn two to three times as much interest on those savings as you do!

Like this...

Would It Be Worth An Extra Ten Minutes A Month To You—To Bring Home Two Or Three Times As Many Dollars From Your Savings As You're Getting Today?

The procedure is simple. But to put it to work for you, tomorrow, you have to know these few "smart-money" facts:

1. Most thrifty people in this country today are actually losing money on their savings. The interest they get from a regular bank account is actually far less than the lost purchasing power that inflation cuts right out of their savings.

This is one of the great social tragedies of our time. It means that if you are thrifty and prudent in this country today, you are penalized. Either you are driven to speculate in the stock market, where you can be wiped out overnight. Or you try to secure safety for your hard-earned capital in a bank—and watch inflation turn your dreams of early retirement and financial independence into dust!

2. But you just don't have to accept these two tragic choices any longer! Now there is a Third Way to invest your money, that gives you the absolute safety you want, plus huge guaranteed returns that you may not even have dreamed possible before.

3. It is based on one simple fact: That most depositors are completely passive about where and how they save their money! They never take the one or two hours that are necessary to learn the "inside workings" of the banking system. Therefore, they never even hear about the "super-savings-accounts" that can yield them far more than ordinary interest on their money.

And, above all, they have never heard about the simple, ingenious techniques of "Loophole Depositing"! Active, precisely-timed deposits and withdrawals that take an average of ten minutes of your time per month—and bring you back 8%...13½%...even 19% on every dollar, with exactly the same total safety that you get on ordinary bank accounts today!

Let Us Make This Perfectly Clear: You Do Only What The Banks And Savings And Loan Associations Themselves OPENLY PERMIT, Except Now—YOU DO IT A LITTLE SMARTER!

At this moment, in this entire country, out of the over one hundred million people who have savings accounts, only about forty thousand of them use these techniques. They are still brand-new—virtually-unknown. Only now has a book been published that reveals them to every man and woman who is willing to risk a 6¢ stamp to learn them!

The time required to read this book from cover to cover is approximately one weekend. Or, if you wish to skip the banking background at its beginning, it will take you about an hour or two to learn these "Active Depositing" techniques themselves. And once you learn them, from that moment on, you will be able to exploit every legal loophole in the entire banking system, including:

How to get more than 8% interest per year as an absolute minimum, with hardly any more work than filling out your deposit slip in a different way. And then go from there all the way up to as much as 19% to 25% in special situations, for limited periods!

How to protect yourself against the possibility of interest rates dropping in the future. So you're guaranteed the high interest rates available to you today, even if tomorrow your friends find their return on their savings cut in half!

How to make banks pay interest to you on money you don't really even have on deposit—on non-existent money—on money you have already spent! (And the bank loves you for it. Because, no matter how much you make, they make more! Page 143 shows you how.)

How your checking account can be used by you to earn higher interest than your present savings account.

Yes, how you can even earn high interest on your credit card! So that you are now earning interest on other people's money—and spending it at exactly the same time!

Special Warning Section: Two common mistakes, that unknowingly trap thousands of depositors every year, that could completely destroy your savings!

And how to defer income tax on the interest you get. Two plans that offer marvelous tax-sheltered advantages.

And—let us repeat once again—all completely protected by United States Government Insuring Agencies! With no service charges—no minimum balances—no legal technicalities! Ready to go to work right now for the investor with $500—or $500,000!

Prove Every Penny Of It Yourself—Entirely At Our Risk!

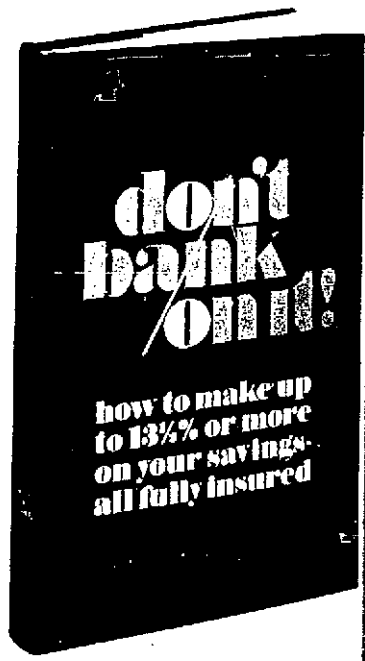

This, then, is our promise to you: One single afternoon with this interest-tripling Guide, and you will sleep easy again! You will know that your lifetime savings—your financial security—the base upon which your family rests its hope for the future is earning the kind of money it SHOULD be earning for you! That you have beaten inflation! That the purchasing power of your savings is rising again, year after year after year—instead of being torn to shreds by the soaring cost of living every month!

The top money men in this country—the very banks themselves—use these techniques! Why shouldn't you? All you risk to learn them all is a 6¢ stamp with the Coupon below! Why not send it in—and start your savings earning double and triple interest—8% to 13½% or more—TODAY!

Read What The Banking Industry Itself Says About This Startling Volume!

NEW BOOK COULD UPSET THE SAVINGS APPLECART

TIGHT MONEY, Regulation Q, and the much-touted Age of the Consumer, are key ingredients in a flammable mixture about to be ignited by a book which could explode in the face of the commercial banking industry this year.

This says:

"In return for the use of his savings, the depositor not only has earned no real income from the banking industry, but he has actually suffered a real loss. Believe it or not, any sum of money deposited in any bank or savings and loan association at any time during the past 10 to 20 years, after deduction of average income taxes on interest earned, would have bought more loaves of bread, more heads of lettuce, more rides on the subway, or more copies of the Sunday Times with the original deposit than it will today with all of the compound interest added...

"The millions of people who have saved a few dollars in the form of savings accounts and insurance have been prevented from gaining any profit from their investment—indeed they have been forced to accept real losses—by what amounts to government agency fiat. These depositors have contributed more, perhaps, to the growth of our economy than any other group, and it is unjust that controls apply only to interest rates to depositors, while there are no controls over the inflationary wage and price increases. Conditions permitting this 20 years of discrimination should be changed."

I am quoting from a book, titled, "Don't Bank On It! How To Make Up to 13½ percent and More on Your Savings—All Fully Insured."

The book is dedicated "to the members of the median income group, those truly forgotten men whose savings deposits make banking, as we know it, possible."

"Don't Bank On It" may be coming out at an auspicious time, as the general public is becoming more aware of high interest rates, and, thanks to truth in lending, is being conditioned to look at rates of 12 or 18 percent as low. No doubt he'll soon recognize that 4 or 5 percent is peanuts.

Customers complain: This is Virginia Knauer, President Nixon's Special Assistant for Consumer Affairs, going through her morning mail. More and more letters deal with errors in billing made by computers.

The Revolt Against Computerized Billing

by James D. Snyder & Robert F. Hickox

A Chicago public relations man swears it actually happened. A major credit card company sent him a computerized bill stating: MONTHLY CHARGES. . . .$0.00.

Naturally, he tossed it in the wastebasket. A month later another bill arrived, stating: BALANCE FROM PREVIOUS MONTH. . . .$0.00. PLEASE PAY IMMEDIATELY TO AVOID PENALTY CHARGES. Again, he discarded the notice as some weird mistake.

The third month rolled around and—you guessed it. ACCOUNT IN ARREARS. YOUR CREDIT CARD REVOKED. RETURN FULL PAYMENT AND CREDIT CARD IMMEDIATELY OR WE WILL BE FORCED TO INITIATE LEGAL ACTION.

The man was so angry he ripped up all of his credit cards on the spot. But his problems probably aren't finished. If he has a phone, home mortgage, insurance policy, department store account, or similar necessities of "modern living," chances are he'll be subject to the impersonal, erratic whims of busy computers cranking out billions of billing statements.

Supposedly, creditors turned to computerized billing to speed efficiency and rescue clerks from tedium. But perhaps top management has handed too much responsibility to computer technicians. Says Robert Townsend in his best seller, Up the Organization: "They're building a mystique, a priesthood, their own mumbo-jumbo ritual to keep you from knowing what they—and you—are doing."

Nothing more eloquently illustrates Townsend's point than a statement received by Cleveland residents from a large department store. "If your bill is in error," it said tersely, "blame the computer."

Blame the computer? This company's management has apparently forgotten that computers are just big, dumb adding machines programmed by people. And in such companies, it invariably follows that neither people nor computers are prepared to cope with the slightest deviation from a programmed routine transaction. A Montgomery County, Md., career woman learned this when she tried to cancel her American Express credit card account. Her monthly statement had listed regular charges plus $15 as an annual membership renewal fee. Since she already had enough free bank and oil company credit cards, she deducted the $15, sent a check for the remainder, and enclosed a letter requesting that her account be dropped.

Bill upon bill

But the computer knew only that $15 had gone unpaid. Bill upon bill followed, until compounded penalty charges brought it to more than $25. The woman had to spend time and money on letters, and long-distance phone calls until the charges were finally dropped.

More often, however, computers go awry for the following reasons:

- Mail lag. The average credit statement allows you a month to pay before you get socked with penalty charges. This usually means a month from the computer's processing time—not when the bill is mailed or received by the customer. With the worsening crisis in mail delivery, many computers are churning out new bills with late charges before the customer has a chance to pay his old one.

William Hendrickson, for example, lives in Yellowstone National Park. Last Dec. 23 the postman delivered a bill from a store listing $474 in previous purchases and stating that he had 25 days to pay before penalty fees began. The outer envelope, sent by bulk mail, bore no postmark. The computer statement inside was dated Dec. 12, meaning a return check was expected by Jan. 6.

Mr. Hendrickson had one complication. The purchases were described in abbreviated computer symbols. One $10 charge made no sense at all. So he sent a check for $464, enclosing a letter asking for an explanation of the remaining $10 charge.

The check was canceled Jan. 5—a day before the deadline. But no one told the computer. The next month's bill included "finance charges" of $7.10—not on the questioned $10, but on the entire $474.

- Changes of address. If you're moving and send a change of address postcard to your friendly credit card company, it should be expected to notify its computer. Right? Don't bet on it. Army Lt. Col. W. C. Bouzard found otherwise after writing the company (twice, just to make sure) that he was being transferred to the Canal Zone.

Have you ever tried to argue with a computer?

That was last May. "On Aug. 15," he says, "I received a bill which had apparently been sent to my old address in the States and forwarded by steamship to Panama. I paid the bill the same day, then began to receive a strange series of communications. The first was a receipt for my payment. Then came a computer letter canceling my account for 'delinquency.' Next came a bill for a new credit card—and all still bearing my old address!"

- Name mix-ups. If your name is John Smith, you're gambling with your sanity when you apply for credit. Even "James Davenport" is too common a name for an aerospace executive in McLean, Va. He's dunned repeatedly by a department store for $100 owed by some phantom namesake.
- Retail mistakes. Once the computer gobbles up data, it's locked there forever—right or wrong. Last May, Richard Boeth, a Newsweek writer, used his Diners' Club card for a plane ticket to London, stipulating that charges be spread over monthly installments. Without fail, his next Diners' bill demanded the entire $300 fare all at once.

Kept on paying

"I began writing letters to find out why," says Boeth. "No answers came. But every time a dunning notice arrived, I wrote to the name signed at the bottom. Finally I got a form letter signed "M. Sandone" explaining that my inquiry was being investigated. All this time I was paying my regular Diners' charges on schedule, plus $25 a month on the plane ticket.

"I never heard from M. Sandone again. Instead, in late January I got a letter from a lawyer. It threatened that 'legal proceedings will be instituted immediately' unless I paid the full balance by return mail.

"I called the lawyer and asked if he knew of my correspondence with M. Sandone. No, he said. The threatening letters go out automatically when he gets a case, and he never investigates reasons for late payment. But he did promise to look into my situation.

"In late February a telegram arrived from the lawyer threatening legal action. All that mattered, he said, was that Diners' had recorded the ticket as calling for immediate payment. Its only concern now was getting its money. Since I had hit an obvious dead end, I sent a check the same day for the full balance.

"At this point I had only one request," Mr. Boeth says. "I called the lawyer and asked if Diners' would notify the local credit bureau that the late payment was not my fault. This time the lawyer got nasty. There would be no such explanation at all, he said. The credit bureau would be told that the bill had been 'cleared up' eight months late and could draw its own conclusions."

For argument's sake, suppose that just maybe Mr. Boeth didn't make it clear he wanted monthly installments. Customers, after all, make mistakes, too. But right or wrong, they all find it outrageously inexcusable when their letters of inquiry go unanswered. Nor are they pacified by replies like the one a PARADE writer got from American Express after he'd written about a billing error. YOUR COMMUNICATION ACKNOWLEDGED, said the computer message. PLEASE PAY DISPUTED AMOUNT.

Once a customer is lucky enough to contact a real human, the experience can be as frustrating as arguing with a computer. Nobody seems to be in charge. In July, 1968, a public official in Jersey City, N.J., had his pocket picked —including his Diners' card. He notified Diners' at once, and it promised that retailers had received notice to stop honoring the stolen card.

Credit in danger

But soon Diners' began sending the official bills—obviously run up on a forged signature. "Diners' told me to disregard the charges," he recalls. "Despite this, the bills continued. Finally, I was notified that my card would be discontinued and my credit impaired."

Due to his "public visibility" and fears that credit troubles could be "devastating" to his career, the official send Diners' a check for $500 with instructions that it be placed on deposit as good faith until the snafu is settled. In his words: "They credited this $500 to the original account and opened another account in my name." Meanwhile, the unauthorized charges kept rolling in against the original account—and eroding his $500.

"Each time a Diners' representative answers one of my protests, it's a different person," he adds ruefully. "Despite their solemn promises that I'll be sent an itemized statement and that the account will be adjusted with no liability on my part, they continue to send me bills and threatening letters."

Is there a sure way to get action from the companies? Unfortunately, there are no laws which compel a company to answer its mail, nor any legal time limit by which a complaint must be resolved. As a result, some irate consumers have resorted to "guerrilla warfare." "When I can't get action through a letter, I mutilate the computer billing card and send it back," says a Washington, D.C., man who, ironically, sells computers. "When the computer kicks it out as a reject, some human has to write to me and ask why I committed such a dastardly deed. Then I pounce on him with my problem."

The range of more conventional weapons is rather limited. Here, however, are at least three steps everyone should take:

1. Use Registered mail. The only way to be sure you've reached the "M. Jones" who signed that form letter is to send him back a registered letter. For $1.15 plus postage, the Post Office will send you a receipt showing who signed for your letter—and when.

2. Notify consumer agencies. If you've exhausted your patience trying to reach a computer biller, try sending copies of your correspondence (plus a one-page summary of what happened) to your local or state consumer protection agency—or to the President's Committee on Consumer Interests in Washington, D.C. The latter, for example, regularly forwards letters directly to the chief executives of the companies involved. Inquiries on White House stationery invariably trigger prompt responses to the aggrieved consumer—often from the company president.

Infernal machines: Computers line up for action. They grind out bills with inhuman efficiency, but are unable to rectify even simple mistakes.

3. Write your Congressman. Chances are he can't solve your immediate problem. Your letter, however, will add to the swell of mail from the grassroots demanding that something be done to make computerized billing more responsive and responsible.

Citizens' complaints are already having an effect. A few weeks ago the Senate passed a bill to ban the mailing of unsolicited credit cards and limit the owner's liability for unauthorized use to $50. In addition, both houses of Congress appear ready to enact long-pending legislation to protect the public against erroneous or malicious data reported by credit rating bureaus.

A heart transplant?

While both of the above measures will help, they admittedly don't strike the heart of computer billing problems —the failure of companies to communicate with customers. Congressman Cornelius Gallagher, however, thinks he has the solution. Throughout his six terms the New Jersey Democrat has waged a crusade to, in his words, "transplant a human heart and a human brain into computer applications."

His weapons are two bills. One states that any creditor who reports an account to a credit bureau as delinquent when the amount due is under protest can be fined $5000 and jailed for a year. The second bill provides that once a creditor receives a written complaint, he has just 60 days to correct the error or furnish a detailed account of why the customer is wrong. If he fails to respond within that period, he forfeits "any right to collect" the amount in dispute.

But both Gallagher bills are a long way from passage. Pressures are great from the credit industry lobby to keep things the way they are. Until enough legislators are persuaded by enough constituent letters to change the law, computers will probably go on cranking out penalty charges and dunning letters with the same programmed precision that guides astronauts to the moon and back.

Human touch

Maybe the least customers might expect is a little more warmth in the computerized form letter. Recently, for example, the Clifton Springs (N.Y.) Hospital sent area residents a letter announcing a switch from manual to computerized billing. It read as follows:

"This statement was automatically produced by our new computer, untouched by human hands. . . .

"If it runs true to form, it undoubtedly will be wrong.

"If it is, please tell us.

"Please don't get mad, get mad, get mad, get mad. . . .

"In case of error, do not contact our computer! Instead, please write to our Mr. . . . . .

"THANK YOU. THANK YOU. THANK YOU. THANK YOU. THANK YOU. THANK YOU."

EDITED by LLOYD SHEARER

YOUNG DRIVERS

Why are our young car drivers so dangerous? Why are 40 percent of our 10,700,000 licensed teenage motorists annually involved in traffic crashes? Certainly they generally have keener vision, quicker reflexes and better coordination than adults. And a great many of them have the advantage of high school driver education. Yet they continue to be a menace on the roads--nearly one-third of the 56,400 persons who died in car crashes in 1969 were between 15 and 24.

Recent studies in Michigan have come up with some interesting new explanations and sidelights on the sorry performance of our young drivers. A three-year survey of 8100 licensed male drivers aged 18 to 20 found that "good" or "bad" driving often runs in the family. That a young male driver is influenced more by his home life--especially through his father--than by driver education, police warnings or court convictions.

"Fathers with numerous traffic convictions tend to have sons with numerous convictions," say the two men who made the survey--David Klein, a professor of social science at Michigan State University, and William L. Carlson, of the Highway Safety Research Institute at the University of Michigan. "Fathers with no convictions tend to have sons with no convictions."

Another finding: accident-prone youths frequently were "in trouble" elsewhere, for delinquency in school work or as drinkers. They had twice as many brushes with the law for non-traffic offenses as their conviction-free classmates.

Do broken homes contribute to "bad" driving? The Klein-Carlson survey found that sons of such households tend to have more violations than others. The peculiarity of "status" in the U.S. also was found to be a factor. "American culture," says Klein, "has always admired, prized and rewarded risk-taking. The soldier, explorer, aviator and today the astronaut are popular heroes because of the risks they take. A boy of 10 may try to impress people by riding his bike with no hands. As a teenager he may drive his car with no hands or seek admiration by passing on a blind curve. He forgets that to be admirable, risk-taking must be useful."

MINI RADIO STATIONS

The "underground" newspapers appearing on campuses and in cities throughout the nation may soon be joined by a new, more powerful medium: Carrier Current Radio. Used largely by college stations until now, carrier radio is moving off the campuses and into communities, primarily minority and low-income areas.

Unlike commercial broadcasting, carrier radio transmits locally via a network of conductors, the same electric power lines that can light a lamp.

Since they do not use the air waves, these mini-stations can be established without licensing by the Federal Communications Commission. But, even though in most cases the deployment of carrier radio might be in the best interests of the community, the possibility of misuse for propaganda purposes will have to be faced by the FCC.

THE WIDOW'S SEX NOVEL

Ever hear of Bengta Bischoff? Probably not. She is the Jacqueline Susann of West Germany, the literary lion of the hour, author of a best-selling novel, Yellow House on the Pinnasberg.

The novel is a shocker, dealing with a male brothel where women pay well-built young men for services they cannot obtain at home.

Bengta Bischoff--real name Hildegard Bischoff--is at 62 the sweet, soft-spoken widow of a Hamburg sea captain.

For years she lived in St. Pauli on Hamburg's Bernhardt Nocht Strasse, surrounded by the ladies of the street, watching the men who trailed the girls back to their quarters. One evening she asked herself why women were not allowed the same conveniences for their pleasure?

AUTHOR BENGTA BISCHOFF

This was the starting point of Yellow House on the Pinnasberg, which is currently selling thousands of copies per week, has, of course, been bought for films, and is responsible for turning the shy little widow into a celebrity, recently described by The Stuttgarter Zeitung as "the greatest naive writer in contemporary literature."

WASHINGTON CROSSES AGAIN

Probably the best-known of all American paintings is "Washington Crossing the Delaware" by Emanuel Gottlieb Leutze. But despite its fame, most critics have a low opinion of its quality as art, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art, which owns it, has for years let it out "on indefinite loan" to the Washington Crossing State Park Commission in New Hope, Pa., near the site of the actual crossing.

Now Leutze's painting is temporarily back in a place of honor at the Metropolitan, as a feature of the museum's 100th birthday exhibition. The painting, completed in 1851 by the German-American artist, is one of the largest works in the centennial show, measuring 21 feet by 12½ feet. Occupying practically a whole wall, it's attracting big crowds. But the art critics couldn't care less, with one leading newspaper describing the painting the day after the show opened as "pictorial rubbish." Comments a museum spokesman: "It's not exactly one of our treasures, but it's great fun to show."

Can a Young Bride Cope With Dr. Christiaan Barnard?

by Lloyd Shearer

Dr. Christiaan Barnard and his new bride, Barbara: He's 47 and gets around, she's 19 and the quiet type. So naturally people are wondering how it's going to turn out.

Three and a half months ago, Barbara Zoellner, a beautiful, well-turned 19-year-old Johannesburg debutante, was married to the divorced, internationally famous heart surgeon, Dr. Christiaan Barnard, 47.

The secret ceremony was performed at exactly ten minutes past midnight in "Three Fountains," the bride's luxurious residence in Inanda, a suburb of Johannesburg.

The bride's father is Frederick Albert Zoellner, a multimillionaire steel and oil magnate who so abhors publicity that he hired a dozen German shepherds to keep photographers away from his property.

On the night of his daughter's wedding, however, Frederick Zoellner permitted 150 newsmen to gather outside the wooden gates of his estate.

When the wedding ceremony, performed by Owen Gush, the Chief Magistrate of Johannesburg, was finished and the radiant couple were congratulated by John Schlesinger, the South African millionaire; Tom Muller, the managing director of General Mining, and a flock of other dignitaries, Dr. Barnard whispered to his bride, "We really must go outside and greet the press."

At 1 a.m., the newlyweds walked hand in hand to the front gate where Dr. Barnard said:

"Barbara and I are sorry to have kept you all waiting. This is not because we don't like you. The press has meant a lot to me. It has been responsible for a lot of the fame I've achieved and for bringing to the public the progress of science . . .

"The wedding was kept private because we wanted it that way for a number of reasons which I cannot disclose . . . After our honeymoon we will return to South Africa and settle in the most beautiful city in the country — Cape Town . . . Barbara will practice her religion, which is Roman Catholic, and I will retain mine, which is Protestant.

"Barbara did not want to marry on Friday, the 13th. That is why we married this morning.

"I have invited all of you to join us in a champagne toast, because you are our friends, and I want you to share this happy occasion with us . . .

"I have known Barbara for nine months but I have loved her ever since I heard her name."

The bride, 5 feet 9, dressed in a full-length polo-necked wedding dress of white satin, said relatively little, except to reveal that Dr. Barnard had given her a brooch as a wedding present, and she had given him a painting of herself by Lussan Robert, an American artist.

Flattery for press

As the early-morning press conference flickered out, with Barnard outrageously flattering the press—"I know you journalists will help me in my work"—one reporter, studying the young, bewildered bride, nudged a colleague and muttered, "How long will Barbara be able to handle Dr. Wonderboy?"

Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the ambitious, driving son of a poor provincial Afrikaner clergyman, is no easy man to manage.

A romantic who relishes headlines, he is by all accounts no tractable, housebroken husband, no sedate, pillar-of-the-community type of physician.

Ever since he became an overnight celebrity by virtue of his first heart transplant in December, 1967, he has resided in the public prints. No physician of the past decade has been more widely publicized or lionized.

In the past two years the boyish-looking surgeon has visited Lyndon Johnson in Texas, the Pope in Rome, Sophia Loren in her Italian villa, the Shah of Iran in Tehran.

He has dated Yul Brynner's pretty wife, Doris Kleiner; German starlet Uta Levka; Italian film star Gina Lollobrigida, exulting in every minute of it. Reportedly, he has danced and bedroomed his way through Europe.

"Women?" he replied to a question prior to his marriage. "Of course, I'm happy in their company. Why the hell shouldn't I be?"

When asked once what he was doing traveling around the world with Cathy Bildton, a gorgeous young blonde, he smilingly explained that Cathy was his personal public relations representative.

Classmate's comment

One physician, who was a classmate of Barnard at the University of Minnesota Medical School, says, "Chris reminds me of a little boy who all his life has dreamed of having a lollipop, then wakes up one morning to find himself in a tub of them. Naturally, he kicks over the traces."

Developing into the so-called "Physician-Playboy of the Western World" has not been without some rough sailing for Barnard.

Two years ago, according to Gina Lollobrigida, the handsome medico fell madly in love with her, said he wanted to marry her.

Quote from Gina

"He came," she explains, "insisting on meeting the actress he had always admired on the screen. He heaped orchids and roses on me, and I fell in love with him. . . . His interest was not only in Gina the actress but in Gina the woman. I did not mind too much because I was convinced he was a good and simple man, but I soon realized that all he really wanted was publicity. After that my feelings for him changed."

Louwtjie Barnard, the physician's former wife, an ex-nurse and the mother of his two children, offers a different version of the affair in a South African magazine article which she wrote to refute Barnard's revelations of their private life in his recently published autobiography, One Life.

The first Mrs. Barnard wrote that in March, 1968, three months after her spouse had successfully operated on Dr. Philip Blaiberg, she discovered love letters from Gina Lollobrigida in her husband's wallet.

There were two of them, both ungrammatical, because Lolo's English is none too good.

One letter, from which Louwtjie Barnard quoted, includes this unforgettable passage:

"Tell me that you will come, that you think to me, that you don't forget me and I will wait. But don't let me wait too long, please. How are you. Think of yourself. More than the world I need you . . . With all my love. Gina"

On May 23, 1969, Aletta Gertruida Louw Barnard (Afrikaans nickname—Louwtjie) instituted divorce proceedings against her husband of 20 years, Dr. Christiaan Neethling Barnard. Neither journalists nor Dr. Barnard appeared at the hearing quietly held in Pretoria.

Her testimony

Mrs. Barnard testified simply that her husband had left her and refused to return. She said nothing about Fritz Zoellner's daughter, Barbara, her beautiful young rival.

Two months later the South African court ruled the marriage dissolved and granted Louwtjie a divorce and custody of the children on grounds of malicious desertion. It ordered Dr. Barnard to pay 300 rands ($420) per month in alimony, to pay for the education of his son Andre, 15, and his daughter Deirdre, 19, and to transfer into their names the ownership of a house his father-in-law had originally bought for him and Louwtjie near Cape Town. When the divorce was granted in July, Dr. Chris Barnard was 3000 miles away, gay and carefree, swimming off the Mediterranean isle of Ischia with his 19-year-old fiancée.

When he returned to South Africa his children asked him if there was anything between him and Barbara Zoellner. Dr. Barnard hedged his answer, but the children quickly perceived the truth. Their mother, Louwtjie Barnard, was understandably bitter. She had first met

His daughter, Deirdre, is a water ski champion and same age as Barbara.

Chris Barnard in 1943 when he was a small-town country bumpkin in medical school and she was a nurse at Groote Schuur Hospital in Cape Town. It was she who taught him table manners, how to dress, how to comport himself on formal occasions. It was she who nursed his mother for five years. It was she who supported the family by working in a Cape Town store so that Barnard could study medicine at the University of Minnesota under the famous Dr. Owen Wangensteen. It was she who was largely responsible for his success.

Down the scale

In the early years of their marriage she had struggled with him to establish his medical practice, and now she felt like a worn, discarded towel.

Daughter of a well-to-do farmer, niece of South Africa's former Foreign Minister Eric Louw, she had married down the social scale, and two decades later, Barnard had traded her in for a younger model. Her anger was boundless.

How did Chris Barnard first meet his present wife, Barbara? It happened in 1968 when her father was being treated in Cape Town by a physician-friend of Barnard's. The friend introduced Barnard to the millionaire industrialist and Fritz Zoellner invited Barnard to visit him at his home in Johannesburg. Dr. Barnard accepted the invitation, visited the Zoellners without his wife, and thereupon met Barbara Zoellner. Despite their age differential of 28 years, it was mutual infatuation at first sight.

In One Life, which for the most part was written by Curtis Pepper, former Rome bureau chief for Newsweek magazine, Dr. Barnard says not one word about Barbara Zoellner. He should have maintained the same guarded silence about his first wife.

There are many indications in the book that he found his wife a shrew many years ago and fell out of love with her.

Hits back

His version of her behavior is apparently what aroused Louwtjie Barnard's ire. That's why she has retaliated in print, describing her husband as an ungrateful, selfish philanderer.

Whether Barbara can keep her colorful globe-trotting husband in tow is a source of much pro and con in Cape Town. A quiet, well-bred young woman, she certainly has her work cut out for her, although many of the nurses at the Groote Schuur Hospital where Barnard practices feel strongly that Dr. Barnard's playboy days are a thing of the past.

As for the good doctor, he insists that the controversial heart transplant operation has a bright future. "At this stage of medicine," he points out, "the transplant is not designed to give sick people a normal or a full life but to relieve their suffering, which is after all the duty of a doctor. Once science develops a serum which can prevent the body's rejection of transplanted organs—and I don't believe this is too far away—then transplant operations will become commonplace."

"Commonplace" may well describe the tomorrow of transplants, but it will never describe the youthful, zestful South African surgeon who helped pioneer them.

At 47, the irrepressible newlywed, Dr. Christiaan Barnard, is anything but.

He wanted to marry her, says Gina, shown with Barnard when it was love in bloom. Actress claims she later found "all he really wanted was publicity."

A Fondue for Easy Entertaining

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

■ For light summer entertaining on your porch or terrace, get out your fondue pot and set it bubbling with this wonderful Emmentaler cheese concoction. Most of the work can be done ahead and the fondue fixin's carried to your party table. After dipping and feasting serve a crisp green salad and fruit.

Cheese Fondue*

1½ pounds Emmentaler, shredded
4 tablespoons flour
3 cups dry white wine
2 garlic cloves, peeled and split
½ teaspoon salt
Pinch white pepper
Dash nutmeg
2 tablespoons kirsch, brandy or cognac
Bite-size pieces of French bread

Dredge cheese with flour. Set wine over low heat. When air bubbles rise to surface (never let wine reach the boiling point) stir with silver fork. Add cheese little by little; keep stirring. Be sure each lot is melted before adding more. Keep stirring until mixture is bubbling lightly. Set a round earthenware 2-quart casserole on heating unit. Rub bottom and sides with garlic cloves. Add seasonings and kirsch to cheese mixture; blend well; pour into casserole. Spear bread on fondue forks, securing points of fork in crust. Dunk with stirring motion. Keep mixture bubbling lightly. Keep stirring as bread is speared and dunked. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

My Favorite Jokes

by Larry Blyden

EDITOR'S NOTE: Larry Blyden, bespectacled host of the TV fun show, The Movie Game, is a native of Texas who arrived in New York about the time television drama was beginning. Following major roles on Philco Playhouse, Studio One and Kraft Theater, he appeared on Broadway in Mr. Roberts. Blyden's theater career also includes roles in Wish You Were Here, Oh, Men! Oh, Women!, Blues for Mr. Charlie, Foxy with Bert Lahr, and most recently The Apple Tree.

Larry is remembered for his highly lauded portrayal of Sammy Glick in the TV production of What Makes Sammy Run? and as the song and dance man, Harry Burns, in the NBC-TV series Harry's Girls. He recently completed host duties on the popular daytime TV show, Personality.

A versatile man, Blyden directed the Shari Lewis TV series, and has appeared in the films, Kiss Them for Me and Bachelor Party. Larry resides in New York and commutes to Hollywood where The Movie Game is produced. Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

The plumber dropped a "snake" down the drain, was through in less than half an hour and presented the housewife with a bill for $23. "Good heavens," she exclaimed, "our doctor made a house call last night and he only charged $8!"

"I know, lady," said the plumber. "I used to be a doctor."

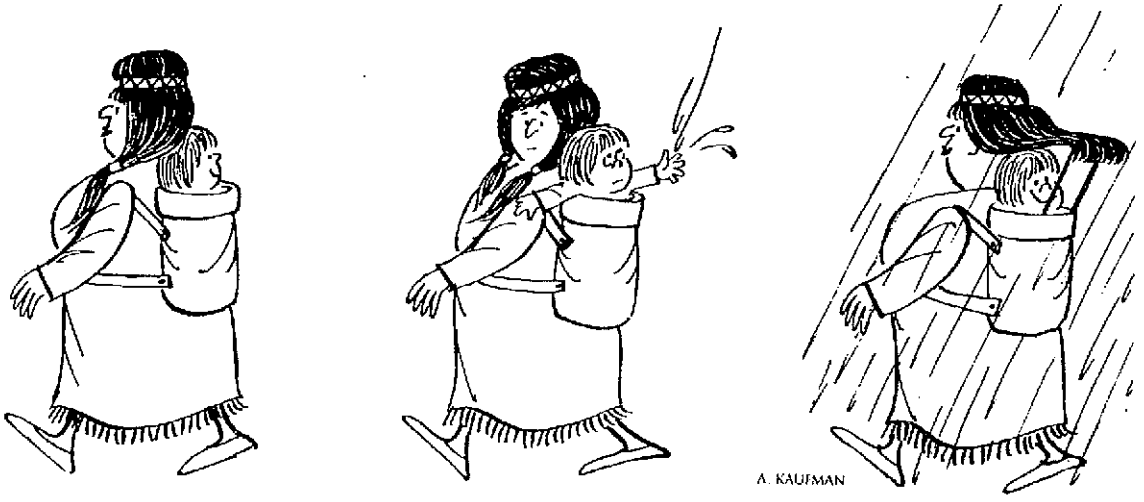

A little boy who had a bad habit of gorging himself between meals was out walking with his mother one day when he spotted a man with a huge stomach. "I sure don't want to be like that," he said. "I couldn't play ball or anything." "Well," said his mother, "if you don't stop eating between meals, the same thing will happen to you!" At their next stop, a department store, they ran right into a woman who was in her eighth month of pregnancy. The little boy looked at her and started to smile. The lady asked him, "Do you know me?" "No," said the little boy, "but I sure know you've been eating too much."

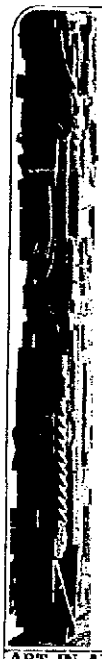

I have a next-door neighbor who relates everything to her own household. We were discussing space explorations and her attitude was reflected in this little nugget: "I don't know why they want to find out whether there is life on Mars. I'm positive there is no one up there. It hasn't shown up on my daughter's phone bill."

A hard-working nurse finally took a vacation and went on a cruise. She noted in her diary the first day out that the captain was a very handsome figure of a man. On the second day, the entry read: "The captain has asked me to his table." On the third day, she wrote that she visited the bridge with the officer. The following day, she wrote, "He is an ardent and passionate man, given to fearsome outbursts. He threatened to blow up the ship and sink all 650 passengers if I didn't let him kiss me." The following day, the young nurse wrote: "I have just saved 650 lives!"

Science has performed wonders and not the least of its accomplishments is the fact that people are living much longer on the average than in the past. Not only longer, but healthier and more youthful for many more years. Women who were put out to pasture by middle age and who literally sagged, are now almost duplicates of their daughters. They stay in shape, they use cosmetics wisely, and they keep their hair from showing signs of their maturity. A friend of mine thought a lot about that one evening at my home and he sighed: "Do you realize what we are doing? We are raising a whole generation of children who believe that when women grow older, they turn blonde!"
